PREFACE

THE aim of the present volume is to assist an ordinary educated reader to read the Book of Jeremiah intelligently, and to understand the gist and scope of its different parts. For this purpose I have given a revised translation of the Book, in the general style of the Authorized Version, as clear and exact as English idiom would permit; the text has been divided into paragraphs, with headings prefixed to each, summarizing the argument or narrative which follows; and a minimum of short notes has been added sometimes illustrating from other passages the terms used, more frequently explaining briefly historical or other allusions, difficult passages (so far as this was possible), technical expressions, and other things not likely to be familiar to any but special students. It is from being unacquainted with things such as these, that the writings of the prophets are, it is to be feared, found by many readers to be frequently difficult to understand, and consequently unattractive. A few words are, however, often all that is required to remove the obscurity, and render them intelligible. It is especially of importance, if the prophets' writings are to be properly understood, that attention should be paid to the history and circumstances of the age which gave them birth. For the prophets, however far they rose above the mass of their contemporaries in spirituality and moral force, were essentially, one and all, the children of their time: they spoke out of, and to, the circumstances of their own time; it was the aim of their life to guide, to reform, or to encourage, as the case might be, their countrymen among whom they lived; and their writings reflect throughout the impression which the movements and circumstances of their own age made upon them. I have accordingly made it my endeavour to acquaint the reader, at least in outline, with the history and circumstances of Jeremiah's age; and to help him to understand, wherever this was possible, the bearing of his various prophecies upon the events or circumstances which called them forth. Although, however, the volume is intended primarily for readers unacquainted with Hebrew, I have not been forgetful of the needs of Hebrew students; and both the translation, and also the explanatory notes upon some of the renderings at the end of the volume, will, I hope, be found interesting and useful by them. A detailed discussion of exegetical or other difficulties (except in so far as some of them form the subject of the notes just referred to), as also of the deeper literary problems presented by the Book of Jeremiah, I have considered to lie beyond the scope of the present volume.<sup>a</sup>

INTRODUCTION

§ 1. Aim and plan of the present translation.

AN ideal translation of the Bible should possess, I suppose, four leading characteristics: it should be idiomatic, dignified, accurate, and clear. There are English versions of the Old Testament which possess undeniably the first two of these characteristics: there is none, unhappily (except for particular books), which possesses, as completely as it should do, the last two. Hence, unquestionable as is the superiority of the Revised Version to the Authorized Version, and greatly as it is to be desired that it may before long come generally to supersede it in the public services of the Church, there still seems room for a version which, even though made by a private hand, may nevertheless reproduce, more exactly than was found possible in the Revised Version, but at the same time without doing any violence to the English language, and in the same general literary style with which English Bible-readers have long been familiar, the meaning and force of the original. In such a version, the first two characteristics mentioned above, idiom and dignity, would be naturally secured by adhering as closely as possible to the language of the Authorized Version ; in fact, this would be deviated from only when it was necessary in the interests of the third and fourth of the same characteristics, accuracy and clearness. By accuracy, I mean the representation of the force of the original as faithfully as grammar, and philology, and the study of the same word as it occurs in other passages, enable us to ascertain it, but without any such attempt to reproduce grammatical or lexical minutiae as would result in unnatural English, or amount to pedantry. By clearness, I mean consistency and intelligibility in the sequence of tenses, the avoidance of ambiguous expressions, and especially the avoidance of words which, however familiar in the seventeenth century, are now either unknown, or have so changed their meaning as to be by the great majority of readers misunderstood.<sup>a</sup> The Bible, it is surely not a paradox to hold, should be accessible to English readers in a translation—not indeed ‘modernized’ (in the sense in which this term is commonly understood), but—clear and accurate, and free from needless and misleading archaisms.<sup>a</sup> In the present volume an endeavour has been made to produce a translation of the Book of Jeremiah which may possess the four literary characteristics which have been thus indicated.

A mere translation of a Biblical book, however, be it ever so exact, is not sufficient. Passages not unfrequently occur, especially in the poetical and prophetic books, which, sometimes from the nature of the allusions contained in them, sometimes from abrupt changes in the speakers, or in the line of thought, and sometimes also from other causes, an average reader finds it difficult to understand. It appears to me, it is true, that a plain and clear rendering of the Hebrew does much in many cases to alleviate this difficulty. At the same time, there remain undoubtedly passages where it does not remove it entirely; and where, for instance, brief headings, indicating the line of thought in the following paragraph, the use of inverted commas showing where words spoken begin and end, and a minimum of explanatory notes, referring to parallel passages, or otherwise explaining allusions, the sense of which is not fairly apparent, would be of great assistance to the reader. In the present volume, I have accordingly added helps of this kind. Inverted commas are the more necessary—and indeed, if the poetical parts of the Old Testament are to be properly understood, almost indispensable—on account of the practice of Hebrew poets to place words, in a manner unfamiliar to English readers, in the mouth of a speaker or speakers not expressly named; and I have accordingly employed them regularly, except in the one constantly recurring case of words spoken by Yahweh to the prophet, in which they did not appear to me to be required.

<sup>a</sup> The right principle for dealing with archaisms was surely laid down once for all by the late Bp. Lightfoot, in his admirable Essay on a Fresh Revision of the English New Testament (1872), p. 171: 'So long as an archaism is intelligible, let it by all means be retained. If it is misleading, or ambiguous, or inarticulate, the time for removing it has come' (comp. the illustrations, pp. 119 f., 170-9).

In other respects, the following are the main principles of translation which I have adopted. Italics have been used, not as they are used in AV., RV., to represent words not in the original, but, as in ordinary English books, for the sake of emphasis—especially to mark pronouns, the emphasis on which is sometimes important, though it would rarely be suspected, without some such mechanical help, by an English reader.<sup>a</sup> Words not in the original are enclosed in <sup>a</sup> Italics have not however been used where the pron. is sufficiently emphasized by its position before a stop, as iv. 22 ('me'), v. 4, xii. 3 ('thou'), or unusual place, as xv. 6 ('me'), xxx. 14 ('thee').

The emphasis on pronouns is indicated in Hebrew sometimes by their being expressed separately (as Jer. iii. 19, xxvii. 5, xxxvi. 29), sometimes by their position (as Jer. iv. 17, v. 22, xxx. 14, Isa. lvii. 11). In general, however, attention should always be paid to the order of words in a Hebrew sentence. The order cannot always be reproduced in English (for what is easy and idiomatic in one language may be stiff and unnatural in another), but in the Hebrew expression and emphasis are conveyed by it; and where, by means consistent with English idiom, it is possible to express the effect in a translation, it is worth while making an endeavour to do so.

parentheses, except where the words in question are added merely for the sake of English usage, and where, therefore, marks of parenthesis appeared to me to be a needless disfigurement of the text.<sup>a</sup> Inversions of order (as the object before a verb) have been employed, in agreement with the Hebrew, somewhat more freely than in the Authorized Version; they are justified by the usage of King James' translators, and appear to me not only to be needed sometimes to give a word its proper emphasis,<sup>b</sup> but also to impart freshness and variety, not less than a certain dignity of movement, to the style. Archaisms not likely to be understood I have naturally eschewed, except in a few cases in which, with an explanatory note, their retention seemed free from objection.<sup>c</sup> Care has been taken to avoid renderings which, whatever their other merits, did not seem to me to be consonant with English usage, or to read naturally and smoothly. Thus no attempt has been made to reproduce needlessly literal renderings of <sup>a</sup> I have, in particular, dispensed with them in the case of 'even,' used often to introduce a word or words in apposition, in a sentence which would otherwise in our idiom read baldly (see e.g. viii. 17, xxxvi. 12). So 'to wit,' xxv. 18, 'namely,' xxvi. 22. Occasionally also an 'and' not in the Heb. has been treated similarly (as xvii. 10, xx. 11). In explanatory additions, however, I have thought it better to employ the parentheses as xxv. 30 'tread (the grapes)', xxv. 31 'the din (of battle)', xxx. 21 '(else)'.

The same marks are, naturally, also used to indicate what is a real parenthesis in the Hebrew (as xxix. 2); but the cases are so different that I do not think any reader can confuse them.

the Hebrew : where it seemed desirable for any reason to state it, the literal meaning of the Hebrew has been appended in a footnote. Only one idiom, the use of the participle, especially with ' behold,' of an event in process of being brought about, used in particular of the imminent future (or of the future conceived and pictured as imminent), is so frequent that to have never reproduced it would have been to obliterate a mode of thought characteristic of Hebrew prophecy. I have accordingly expressed it, where possible, by the English participle (as v. 15) ; but I found that this could not be done uniformly, as there were many passages in which the participle did not read well. Modernisms, whether of style or expression, have been sedulously excluded : they are quite unnecessary, in a translation of the Bible, for the sake of securing either clearness or intelligibility. A word not in use in 1611 may occasionally have to be employed ; but it need not necessarily be one with a modern flavour : something depends upon the character and associations of the word. Words which are at all of a technical character, if misunderstanding and confusion are to be avoided, should be represented consistently by the same English equivalent ;<sup>a</sup> in passages where idiom or usage did not readily permit this, the usual English equivalent has been given in a footnote (as x. 8). The Tetragrammaton, being a personal name, is not properly represented by 'the LORD': as the common vocalization 'Jehovah' is philologically indefensible—besides being unknown before A.D. 1518 (or thereabouts), so that it cannot even claim antiquity in its favour—the vocalization 'Yahweh,' now usual among scholars, has been employed. There is no reason for supposing that either Jeremiah or his contemporaries expressed the sacred name by a paraphrase; and if its ancient pronunciation was not actually 'Yahweh,' it must have been something extremely like it.<sup>a</sup> Hebrew words have been cited occasionally in the footnotes (usually for the purpose of showing the slightness of a textual change suggested), but not, it is hoped, in a way that will interrupt or perplex a reader. In difficult and uncertain passages, upon the interpretation of which different views may reasonably be held, it seems to me proper to give the alternative rendering on the margin: on the other hand, alternative renderings, which possess only an antiquarian interest, I have excluded as unnecessary, and likely only to involve a reader in uncertainty.

The Book of Jeremiah contains examples of more than one style of literary composition. It contains narratives written in ordinary prose (as ch. xxxvi.), prophetic discourses written in an elevated, oratorical prose, resembling generally the discourses of Deuteronomy (as most of ch. vii., ch. xix., xx. 4-6, xxi. 4-10, etc.), and also passages written—as, in fact, the discourses of the prophets were most commonly written—in a style approximating more or less to the rhythmical form of Hebrew poetry, in lines more or less parallel in thought, and similar in articulation and length. The lines separating passages written in the second and third of these styles are not always clearly marked: the elevated prophetic oratory often falls into clauses parallel in thought, and sometimes, as the emotion becomes stronger, rises into the distinctive rhythmical movement of poetry. Under these circumstances, I have naturally had to consider the question how far the poetical form of the original should be represented in the translation. The tendency of Jeremiah to cast his prophecies into the rhythmical forms of Hebrew poetry is, of course, patent and undeniable: nevertheless, inasmuch as the form is seldom as complete as in the distinctively poetical parts of the Old Testament (Psalms, Job, Proverbs; Gen. xlix., Deut. xxxii., etc.), or as capable of being represented satisfactorily in English, and moreover can often only be made complete by alterations of the text which I was not prepared to introduce, I decided to make no attempt to do this, except in a few very clear cases, where the rhythmical measure was particularly apparent, and where it did appear to be an advantage to have the poetical structure of the passage exhibited typographically. In other cases I have trusted to the semi-poetical form or character of a passage, and to the feeling which finds expression in it by the repetition of a thought in parallel clauses, being sufficiently apparent to the reader without further assistance. It also seems to me that to break up the text of Jeremiah too freely into parallel lines, by unduly interrupting the continuous flow which is characteristic of his prophecies—as indeed of the prophets' oratory in general—somewhat alters the effect which the whole is intended to produce.

On the manner in which, in ordinary cases, the lines of the original are represented in the translation, nothing need be said. But a word of explanation may be needed with reference to the form adopted in ii. 2, 3, 15, vii. 29, ix. 21, 22, xiii. 18, 19, xxii. 6, 7, xlvi. 17–19. In ordinary Hebrew poetry, the second line of a distich is usually of approximately the same length as the first, and consequently balances it; it also, as a rule, reinforces the first, whether by way of synonymous parallelism, as—

Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron ;
Thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel ; or by way of contrast ('antithetic parallelism'), as—

A false balance is Yahweh's abomination,
But a just weight is his delight ;

or by way of supplement ('synthetic parallelism'), as—

When God arose to judgement,
To save all the meek of the earth ;

but in the passages quoted, the second line in the Hebrew—and often, though not always, in the English as well—does not balance the first, but is decidedly shorter; and instead of reinforcing the first, is neither parallel, nor antithetic, to it in thought: it echoes it conjecture, are positions now so generally accepted by scholars, that there is no occasion to support them here by further argument. It need only perhaps be remarked, for the information of unlearned readers, that the Hebrew characters, especially in ancient times, when they were written without the so-called matres lectionis, when the divisions between words were often indistinctly marked, and when there were no vowel-points to fix the meaning of individual words, were particularly liable to corruption or confusion.<sup>a</sup> In the application of these principles there is indeed, and probably always will be, differences of opinion: scholars approach the problem from different points of view, and with different prepossessions, and cannot therefore be expected to agree uniformly in their results: the principle which, I venture to think, will most generally commend itself is that of giving the Hebrew text the general preference, and of deviating

The oldest dated Hebrew MS. of any part of the O.T. dates from A.D. 916; and most of the MSS. used by the translators of the Septuagint must have been at least 1100 years older.

<sup>a</sup> The ancient Versions, especially the Septuagint, furnish abundant examples of various readings arising from the causes indicated. The MSS. used for them seem indeed to have been often either badly written themselves, or imperfectly read, or understood, by the translators; and hence most of the various readings presupposed by them are inferior to those of the existing Hebrew text. At the same time, in a considerable minority of instances they are unquestionably better, and give a passage the sense or lucidity which it previously lacked. MSS., in other respects apparently imperfect, thus preserved good readings. Among the ancient Versions the Septuagint differs most from the existing Hebrew text, the Targums deviate from it least.

from it only where the grounds are cogent, and the advantage gained is unmistakable and clear. In the translation which follows, where the reading adopted implies any deviation from the Massoretic text, the reader has always been apprised of the fact: some readings of the Versions, which, though worthy of note, and very possibly original, I nevertheless, for one reason or another, hesitated to take definitely into the text, I have mentioned in the footnotes. It ought only perhaps to be added, to preclude misconception, that the emendations which have been either mentioned or adopted postulate no great or improbable textual changes: the time does not seem to me to be at present ripe for accepting the more considerable and numerous alterations proposed now by some scholars with the object of restoring the poetical parts of Jeremiah (as of other prophets) to their presumed original metrical uniformity.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>a</sup> We do not know that the Hebrew poets always adopted lines which in the same context were of perfect metrical or rhythmical uniformity: it is an assumption, which the text of the O.T., as it stands, contradicts. If lines of such metrical or rhythmical uniformity in most cases already existed, and in other cases could be obtained by merely slight textual changes, the assumption would no doubt be a probable one: but when the desired uniformity can be obtained only by frequent, and sometimes extensive, alterations and excisions, the legitimacy of the process becomes questionable. However attractive a succession of metrically uniform lines may be, it deserves consideration, therefore, whether it may not have been felt by the prophets that an approximate metrical uniformity secured sufficiently that rhythmically articulated expression of thought and feeling, which was the essential form of Hebrew poetry.

Those interested in the subject should consult further Budde's

§ 2. Outline of Jeremiah's life and times.

Jeremiah was the prophet of the decline and fall of the kingdom of Judah. He was called to be a prophet in the 13th year of Josiah (B.C. 626); and we lose sight of him in Egypt, whither he was carried against his will, shortly after the fall of Jerusalem (B.C. 586), rather more than forty years afterwards. He was sprung from a little community of priests settled at Anathoth (i. 1; cf. 1 Kings ii. 26), three miles N.N.E. of Jerusalem, where his family owned land (xxxii. 7). It will conduce, perhaps, to clearness, especially as the prophecies and narratives contained in his book are not arranged in chronological order, if his life be divided into periods, and an endeavour made to shew how the prophecies belonging to each are related to the events or circumstance of it.

(1) Of Jeremiah's personal life between 626 and the end of the reign of Josiah (608) no particulars are known: but chapters ii.–vi. (cf. iii. 6), not less than ch. i., no doubt belong to this period (626–c. 620), and exhibit the light in which he then viewed the condition and prospects of his people: the nation is corrupt; no offer of forgiveness moves it; the foe is at the door, and will complete its work. The 18th year of Josiah (B.C. 621), five years after his call, the reader may be reminded, was the memorable year in which the 'Book of the Law,' i.e. Deuteronomy (in its original form), was discovered by Hilkiah in the Temple. The influence of Deuteronomy upon especially some of the later parts of Jeremiah's book is very evident. The year following the discovery of Deuteronomy was marked by Josiah's reformation (2 Kings xxiii.). Perhaps xi. 1-8 may have been written at about this time: but otherwise little or nothing in Jeremiah's book seems to belong to the last twelve years of Josiah's reign. Josiah met his death in 608 at Megiddo, on the S.W. of the Plain of Esdraelon, while vainly endeavouring to oppose Pharaoh Necho's advance into Asia (2 Kings xxiii. 29). Jeremiah makes in passing a pathetic reference to his loss (xxii. 10a); his judgement upon his character may be read in ch. xxii. 15, 16.

(2) Josiah was succeeded on the throne by his second son, Jehoahaz, who, for some reason, was preferred by the people to his elder brother, Jehoiakim.<sup>a</sup> After three months, however, Jehoahaz, no doubt for political reasons, was deposed and exiled by Pharaoh Necho (610-594), who placed upon the throne his elder brother, Jehoiakim, and at the same time imposed a heavy fine upon the land (2 Kings xxiii. 33 RVm., 34). Jeremiah laments Jehoahaz' unhappy fate in ch. xxii. 10-12.

(3) Jehoiakim, Josiah's eldest son, who succeeded Jehoahaz, reigned from 608 to 597. Jehoiakim was a selfish, unscrupulous ruler, who thought more of enlarging his own palace than of justice and the welfare of his subjects (see Jeremiah's judgement upon him, xxii. 13-19), and had no respect for the prophets of Yahweh, or for their words (xxvi. 20-23 ; xxxvi. 23-26). At the beginning of his reign Pharaoh Necho continued his aggressions upon Syria; but in 605, essaying to cross the Euphrates, he was defeated by Nebuchadnezzar, acting as his father Nabopolassar's general, at Carchemish. This defeat gave the final blow to Egyptian ambitions; and assured for the Chaldaeans the supremacy of the West. Politically it was the turning point of the age, and was fraught with important consequences for Israel's future. Jeremiah at once grasped its significance; he saw that Nebuchadnezzar was destined to achieve further successes, and declared emphatically that the whole of Western Asia would fall under his sway (ch. xxv.), implying thereby what he afterwards taught explicitly, that the safety of Judah lay in yielding to the inevitable, and accepting the condition of dependence upon Babylon. Jehoiakim—not apparently immediately, but when called upon to do so (c. 600 B.C.)—submitted to Nebuchadnezzar, and during three years paid tribute: he then revolted (2 Kings xxiv. 1). Babylonian troops, assisted by marauding bands of Syrians, Moabites, and Ammonites, were sent against Judah (ibid. v. 2); but before a regular siege of Jerusalem could be begun, Jehoiakim died.

The reign of Jehoiakim seems to have been for Jeremiah a time of constant conflict and trial. A whole series of narratives and prophecies can, with greater or less probability, be assigned to it, some testifying to the deep emotion which overcame him, as he realized, more and more clearly, how his country was hastening to its doom, others recounting his vain efforts to reform or (vii. 16, xi. 14; and notably in the dialogue, xiv.–xv.) intercede for his people, and others again telling of the experiences—the persecutions (xii. 6, xv. 10, xvii. 15–18, xx. 7–11), the plots against his life (xi. 18–23, xviii. 18), his imprisonment in the stocks (xx. 2), his narrow escapes from death (xxvi. 11, 21, cf. xxxvi. 26)—which his predictions of disaster brought upon him at the hands of his fellow-countrymen. Ch. xxvi.—of which vii. 1–20 seems pretty clearly to be a parallel report—the Temple-discourse, in which the prophet declares that unless the people amend their ways, the Temple, to which they looked for safety, will share the fate of Shiloh—is expressly assigned to the beginning of Jehoiakim's reign: other narratives and prophecies belonging to it are, in all probability, the rest of vii.–x. (except x. 1–16); most of xi.–xx.; xxv., with its supplement xlv. (B.C. 604); the account in ch. xxxvi. of the circumstances under which Jeremiah's prophecies were first committed to writing, and of Jehoiakim's wrath when he heard them read (B.C. 604–3); the prophecies on foreign nations, xlvi.–xlix. 33, reflecting the manner in which Jeremiah pictured Nebuchadnezzar's successes as likely to affect Israel's neighbours; xii. 7–17, from c. 598, when the country was overrun by bands of Syrians, Moabites, and others; and ch. xxxv., describing how, at about the same time (v. 11), Jeremiah pointed a lesson for his countrymen from the example of the Rechabites.

(4) Jehoiakim was succeeded by his son, Jehoiachin, a youth aged eighteen years, in whose government the queen-mother, Neḥushta, to judge from the prominence given to her (Jer. xiii. 18 ; cf. xxii. 36, xxix. 2), seems to have exercised considerable influence. His reign was a brief one. The penalty for Jehoiakim's imprudence fell upon his son : Jerusalem was besieged by Nebuchadnezzar ; and after a three months' reign the king ' went out ' (2 Kings xxiv. 12), i.e. surrendered, to the enemy : he himself, the queen-mother Neḥushta, the principal members of the court, and the élite of Jerusalem generally, were exiled to Babylonia. Seven thousand men of war, 1,000 artisans—besides, presumably, women and children—are mentioned as the number of those who thus went into captivity (2 Kings xxiv. 16). Only ' the poorest of the people ' were left behind. The Temple was at the same time despoiled of many of its golden vessels, and the palace of its treasures. Jehoiachin himself remained in imprisonment in Babylon for thirty-seven years, till released by Nebuchadnezzar's successor, Evil-Merodach (lii. 31-34). The only prophecies of Jeremiah relating to this short reign are apparently, xiii. 18 f. (the lament on the impending exile of the king and people), and xxii. 24-30 (the prophet's judgement on Jehoiachin).

(5) Zedekiah, Josiah's youngest son, and Jehoiachin's uncle, having sworn a solemn oath of allegiance to Nebuchadnezzar (Ezek. xvii. 11-18), was appointed by him king over the Jews still remaining in Jerusalem and Judah. Jeremiah's tone now changes : the prophecies belonging to the reign of Zedekiah display no conflict of feeling ; the prophet no longer intercedes for his people ; he gives Zedekiah no hope ; he is bent solely on inducing the king to submit to the Chaldaeans. As all the leading men were now in exile, there must have been many among those left in Jerusalem who hitherto had occupied a humble station in life, but who now found themselves called on to fill state offices : these in many cases were elated by their new dignities, and proud of the confidence placed in them by Nebuchadnezzar. They treated their brethren in exile with no small contempt, declaring loudly that the 'land was given to them to possess it' (see Ezek. xi. 15, xxxiii. 24) : Jeremiah expressed unambiguously his own very different judgement on both those left in Jerusalem and on the exiles (ch. xxiv.) : like Ezekiel (xi. 16-21, ch. xii., etc.), he gave up the former entirely, and planted his hopes for the future exclusively on the latter. There were many, however, who refused to believe that the exile would last long : some of Judah's neighbours were already meditating schemes of revolt : prophets were active in Judah promising the speedy restoration of the sacred vessels which the Chaldaeans had carried away ; one of them, Hananiah, in Zedekiah's fourth year, asserted confidently that in two years Nebuchadnezzar's yoke would be broken, and Jehoiachin and the other exiles would return : other prophets, in Babylonia, were unsettling the exiles themselves, and leading them to expect a speedy return home (chs. xxvii.-xxix.). To all these Jeremiah gave the same answer : it was Yahweh's purpose to give the Chaldaeans the rule over Western Asia for seventy years ; and till these seventy years were expired, it was useless to think either of any return of exiles, or of the restoration of the sacred vessels. The short prophecy on Elam (xlix. 34-39) is assigned by its title to the beginning of Zedekiah's reign; and the symbolical prediction of the ultimate fall of Babylon (li. 59-64) to his fourth year.

After seven or eight years, however, Zedekiah compromised himself by treasonable negotiations with Pharaoh Hophra; and in his ninth year (B.C. 588) the second siege of Jerusalem by the Chaldaeans began. Zedekiah sends anxiously to inquire of Jeremiah the issue of the siege; he replies unambiguously that the besiegers will prevail; and that the only hope of safety is to submit to the Chaldaeans (xxi. 1-10; cf. xxxiv. 1-7). This advice, though it seemed to many of his fellow-countrymen to be unpatriotic, was not so in reality: it was but the corollary of the position taken by him in 605, when he saw what the rule of the Chaldaeans was likely to be, and realized how hopeless it was to enter into a contest with them. The approach of an Egyptian army, however, obliged the Chaldaeans to raise the siege. The hopes of the Jews were excited: Zedekiah again sends a message of inquiry to Jeremiah: the prophet replies that the Chaldaeans will without doubt return, and take and burn the city (xxxvii. 1-10). Ch. xxxiv. 8-22 describes an incident belonging to the same period. The Jews, when the siege had begun, had solemnly promised to observe the law, and emancipate their Hebrew slaves in the seventh year of their service, but as soon as the siege was raised, had repudiated the obligation: Jeremiah severely rebukes them for their breach of faith, and again emphatically declares that the Chaldaeans will return, and take and burn the city.

During the time that the siege was raised, Jeremiah was one day going out of the north gate of the city to take possession of some property in Benjamin—probably at Anathoth—when he was arrested on a charge of deserting to the Chaldaeans, and thrown into a dungeon in the house of Jonathan, the king's secretary (xxxvii. 11–16). Being sent for by the king, and asked secretly if he has any message from Yahweh, he replies that he has: the city will be delivered into the hands of the Chaldaeans. After this, Zedekiah, at the prophet's own request, orders his removal from the dungeon; and he is placed in honourable confinement in the guard-court, adjoining the royal palace (xxxvii. 17–21). The Chaldaeans seem now to have resumed the siege. Before long, however, some of the princes accuse Jeremiah before Zedekiah of high treason, in encouraging the people to desert to the enemy; and he is cast in consequence into a disused underground cistern, from which he is only rescued by the friendly intervention of Ebed-melech, an Ethiopian eunuch employed in the palace, who obtains the king's permission to draw him up out of the cistern, and confine him, as before, in the guard-court. Zedekiah again consults him—through fear of the princes, secretly; and is again told by him that his only hope of safety is to surrender Jerusalem to the Chaldaeans: if he does not do this, he will himself fall into Nebuchadnezzar's hands, and the city will be burnt. After this Jeremiah remains in the guard-court till the city was taken by the Chaldaeans (xxxviii. 1-28*a*). It was during the period of his confinement in the guard-court, when he knew that the doom of Jerusalem was sealed, that Jeremiah (see xxxii. 2, xxxiii. 1), in the full assurance that his people would eventually be restored, bought the land belonging to his cousin at Anathoth (ch. xxxii.), and uttered the promises of restoration contained in that chapter and in xxxiii. 1-13 (vv. 14-26 are not in the Sept., and may not be Jeremiah's); probably also chs. xxx.-xxxi., including promises addressed to Ephraim, as also the great prophecy of the New Covenant (xxxi. 33 f.), belong to the same period. The judgements on the kings (xxii. 1-xxiii. 8), though parts are evidently earlier (xxii. 10-30), will have been completed (xxiii. 1-6) under Zedekiah: the discourse against the prophets (xxiii. 9-40), also, dates probably from the early or middle part of the same reign.

(6) After the capture of Jerusalem, Jeremiah was favourably treated by the Chaldeans, and permitted to reside where he pleased (xl. 5). Gedaliah, son of his old friend Ahikam (xxvi. 24), being appointed by Nebuchadnezzar governor of Judah, Jeremiah joins him at Mizpah. A number of refugee Jews assembled at the same place, among them one Ishmael, son of Nethaniah, a member of the royal family, an imperious, unscrupulous man, who before long treacherously slew Gedaliah, and then endeavoured to force the other refugees to migrate with him across the Jordan into the territory of the Ammonites. His purpose was defeated by Johanan son of Kareah, who overtook him at Gibeon, and rescued his captives out of his hand. After this,

Johanan and the other refugees, fearing lest the Chaldeans might hold them all responsible for the assassination of Gedaliah, resolved to seek a home in Egypt. Jeremiah did all that he could to dissuade them from carrying out this purpose, but in vain ; they refused to listen to his warnings, and proceeded into Egypt, taking both Jeremiah and Baruch with them. Arrived in Egypt, Jeremiah foretells the future conquest of the country by Nebuchadnezzar (xliii. 8-12) ; and afterwards (ch. xlv.) rebukes the Jews resident in Egypt for their worship of the Queen of heaven, and rejection of Yahweh, and declares that sword and famine will even there overtake them. With this final outlook of disaster we lose sight of the aged prophet. Nothing is known either of the subsequent events of his life, or of the circumstances of his death. The misplaced prophecy, x. 1-16, bidding the Israelites not to stand in dread of the gods of the heathen, and the burst of triumphant exultation over the approaching fall of Babylon in l. 1-li. 58, are, the former probably, and the latter certainly, of later date than Jeremiah's time.

Jeremiah's was a susceptible, deeply emotional nature. The adverse course of events impresses him profoundly ; and he utters without reserve the emotions which in consequence are stirred within him. The burden of his prophecies is Israel's sin,—particularly its disregard of Yahweh, its heedlessness of His moral demands (v. 1 f., vii. 9-11, ix. 2-6, etc.), its idolatry,—and the doom which he sees advancing, with rapid steps, in consequence. Both the sin and the judgement are ever vividly before him ; and are ever, under one aspect or another, being described or alluded to by him. The doom was no judgement unrelated to the sin ; for the mistaken policy which resulted in the ruin of the state was the direct outcome of the same wilfulness and blindness which was the cause of the people's rejecting Yahweh, and shutting their ears to the counsels, moral and political alike, of His prophets. God, when He 'punishes' a people, operates through the laws which naturally regulate the welfare of nations. But love for his country was ever warm in Jeremiah's breast : in his earlier prophecies, he once and again, in pathetic tones of tenderness and affection, entreats his people to change its ways, if so be that the disaster which he sees approaching may be averted (iv. 3 f., 14, vi. 8, vii. 3 ; cf. xxvi. 3, 13, and xxxvi. 3 in the fourth year of Jehoiakim) : through the greater part of two chapters he intercedes on Israel's behalf (xiv. 7-xv. 9) : but it is more and more clearly borne in upon him that its doom is sealed, and that Yahweh will refuse to accept any intercession for it (xiv. 11 [cf. vii. 16, xi. 14], xv. 1 ff. ; xviii. 12). It was the aim of his life to lead his people to better things : but his efforts were in vain ; the more he called to them, the more they turned from him. He was met not only with cold indifference, but often with actual detraction and persecution, including attempts on his life, from those to whom his words were unwelcome (xi. 18-23, etc. : see p. xxx). And so it is that, with his sensitive, highly-strung nature, feeling often overpowers him ; and in his agony and despair he breaks forth into bitter lamentations and complaints, he calls for vengeance on his persecutors, he wishes himself unborn (xi. 20, xii. 3, xv. 10, 15, 18, xvii. 15-18, xviii. 19-23, xx. 7-10, 12, 14-18). The struggle within him was intense: on the one side, his lower, human self, naturally timid and shrinking, hardly able to bear up amid the trials in which he finds himself, and burdened by a thankless office which he would gladly have relinquished; on the other side, his higher self, Yahweh's voice and word within him, ever with irresistible power constraining him to endure, fortifying him in his weakness, and encouraging him against despair (cf. i. 18 f., v. 14, vi. 11, xv. 16, 19-21, xx. 9, 11, xxiii. 29). Jeremiah's is a tragic figure; and the conflicts, spiritual and material, which form the tragedy of his life, stand recorded in his book. But his isolation, his loneliness (xv. 17; cf. xvi. 2, 5, 8), his repulse by men, drove him to God: he unburdens his heart to God, discloses to Him his inmost feelings, and hears the Divine reply to his prayers and yearnings. Out of the experiences of his life there thus arose a consciousness, clearer, it seems, than had been attained before, of a personal relation between God and the individual soul. 'There were pious men before Jeremiah, but the long drawn out struggle of his life revealed piety more than ever before' (A. B. Davidson). By his life of personal communion with God, he becomes the spiritual father of those Psalmists, whose names are indeed unknown to us, but to whom we owe all the deeper outpourings of the heart to God which we find in the Book of Psalms.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>a</sup> See further, on the personal and other characteristics of Jeremiah, Wellhausen, Isr. u. Jüd. Gesch., ch. x. ('Jeremiah and the destruction of Jerusalem') end (ed 3, 1897, pp. 141-4);

Like most of the other prophets, Jeremiah projects ideals of the future. Not only does he promise what actually came to pass: the return of the exiles to the territories of Benjamin and Judah, and the resumption there of the interrupted social state, in which again, as of old, the sounds of joy and life would be heard in the villages (xxx. 18 f.; xxxiii. 10 f.), shepherds would again tend their flocks (xxxiii. 12 f.), and houses and fields would again be bought and sold by the restored exiles (xxxii. 15, 44); but he invests the future with ideal colours. The exiles of the Northern Kingdom will share in the restoration (iii. 18; xxxi. 4 ff.); the hills of Ephraim will again resound with happy throngs, and be clad with cornfields and vineyards; a great company will return from the furthest corners of the earth (xxxi. 4-9, cf. vv. 10-17, 21 f.); the wants of all will be abundantly satisfied (xxxi. 12-14, 25; cf. i. 19). The national life will be re-established (xxx. 18-21); Jerusalem will be rebuilt, and will be entirely holy to Yahweh (xxxi. 23, 38-40). It is in agreement with this representation that in xxxiii. 16—whether xxxiii. 14-26 be from Jeremiah's own hand or not—the restored city is to bear the same symbolical name as the ideal King (see below), 'Yahweh is our righteousness.'<sup>b</sup> The restored nation is pictured as returning to Yahweh 'with its whole heart' (xxiv. 7; cf. xxix. 13); words of confession and penitence are put into the mouth of both Judah (iii. 22*b*–25) and Ephraim (xxx. 18–19; cf. also i. 4*f.*); the iniquity of Israel will be forgiven, and remembered no more (xxx. 34*b*, xxxiii. 8; cf. i. 20); one heart, and one way, even the way of Yahweh's fear, will be given to them (xxiv. 7, xxxii. 39*f.*); Israel will be Yahweh's people, and He will be their God (xxiv. 7, xxx. 22, xxx. 1, 33, xxxii. 38). More than this, a 'new' and spiritual 'covenant' will be established with the house of Israel; and the nation will be ruled, not by a system of observances imposed from without, but by a law written in the heart, filling all with the knowledge of Yahweh, and prompting all to ready and perfect obedience (xxx. 31–34). There will be no ark; nor will the ark be either needed or missed (iii. 16). The people will be governed by upright, disinterested 'shepherds' (i.e. judges and princes), after God's own heart (iii. 15, xxiii. 4); and a perfect king of David's line, supreme over all, will maintain judgment and righteousness in the land, and ensure peace for its inhabitants (xxiii. 5*f.*; cf. xxxiii. 15*f.*, xxx. 8, 9). The ruler of the future will be of native birth, and enjoy the priestly privilege of access to Yahweh (xxx. 21). Israel has but to turn loyally to Yahweh for the nations to be moved by the spectacle of its blessedness to own Him as their God (iv. 1*f.*); elsewhere in the book the nations are depicted as in the future discarding their idols, confessing that Yahweh alone is God (xvi. 19*b*; cf. the conditional promise, xii. 16), making pilgrimages to Jerusalem (iii. 17), and looking with awe and wonder at the restored Zion (xxxiii. 9). Israel will never be cast off by Yahweh, or cease from being a nation before Him (xxxi. 36 f. ; cf. xxxiii. 23-26). In xxxiii. 17-22, also, the permanence both of the Davidic dynasty and of the Levitical priesthood is promised ; but this passage occurs in a context (xxxiii. 14-26) not in the Sept., and it is doubtful whether it is Jeremiah's. Egypt, Moab, Ammon, and Elam, after their expected desolation by Nebuchadnezzar, will be restored (xlvi. 26*b*, xlvi. 47, xlix. 6, 39—the first three of these passages, however, are not in the text of the Sept. : cf. also xii. 15*f*). It must be evident that many of these promises have not been fulfilled, and that now circumstances have so changed that they never can be fulfilled ; but, like the similar pictures drawn by other prophets, they remain as inspiring ideals of the future which God would fain see realized by or for His people, and of the goal which man, with God's help, should ever strive to attain.

§ 3. Some literary features of the Book of Jeremiah.

Like most Hebrew writers, Jeremiah uses many favourite expressions, some peculiar, or nearly so, to himself, others used also by other writers, particularly the author of the discourses of Deuteronomy, and other writers of the Deuteronomic school, especially the compilers of Judges and Kings (who display clear and numerous marks of the influence of Deuteronomy).<sup>a</sup> The words are often quite ordinary ones ; but they recur, either alone or in particular combinations, so frequently as to be characteristic of the writer, or group of writers, by whom they are used. A few examples may be worth collecting here. Their interest is not merely literary; they are of value in many cases as an indication of the ideas and lines of thought most prominent in the book.

to pluck up and to break down, to build and to plant: i. 10, xviii. 7, 9, xxiv. 6, xxxi. 28, xlii. 10; cf. xlv. 4.

other gods (esp. with walk or go after): i. 16, vii. 6, 9, 18, xi. 10, xiii. 10, xvi. 11, 13, xix. 4, 13, xxii. 9, xxv. 6, xxxii. 29, xxxv. 15, xlv. 3, 5, 8, 15. Often in Deut., and the Deuteronomic framework of Judges and Kings.

vanity, vanities, of unreal gods: ii. 5, viii. 19, x. 8, 15 (=li. 18), xiv. 22, xvi. 19. Cf. Deut. xxxii. 21; 1 Kings xvi. 13, 26, 2 Kings xvii. 15 (all compiler's passages).

shepherds, fig. of kings or rulers: ii. 8, iii. 15, x. 21, xxii. 22, xxiii. 1, 2, 4, xxv. 34-6, l. 6. Cf. xlix. 19=l. 44.

to receive instruction (or correction): ii. 30, v. 3, vii. 28, xvii. 23, xxxii. 33, xxxv. 13. Elsewhere only Zeph. iii. 2, 7, Prov. i. 3, viii. 10, xxiv. 32.

stubbornness: iii. 17, vii. 24, ix. 14, xi. 8, xiii. 10, xvi. 12, xviii. 12, xxiii. 17. Only besides Deut. xxix. 19, Ps. lxxxii. 12. Always followed by 'of heart.'

men of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem: iv. 4, xi. 2, 9, xvii. 25, xviii. 11, xxxii. 32, xxxv. 13, xxxvi. 31. Elsewhere only 2 Kings xxiii. 2=2 Chron. xxxiv. 30; Dan. ix. 7 (a reminiscence from Jer.).

a great destruction (lit. breaking): iv. 6, vi. 1, xiv. 17, xlviii. 3, l. 22, li. 54. Only besides Zeph. i. 10. Cf. also breaking (or breach) alone: see p. 22 note.

Terror on every side! vi. 25, xx. 3, 10, xlvi. 5, xlix. 29, Ps. xxxi. 13. Cf. Lam. ii. 22 'my terrors on every side.'

amend your ways and your doings : vii. 3, 5, xviii. 11, xxvi. 13 ; without 'your ways and,' xxxv. 15. Not elsewhere.

this place (of Jerusalem or Judah) : vii. 3, 6, 7, 20, xiv. 13, xvi. 2, 3, 9, xix. 3-7, 12, and 15 times besides. Cf. 2 Kings xxii. 16, 17, 19, 20 (in a prophecy greatly resembling Jeremiah's in style, and probably cast into form by the compiler). In no other prophet, except Hag. ii. 9.

rising up early and (speaking, sending, etc.) : vii. 13, 25. xi. 7, xxv. 3, 4, xxvi. 5, xxix. 19, xxxii. 33, xxxv. 14, 15. xliv. 4. Elsewhere only 2 Chron. xxxvi. 15 (evidently a reminiscence from Jeremiah)

the cities of Judah and the streets of Jerusalem : vii. 17, 34, xi. 6, xxxiii. 10, xliv. 6, 9, 17, 21. An expression which might have seemed to be obvious enough, but which in fact is not used by any other prophet.

to vex Yahweh (by treating Him undeservedly, especially by not rendering Him the service and obedience which were His due) : vii. 18, 19, viii. 19, xi. 17, xxxii. 29, 32. xliv. 3 ; + with the work of their hands : xxv. 6, 7, xxxii. 30, xliv. 8 (as Deut. xxxi. 29 ; 1 Kings xvi. 7, 2 Kings xvii. 17). Several times in Deut., and often in the Deut. framework of Kings. Cf. the note, p. 348 f.

I will be to you a God, and ye shall be to me a people (or in inverted order) : vii. 23, xi. 4, xxiv. 7, xxx. 22, xxxi. 33 (cf. v. 1), xxxii. 38. Also 5 times in Ezek., and occasionally elsewhere.

to incline the ear (denied of the people) : vii. 24, 26, xi. 8, xvii. 23, xxv. 4, xxxiv. 14, xxxv. 15, xliv. 5. Not in Deut., or any other prophet, except Isa. lv. 3.

my (or his) servants, the prophets : vii. 25, xxv. 4, xxvi. 5, xxix. 19, xxxv. 15, xliv. 4. Cf. 2 Kings ix. 7, xvii. 13, 23, xxi. 10, xxiv. 2 (all in passages due to the compiler). Elsewhere only Am. iii. 7, Zech. i. 6, Ezr. ix. 11, Dan. ix. 6, 10.

Behold, the days are coming, and . . . : vii. 32, ix. 25, xvi. 14, xix. 6, xxiii. 5, 7, xxx. 3, xxxi. 27, 31, 38, xxxiii. 14, xlviii. 12, xlix. 2, li. 47, 52. Elsewhere only Am. iv. 2, viii. 11, ix. 13, 1 Sam. ii. 31, 2 Kings xx. 17 = Isa. xxxix. 6.

food for the fowls of the heaven, and for the beasts of the earth : vii. 33, xvi. 4, xix. 7, xxxiv. 20. From Deut. xxviii. 26.

time (or year) of their visitation : viii. 12, xi. 23, xxiii. 12, xlvi. 21, xlviii. 44. Hence x. 15 (=li. 18), l. 27. The corresponding form is also probably to be read in vi. 15, xlix. 8, l. 31.

the sword, the pestilence, and the famine (sometimes in changed order) : xiv. 12, xxi. 7, 9, xxiv. 10, xxvii. 8, 13, xxix. 17, 18, xxxii. 24, 36, xxxiv. 17, xxxviii. 2, xlii. 17, 22, xliv. 13.

a consternation to all kingdoms of the earth : xv. 4, xxiv. 9, xxix. 18, xxxiv. 17. From Deut. xxviii. 25.

to return, each one from his evil way : xviii. 11, xxv. 5, xxvi. 3, xxxv. 15, xxxvi. 3, 7; cf. xxiii. 22.

a hissing : xviii. 16, xix. 8, xxv. 9, 18, xxix. 18, li. 37. Elsewhere (in this application) only Mic. vi. 16, 2 Chron. xxix. 8.

for evil and not for good : xxi. 10, xxxix. 16, xliv. 27. From Am. ix. 4.

The attentive reader will notice other cases of recurring expressions.

Jeremiah's tendency to move along the same lines of thought is illustrated also by the many cases in his book of the repetition of entire clauses or verses (sometimes with slight variations in the phraseology).

Compare, for example, i. 18*a*, 19 and xv. 20; ii. 15*b* (footnote) and iv. 7*b*; ii. 28*b* and xi. 13*a*; iv. 4*b* and xxi.

Some other cases are pointed out in the notes.

Chs. xlvi.–li. are remarkable for the frequent cases of the double utilization of the same material : notice, not only the many reminiscences in xlvi. 5, 29–38*a* from Isa. xv.–xvi., but also xlvi. 40, 41*b* and xlix. 22 ; xlvi. 43–44*a* and Isa. xxiv. 17–18 ; xlvi. 44*b* and xi. 23*b* (see above) ; xlvi. 45*b*, 46 and Num. xxi. 28, 29, xxiv. 17 ; xlix. 8*b* and xi. 23*b* (see above) ; xlix. 9, 14–16 and Obad. 5, 1–4 ; xlix. 12*b* and xxv. 29 ; xlix. 17*b* and xix. 8*b* (see above) ; xlix. 22 and xlvi. 40, 41*b* ; xlix. 27 and xvii. 27*b* (see above) ; l. 13*b* and xix. 8, xlix. 17 ; l. 27*b* and xlvi. 21*b* ; l. 30 and xlix. 26 ; l. 31*a*, 32*b* and xxi. 13*a*, 14*b* ; l. 40 and xlix. 18 (also v. 33*b*, li. 43*b*) ; l. 41–43 and vi. 22–24 ; l. 44–46 and xlix. 19–21 ; li. 15–19 and x. 12–16. Most of these examples are, however, different from those noted above ; and are due to the artificial, compilatory character of the parts of these chapters referred to.<sup>a</sup>

There remain, lastly, the repetitions of the same short passages, usually of a couple of verses, in different contexts : viz. vi. 13–15 and viii. 11*b*–12 (not here in

Sept.) ; xv. 13-14 and xvii. 3, 4b (not in Sept. here) ; xvi. 14-15 and xxiii. 7-8 (not in Sept. here) ; xxiii. 5-6 and xxxiii. 15-16 (not in Sept. here) ; xxiii. 19-20 and xxx. 23-24 ; xxx. 10-11 (not in Sept. here) and xlvi. 27-28. In several of these cases (as pointed out in the notes) the passage suits one context, but not the other ; probably, therefore, at least in such instances, it was not original in both, and the passage found its way into the inappropriate context, as happened also with some other passages (e.g. x. 1-16 ; xiii. 18 f.), in the course of the process by which the book gradually reached its present form.

Respecting the composition of the Book of Jeremiah, we possess, at least as regards its older portions, specific and interesting information. His prophecies, we learn from ch. xxxvi., were first committed to writing in the fourth year of Jehoiakim (B.C. 604), when Jeremiah received the command to take a roll and write in it all the words which Yahweh had spoken to him concerning Israel (? ' Jerusalem '), and Judah, and all the nations, from the thirteenth year of Josiah (B.C. 626) onwards. Accordingly Jeremiah dictated them to his scribe, Baruch, who wrote them ' from his mouth ' in a roll. In the following year Baruch read the roll publicly before the people at one of the gates leading into the upper court of the Temple. Jehoiakim, hearing of what Baruch was doing, orders the roll to be brought and read before him. Enraged by its contents, he cuts it in pieces, and burns it in the fire. After the roll had been thus destroyed, Jeremiah is commanded to rewrite its contents in a second roll. This was done in the same manner as before, Baruch writing at the prophet's dictation; and, it is stated, not merely were the contents of the first roll repeated, but 'there were added besides unto them many like words' (xxxvi. 32). Thus, as regards the prophecies belonging to the first twenty-three years of Jeremiah's ministry, there must always be some uncertainty as to what portions reproduce the original discourses, and what portions belong to the additions made by the prophet in the fifth year of Jehoiakim. It is reasonable to think that some of the more pointed denunciations of sin and judgement belong to the additions.

It is impossible to say definitely how many of Jeremiah's prophecies were included in the roll of Jehoiakim's fifth year: but it will have included certainly chs. i.-x. (except x. 1-16), probably some part of xi.-xviii., and at least a nucleus of xxv., perhaps also parts of xlvi.-xlix. 33. This roll must evidently have formed the nucleus of the existing Book of Jeremiah: though by what stages this nucleus was gradually enlarged till the present book was formed must remain matter of speculation. From the absence of any chronological order in the arrangement of many parts of the book,<sup>a</sup> and from the frequent occurrence in it of passages in such imperfect agreement with their context that it can hardly be supposed that they are in their original place,<sup>a</sup> it is clear that the process must have been a gradual one, and not completed by a single hand. 'At some time, possibly not a great many years after the prophet's death, some person or persons undertook the work of gathering together all the fragments of his oracles and furnishing as complete a biography of him as possible. The biographical interest was perhaps the predominant one' (A. B. Davidson). It is probable that most of the historical passages, with the prophet's words enclosed in them, are from the hand of Baruch, who continued with the prophet after the fall of the city, and accompanied him into Egypt. But however much in the book may be due to Baruch's hand, it is not credible, in view of the many marks of imperfect arrangement in the book, that he was its compiler, and arranged it in its present form. That must have been a work which, as internal evidence shews, was accomplished only by successive stages, and could hardly have been finally completed till long after Baruch's death.

<sup>a</sup> Thus, to take only the narratives, there belong (in the order given): to Jehoiakim's reign xxvi., xxxvi., xlv., xxxv.; and to Zedekiah's reign (earlier part) xxiv., xxix., xxvii., xxviii., li. 59-64: (during the siege) xxi. 1-10, xxxiv. 1-7, xxxvii. 1-10, xxxiv. 8-22, xxxvii. 11-xxxviii. 28a, xxxii. (no doubt placed here on account of its connexion in subject with xxx.-xxxi.).

The title i. 3 would seem to have been added at a stage when the book included only prophecies to the fall of Jerusalem in 586.

The two texts of Jeremiah. In the Book of Jeremiah the text of the Septuagint differs more widely from the Hebrew than is the case in any other part of the Old Testament. In the text of the Septuagint, as compared with the Hebrew, there are very numerous omissions, sometimes of single words, sometimes of entire clauses or passages; there are also occasionally additions, variations of expression, and transpositions. The number of words in the Hebrew text not represented in the Septuagint has been calculated at 2700, or one-eighth of the entire book. Very many of these omissions are however unimportant, consisting only of such words as the title the prophet attached to the name Jeremiah, the parenthetic saith Yahweh, etc., but others are more substantial, as x. 6-8, 10, xi. 7-8 (to to do), xxv. 26*b*, xxvii. 7, xxix. 14 (after of you), 16-20, xxx. 22, xxxiii. 14-26, xxxix. 4-13, xlvi. 26, xlviii. 40*b*, 41*b*, 45-6, 47, xlix. 6,<sup>a</sup> lii. 28-30 (see also p. xlv.); sometimes also a chapter, though the substance is not materially altered, appears in a briefer form in the Sept. (as ch. xxviii.).<sup>b</sup> In the Sept. the prophecies on foreign nations (xlvi.-li.) stand after xxv. 13*a*: the order of these prophecies among themselves is also different. It seems that, though some of these differences, as the omission of words, are due to the translators, others, especially most of the longer omissions, were already in the Heb. MSS. used by the translators: as has been pointed out above, the book reached its present form by successive stages, and at each stage additions were made to it; and the MSS. used by the Sept. translators did not contain all the passages which eventually found a place in the MSS. from which our existing Heb. text is derived. And in some cases—to the more important of which attention is called in the notes—there are reasons for thinking that the passages thus added in the Heb. text, but not found in the Sept., are not really from Jeremiah's (or Baruch's) hand. For the purposes for which the Septuagint has been used in the present volume, a further discussion of the subject is not necessary.

<sup>a</sup> xlvi 26*b*, xlviii. 47, xlix. 6 are promises of ultimate restoration to Egypt, Moab and Ammon respectively: xlix. 39, however, containing a similar promise to Elam, is in the Sept.

<sup>b</sup> In the translation in Cornill's Commentary the words and passages not in the Sept. are distinguished by being printed in italics.

For further information respecting Jeremiah and his writings, the reader is referred to the full and excellent article, JEREMIAH, by the late A. B. Davidson, in Hastings' Dict. of the Bible (1899). See also Cheyne's Jeremiah, his life and times (in the 'Men of the Bible' series). The existing English commentaries on Jeremiah are not of recent date, and fall short of the requirements of the present time. The deficiency will no doubt be supplied when the commentaries of Prof. Kirkpatrick (in the 'International' series), and of Prof. Peake (in the Century Bible), have appeared. The Commentaries of Graf (1862), Keil (1872), Giesebrecht (1894),<sup>a</sup> Duhm (1901), and Cornill (1905)—written from very different points of view, and with different critical principles—are indispensable for the advanced student if a choice must be made among them, those of Giesebrecht and Cornill will perhaps be found specially useful, though it is difficult to refrain from including the masterly work of Graf. Still, many questions have arisen with regard to Jeremiah's book, of which Graf in 1862 could take no account. Cornill's commentary is intended as a second edition of Graf's work, accommodated to the principles and conclusions of the scholarship of the present day: it contains numerous extracts from Graf's commentary, but at the same time omits much of it that is of permanent value. Keil is strictly conservative, but ought not on that account to be disregarded ; Duhm is original and brilliant, but arbitrary ; and the principal task of the future Commentator on Jeremiah will be to discover the right mean between them. Duhm considers Jeremiah to have been exclusively a poet ; and would limit his genuine utterances to 268 couplets, written in the elegiac kīnāh-measure.<sup>a</sup> Cornill also makes large use of metrical canons for distinguishing between the genuine utterances of Jeremiah and the amplifying additions of editors or others ; but he does not doubt that Jeremiah uttered prophecies in prose, he does not limit his poetry to a single metrical form, and he refers considerably more in the book either to Jeremiah himself or Baruch than Duhm does. Cornill also (Preface. p. vii.) definitely recognizes that the whole question of Hebrew metre is at present in a provisional stage. The future must shew whether metre ultimately approves itself to scholars as a criterion of authenticity. Both Duhm and Cornill, it may be worth adding, draw singularly appreciative and sympathetic pictures of Jeremiah and his work.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>b</sup> By the Hebrew student the synopsis of various readings from the Sept. and other ancient versions, and of emendations proposed by modern scholars, contained in the edition of the book in Kittel's Biblia Hebraica (1906), will be found of great value.

CHAPTER I

Jeremiah's call, in Josiah's thirteenth year
(B.C. 626).

<sup>b</sup> V. 2, fixing a specific date, forms the title to ch. i. V. 3 must be an addition by a later hand, intended to extend the terms of v. 2,—though with disregard of prophecies belonging to the period between the thirteenth year of Josiah (B.C. 626) and the end of his reign (B.C. 608),—so as to include all the prophecies delivered by Jeremiah down to the time of the fall of Jerusalem, B.C. 586 (2 Kings xxv. 8, 11).

The vision of Jeremiah's call to be a prophet of Yahweh.

<sup>4</sup> And the word of Yahweh came unto me, saying, <sup>5</sup> ' Before I formed thee in the belly I knew thee, and before thou camest forth out of the womb I sanctified thee ; a prophet unto the nations have I made thee.'
<sup>6</sup> Then said I, ' Ah, Lord Yahweh ! behold, I cannot speak : for I am a child.'
<sup>7</sup> And Yahweh said unto me, ' Say not, I am a child : for to whomsoever I shall send thee thou shalt go, and whatsoever I shall command thee thou shalt speak. <sup>8</sup> Be not afraid because of them : for I am with thee to deliver thee,' saith Yahweh. <sup>9</sup> Then Yahweh put forth his hand, and touched<sup>a</sup> my mouth. And Yahweh said unto me, ' Behold, I have put my words in thy mouth.<sup>b</sup> <sup>10</sup> See, I have this day set<sup>c</sup> thee over the nations and over the kingdoms, to pluck up and to break down, and to destroy and to pull down, to build and to plant.'<sup>d</sup>

<sup>c</sup> The word used suggests the idea of set with authority, or make an overseer (it is rendered 'made overseer' in Gen. xxxix. 4, 5, and 'made governor' in Jer. xl. 5, 7) : Jeremiah, so to say, is to be Yahweh's vice-gerent over the kingdoms of the earth, with authority to declare His purposes regarding them.

<sup>d</sup> Viz., by announcing, in Yahweh's name, the overthrow, or restoration, of kingdoms. See xii. 14-17, xxv., xlvi-xlix. ; and cf. also, for the expressions, xviii. 7, xxiv. 6, xxxi. 28, xlii. 10, xlv. 4,

A vision of reassurance for the prophet: Yahweh's word, though the time may seem long, will not fail of its fulfilment.

<sup>11</sup> And the word of Yahweh came unto me, saying, 'What seest thou, Jeremiah?' And I said, 'I see a rod of an almond tree [Heb. shākēd].'
<sup>12</sup> Then said Yahweh unto me, 'Thou hast well seen: for I am wakeful [Heb. shōkēd<sup>a</sup>] over my word to perform it.'

<sup>13</sup> And the word of Yahweh came unto me a second time, saying, 'What seest thou?' And I said, 'I see a boiling caldron;<sup>b</sup> and the face thereof is from the north.'
<sup>14</sup> Then Yahweh said unto me, 'Out of the north will the evil break forth<sup>c</sup> upon all the inhabitants of the land.'
<sup>15</sup> For, behold, I am calling all the families of the kingdoms of the north,' saith Yahweh; 'and they shall come, and they shall set every one his throne at the entering of the gates of Jerusalem, and against all the walls thereof round about, and against all the cities of Judah. <sup>16</sup> And I will utter my judgements against them<sup>a</sup> because of all their wickedness; in that they have forsaken me, and have burned incense unto other gods, and worshipped the works of their own hands.'

<sup>a</sup> Cf. the use of the same word in xxxi. 28, xlv. 27. For the play upon shōkēd and shākēd, cf. Amos viii. 1-2, where Israel's 'end' (Heb. kētz) is suggested by the basket of 'summer fruit' (Heb. kayitz) seen by the prophet in his vision.

<sup>b</sup> Heb. a caldron blown upon, i.e. made to boil by the flames being fanned under it.

<sup>c</sup> Heb. be opened (i.e. be let loose). But read probably, by a slight change (in accordance with 'a caldron blown upon' in v. 13), be blown forth (cf. Ez. xxi. 31 'with the fire of my wrath will I blow upon thee').

Jeremiah is encouraged to deliver his message fearlessly, in spite of the opposition which he will provoke by it.

CHAPTERS II-VI

The condition and prospects of Judah under Josiah, probably during the years between the prophet's call (B.C. 626) and shortly after Josiah's reformation (B.C. 620).

These chapters contain presumably Jeremiah's first prophetic discourses, as they were reproduced in a written form in the fifth year of Jehoiakim (B.C. 603). We learn, namely, from ch. xxxvi., that none of Jeremiah's prophecies were committed to writing till the fourth year of Jehoiakim (B.C. 604); and also that when, in the following year, the king burnt the roll, and it was rewritten by Jeremiah, it was rewritten with additions (xxxvi. 32). Although, therefore, these chapters no doubt, as a whole, reproduce the discourses delivered between 626 and c. 620, it is quite possible that they do not throughout reproduce them verbatim, but that they are coloured in parts by allusions to the course of subsequent events.

<sup>a</sup> Or, with other points, do break. Perhaps, however, transposing two letters, we should read, do lay bare (i.e. shave: cf. Isa. vii. 20). The allusion, whether 'feed on' or 'lay bare' be read—'break' is less probable—is doubtless to some humiliation experienced at the hands of Egypt; perhaps, if the verse was added in 603 (see the note at the beginning of the chapter), to the tribute which Jehoiakim had to pay as vassal of Egypt (2 Kings xxiii. 33, 35).

<sup>b</sup> These words are not in the Sept., and should perhaps be omitted. In the Heb. they stand at the end of v. 17, and resemble the opening words of v. 18 in such a way as to suggest that they may be a corrupt anticipation of them.

<sup>d</sup> The allusion may be either to deaths due to miscarriage of justice or the result of exaction (vii. 6, xxii. 3 end, 17 ; cf. Mic. iii. 10, Ps. xciv. 21), or to the sacrifice of children (see xix. 4 ; cf. Ps. cvi. 38), or possibly to the martyrdoms under Manasseh (2 Kings xxi. 16, xxiv. 4).

(2) Chaps. iv. 5—vi. 30

*The approaching judgement. The foe is at the door : and Judah's heedlessness and sin are working

The prominence in this prophecy of the foe from the north (cf. iv. 6, vi. 1, 22) makes it probable that it is somewhat later than ii. 1—iv. 5, in which no such specific danger is referred to. The foe whom Jeremiah had in mind when he originally delivered the prophecy was in all probability the Scythians, a wild and fierce people, whose proper home was on the north of the Crimea, but who often made predatory incursions into distant parts, and who actually, Herodotus tells us (i. 105-8) overran Western Asia at about 625 B.C., and advanced through Palestine as far as Ashkelon, intending to invade Egypt. When, however, the prophecy was committed to writing, and, as it were, re-edited, in 604 (see above, p. 5), the descriptions were probably intended to refer to the Chaldaeans, who in the interval had become Judah's most formidable enemy, the phraseology being possibly modified in parts, so as to be more suitable: the 'lion' and 'destroyer of nations' in iv. 7, for instance, are terms more applicable to an individual leader like Nebuchadnezzar than to a horde.

<sup>a</sup> Or, honesty: see 2 Kings xii. 15, xxii. 7 (where faithfully is lit. in faithfulness, the word used here). So v. 3.

<sup>b</sup> To swear by the national God was a token of loyalty to Him (Deut. x. 20); but it should be done sincerely (ch. iv. 2; Isa. xlvi. 1).

every one going out from them shall be torn in pieces : because their transgressions are many, and their backturnings are increased. <sup>7</sup> How shall I pardon thee ? thy children have forsaken me, and sworn by them that are no gods ; and when I had fed them to the full, they committed adultery, and made themselves at home<sup>a</sup> in the harlots' houses. <sup>8</sup> They were as fed stallions<sup>b</sup> : every one neighed after his neighbour's wife. <sup>9</sup> Shall I not visit for these things ? saith Yahweh : and shall not my soul be avenged on a nation such as this ?

*Let the appointed ministers of judgement, then,

<sup>10</sup> Go ye up into her vine-rows,<sup>c</sup> and destroy ; but make not a full end : take away her branches ; for they are not Yahweh's. <sup>11</sup> For the house of Israel and the house of Judah have dealt very faithlessly against me, saith Yahweh. <sup>12</sup> They have denied Yahweh, and said, 'Not he<sup>d</sup> ! neither will <sup>a</sup> Or, made themselves sojourners (1 Kings xvii. 20) ; so Sept. (κατέλθον, i.e. יתַנְרְרוּ for יתַנְרְרוּ). The Heb. text has, made themselves into marauding bands (2 Kings v. 2, etc.).

<sup>20</sup> Declare ye this in the house of Jacob, and publish it in Judah, saying, <sup>21</sup> Hear, now, this, O foolish people, and without understanding :<sup>b</sup> which have eyes, and see not ; which have ears, and hear not : <sup>22</sup> Fear ye not me ? saith Yahweh : will ye not tremble at my presence, which have placed the sand for a bound of the sea, (by) a perpetual decree, which it cannot transgress, and though [the waters thereof]<sup>c</sup> toss themselves, yet can they not prevail ; though its waves roar, yet can they not pass over it. <sup>23</sup> But this people hath a refractory and defiant heart ; they are turned aside and gone. <sup>24</sup> Neither say they in their heart, ' Let us, now, fear Yahweh, our God, that giveth winter-rain, and autumn-rain, <sup>30</sup> An appalling and horrible thing is come to pass in the land : <sup>31</sup> the prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests bear rule at their hands ; and my people love to have it so : and what will ye do in the end thereof ?

VI. <sup>1</sup> Bring (your households) into safety, ye children of Benjamin, out of the midst of Jerusalem ; and blow the trumpet in Tekoa,<sup>a</sup> and raise up a beacon on Beth-hacchérem : for evil hath looked forth from the north, and great destruction. <sup>2</sup> The comely and luxurious one, the daughter of Zion, will I cut off. <sup>3</sup> Shepherds with their flocks<sup>b</sup> shall come unto her : they have pitched tents against her round about ; they feed every one off his place.<sup>c</sup> <sup>4</sup> ' Prepare ye<sup>d</sup> war against her : arise, and let us go up at noon.' ' Woe unto us ! for the day hath declined, for the shadows of evening stretch themselves out.' <sup>5</sup> ' Arise, and let us go up by night, and let us destroy her palaces.'<sup>e</sup>

<sup>a</sup> In the elevated ' hill-country ' of Judah (Josh. xv. 48-60), 12 miles S. of Jerusalem, the home of the prophet Amos. In the Hebrew there is an assonance with ' blow.' Beth-hacchérem (' House or Place of the vineyard ') is perhaps the height now called the Frank Mountain (from its having been made a point of defence by the Crusaders), 3 miles N.E. of Tekoa, commanding a fine view of the Dead Sea.

<sup>d</sup> Heb. Sanctify. Cf. xxii. 7, li. 27 ; Joel iii. 9 ; Mic. iii. 5 ; Isa. xiii. 3. The expression no doubt arose either out of the custom of opening a campaign with sacrifices, or from the idea that war was a sacred service, undertaken in the name of the national God (cf. 1 Sam. xxv. 28).

in v. 4*b* they lament that they have let noon pass—when in the East a siesta is taken, and a surprise might readily be made (cf. xv. 8, xx. 16, Zeph. ii. 4) ; and in v. 5 they propose lastly to make the assault at night-time (cf. Is. xv. 1).

testify, that they may hear? behold, their ear is uncircumcised, and they cannot listen: behold, the word of Yahweh is become unto them a reproach; they have no delight in it. <sup>11</sup> But I am full of the fury of Yahweh; I am weary with holding in: 'Pour it out<sup>a</sup> upon the children in the street, and upon the assembly of young men together; for even the husband with the wife shall be taken, the aged with him that is full of days: <sup>12</sup> and their houses shall be turned unto others, fields and wives together; for I will stretch out my hand upon the inhabitants of the land,' saith Yahweh.

<sup>13</sup> For from the least of them even unto the greatest of them every one is greedy of gain;<sup>b</sup> and from the prophet even to the priest every one dealeth falsely. <sup>14</sup> And they would heal the breach of my people lightly, saying, 'Peace, peace'; when there is no peace. <sup>15</sup> They shall shew shame, because they have committed abomination: (for now,) yea, they are not at all ashamed, neither know they how to shew confusion : therefore they shall fall among them that fall ; at the time that I visit them<sup>a</sup> they shall stumble, saith Yahweh.

In vain has Israel been warned beforehand by its prophets.

fire : in vain do they go on refining ;<sup>a</sup> for the evil are not separated.<sup>b</sup> <sup>30</sup> Rejected silver shall men call them, because Yahweh hath rejected them.

<sup>a</sup> Or, smelting. Cf. for the figure ch. ix. 7 'Behold, I will smelt them, and try (or assay) them' ; Job xxiii. 10 'If he trieth (or assayeth) me, I shall come forth as gold' ; Zech. xiii. 9.

<sup>b</sup> A fig. description of the vain efforts made by the prophet to remove the evil elements from his people. In refining, the alloy containing the gold or silver is mixed with lead, and fused in a furnace on a vessel of earth or bone-ash : a current of air is turned upon the molten mass (not upon the fire) ; the lead then oxidizes, and acting as a flux, carries away the alloy, leaving the gold or silver pure (J. Napier, The Ancient Workers in Metal, 1856, pp. 20, 23). In the case here imagined by the prophet, so inextricably is the alloy mixed with the silver, that, though the bellows blow, and the lead is oxidized in the heat, no purification is effected : only impure silver remains.

CHAPTERS VII-X

A group of prophecies belonging probably to the early years (B.C. 608—5) of Jehoiakim's reign.

(1) Chap. vii. 1—28.

Not the presence of Yahweh's Temple in Judah, but amendment of life and obedience to Yahweh's moral commands, is the condition of His favour and protection.

The occasion seems to be the same as that of xxvi. 1—9, which is assigned (v. 1) to the 'beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim' (B.C. 608—7).

VII. <sup>1</sup>The word that came to Jeremiah from Yahweh, saying, <sup>2</sup>Stand in the gate of Yahweh's house, and proclaim there this word, and say, Hear the word of Yahweh, all Judah, ye that enter in at these gates to worship Yahweh. <sup>3</sup>Thus saith Yahweh of hosts, the God of Israel, Amend your ways and your doings, and I will cause you to dwell in this place. <sup>4</sup>Trust ye not in lying words, saying, 'The temple of Yahweh, the temple of Yahweh, the temple of Yahweh, are these.' <sup>a</sup> <sup>5</sup> For if ye thoroughly amend your ways and your doings ; if ye thoroughly execute judgement between a man and his neighbour ; <sup>6</sup> if ye oppress not the sojourner,<sup>b</sup> the fatherless, and the widow, and shed not<sup>c</sup> innocent blood in this place, neither walk after other gods to your own hurt : <sup>7</sup> then will I cause you to dwell in this place, in the land that I gave to your fathers from of old and even for evermore. <sup>8</sup> Behold, ye trust in lying words, in order not to profit. <sup>9</sup> Will ye steal, murder, and commit adultery, and swear falsely, and burn incense<sup>d</sup> unto Baal, and walk after other gods whom ye have not known ; <sup>10</sup> and come and stand before me in this house, over which my name hath been called,<sup>e</sup>

<sup>e</sup> In token of ownership (see 2 Sam. xii. 28 ; Is. iv. 1). Often in Deuteronomic writers, of the temple, the people, or the city of Jerusalem, as Deut. xxviii. 10 ; 1 Kings viii. 43 ; Jer. xiv. 9 ; xxv. 29 ; xxxii. 34 al. ; and occasionally besides (cf. Am. ix. 12 ; Is. lxiii. 19).

and say, 'We are delivered,'<sup>a</sup> in order (forsooth) to do all these abominations? <sup>11</sup> Is this house, over which my name hath been called, become a cave<sup>b</sup> of robbers in your eyes? I also,—behold I have seen it! saith Yahweh.

Yahweh threatens to do to His temple in Jerusalem as He did formerly to His Temple at Shiloh.

<sup>d</sup> This destruction which overtook Shiloh is alluded to also in Jer. xxvi. 6, and Ps. lxxviii. 60; but it is not mentioned in the existing historical books. It most probably happened after the Philistine victory described in 1 Sam. iv.

as I did unto Shiloh. <sup>15</sup> And I will cast you out from before my face, as I have cast out<sup>a</sup> your brethren, even all the seed of Ephraim.

Yahweh has demanded of His people not sacrifice, but loyalty to Himself, and obedience to His moral commands. But to these demands Israel has never responded.

<sup>a</sup> The words must be supposed to be spoken with irony and contempt. The burnt-offering was not eaten by the worshipper, but only parts of the peace-offering. Yahweh however cares so little for either, as offered by these idolatrous Israelites, that they may, if they please, eat both together ; they are nothing really sacred, but only ‘ flesh.’

<sup>b</sup> When Jeremiah wrote, the priestly parts of the Pent. had in all probability not yet been combined with the rest of the Pentateuch, and the reference here is to the latter. Sacrifices are indeed enjoined in JE (Ex. xxiii. 14–19), and Deuteronomy : but little stress is laid upon them ; and the promises (as here, ‘ in order that it may be well with you ’) are annexed more generally to loyalty to Yahweh and the refusal to follow after other gods. See Ex. xv. 26, xix. 5, 6, xxiii. 21 ff. ; Deut. xxviii. 1, 2 ; and cf. Deut. iv. 40, v. 33 (which particularly resembles v. 23b here), vi. 3, 18 ; also x. 12–13.

<sup>27</sup> And thou shalt speak all these words unto them, but they will not hearken to thee : thou shalt also call unto them, but they will not answer thee. <sup>28</sup> And thou shalt say unto them, This is the nation that hath not hearkened to the voice of Yahweh their God, nor received correction : faithfulness<sup>c</sup> is perished, and is cut off from their mouth.

(2) Chap. vii. 29—viii. 3.

<sup>29</sup> Poll thy locks,<sup>a</sup> (O Jerusalem,)<sup>b</sup> and cast them away, and take up a dirge on the bare heights ;

For Yahweh hath rejected and forsaken the generation of his wrath.

<sup>30</sup> For the children of Judah have done that which is evil in my sight, saith Yahweh : they have set their detestable things<sup>c</sup> in the house over which my name hath been called, to defile it.

<sup>31</sup> And they have built the high places<sup>d</sup> of Topheth, which is in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to burn their sons and their daughters in the fire ; which I commanded not, neither came it into my mind.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>a</sup> To poll the hair was a mark of mourning : Mic. i. 16, Job i. 20 (where 'shave' is the same Heb. as 'poll' here) ; cf. Deut. xiv. 1.

<sup>b</sup> This word is inserted (as in AV., RV.) because in the Heb. the pronouns are feminine, shewing that the city, or the population personified, is addressed (as often in Jer., e.g. iv. 30, x. 17).

<sup>c</sup> Cf. 2 Kings xxiii. 13 (where 'abomination' [the first two times] in AV., RV., represents the same Hebrew).

<sup>e</sup> Heb. came up upon my heart, idiom. for 'occurred to me.' So Is. lxxv. 17 ; Jer. iii. 16, xix. 5, xxxii. 35, xlv. 21 ; Acts vii. 23.

A terrible judgement will overtake the people.

<sup>32</sup> Therefore, behold, the days are coming, saith Yahweh, that it shall no more be called Topheth, nor The valley of the son of Hinnom, but The valley of Slaughter: and they shall bury in Topheth, because there shall be no place (else).<sup>a</sup> <sup>33</sup> And the carcasses of this people shall be food for the fowls of the heaven, and for the beasts of the earth; and none shall fray<sup>b</sup> them away. <sup>34</sup> And I will cause to cease from the cities of Judah, and from the streets of Jerusalem, the voice of mirth and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride: for the land shall become a waste.

Even the bones of the buried Israelites will suffer indignities: their graves will be opened and desecrated by the enemy.

VIII. <sup>1</sup> At that time, saith Yahweh, they shall bring out the bones of the kings of Judah, and the bones of his princes, and the bones of the priests and the bones of the prophets, and the bones of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, out of their graves:

<sup>a</sup> The land will be so full of corpses that they will have to be buried even in the unclean place of Topheth.

<sup>b</sup> An archaism for frighten. (Really a shortened form of affray, of which the participle is afraid. See Hastings' Dict. of the Bible, s.v.; and cf. Deut. xxviii. 26).

<sup>2</sup> and they shall spread them before the sun, and the moon, and all the host of heaven,<sup>a</sup> whom they have loved, and whom they have served, and after whom they have walked, and whom they have sought, and whom they have worshipped: they shall not be gathered, nor be buried; they shall be for dung upon the face of the ground. <sup>3</sup> And death shall be chosen rather than life by all the remnant that are left of this evil family in all the places<sup>b</sup> whither I have driven them, saith Yahweh of hosts.

(3) Chap. viii. 4—17.

to return. <sup>6</sup> I listened and heard, but they spake not aright: no man repenteth him of his wickedness, saying, 'What have I done?' every one turneth back in his course, as a horse that rusheth headlong in the battle. <sup>7</sup> Yea, the stork in the heaven knoweth her appointed times;<sup>a</sup> and the turtle and the swift and the swallow observe the time of their coming; but my people know not the ordinance of Yahweh. <sup>8</sup> How do ye say, 'We are wise, and the law of Yahweh<sup>b</sup> is with us'? But surely, behold, the false pen of the scribes hath wrought falsely.<sup>c</sup> <sup>9</sup> The wise men are put to shame, they are dismayed and taken: lo, they have rejected the word of Yahweh; and what manner of wisdom have they?

<sup>c</sup> Or, hath made (it) into falsehood. The priests gave tôrâh, or 'direction,' on cases of ceremonial or other usage submitted to them (Deut. xxiv. 8 [where 'teach' means direct how to act], Hag. ii. 11-13 [render in v. 11 'Ask, now, direction of the priests']); and they declare here that they possess the legitimate traditional body of directions, or 'law,' respecting religious practice (cf. ii. 8, xviii. 18). Jeremiah replies that the scribes have falsified this body of directions,—exactly in what way we do not know: perhaps by claiming to have Yahweh's sanction for practices or ceremonial usages, of which in reality He did not approve.

<sup>10</sup> Therefore will I give their wives unto others, and their fields to them that shall possess them: for<sup>a</sup> from the least even unto the greatest every one is greedy of gain; from the prophet even unto the priest every one dealeth falsely. <sup>11</sup> And they would heal the breach of the daughter of my people lightly, saying, 'Peace, peace'; when there is no peace. <sup>12</sup> They shall shew shame, because they have committed abomination: (for now,) yea, they are not at all ashamed, neither know they how to be confused: therefore they shall fall among them that fall; at the time of their visitation they shall stumble, saith Yahweh.

<sup>b</sup> A fig. description of the state of the people: it is like a tree with no fruit worth anything upon it. Contrast xvii. 8.

<sup>c</sup> Or, pass through them, i.e. invade them (cf. Is. viii. 18, xxviii. 15). But the text of this clause is (in the Heb.) very suspicious.

Cf. ix. 15, xxiii. 15 ; Lam. iii. 5, 19 ; Ps. lxix. 21. 'Gall,' i.e. bile, is in all these passages to be understood not literally, but merely as fig. of something very bitter.

IX. <sup>1</sup> Oh that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people !

<sup>e</sup> The word rendered here, I go in garb as a mourner, has reference to the dark and squalid attire and appearance of a mourner in the East (2 Sam. xix. 24 ; Est. iv. 1) ; in iv. 28 it is used of the sky darkened by clouds (‘ be black’).

<sup>f</sup> Cf. for the expression xxx. 17, xxxiii. 6 ; and see further the note at the end of the volume.

should I do,<sup>a</sup> because of the evil of<sup>b</sup> the daughter of my people ? <sup>8</sup> Their tongue is a deadly arrow ; the words of their mouth are deceit :<sup>c</sup> one speaketh peaceably with his neighbour, but in his heart he layeth ambush for him. <sup>9</sup> Shall I not visit them for these things ? saith Yahweh : shall not my soul be avenged on a nation such as this ?<sup>d</sup>

<sup>10</sup> For the mountains will I take up a weeping and lamentation,

And for the pastures of the wilderness<sup>e</sup> a dirge :
Because they are burned up,<sup>f</sup> so that none passeth through,

Neither can men hear the voice of the cattle ;
From the fowl of the heavens unto the beasts, they are fled, they are gone.

<sup>b</sup> So Sept. (cf. vii. 12, xxxii. 32 [‘evil’ and ‘wickedness’ represent the same Heb.]). The Heb. text omits, the evil of.

And the cities of Judah will I make a desolation, without inhabitant.

<sup>12</sup> Who is the wise man that may understand this ? and who is he to whom the mouth of Yahweh hath spoken, that he may declare it ? wherefore is the land perished, and laid waste like a wilderness, so that none passeth through ?

And let your ear receive the word of his mouth;
And teach your daughters lamentation,
And every one her neighbour a dirge.

<sup>21</sup> For death is come up into our windows, it is entered into our palaces;
To cut off the children from the street, and the young men from the broad places.

<sup>a</sup> I.e., women acting as professional mourners, such as still in Syria assist at funerals, and either recite from memory, or extemporize for the occasion, dirges constructed in a particular metrical form, in which the virtues of the deceased are recounted, and his loss is bewailed.

And the carcasses of men shall fall, as dung upon the face of the field,
 And as a handful after the reaper, with none to gather it.

Chap. ix. 23—26.

Two short prophetic utterances, in no apparent connexion with the context, and probably (like iii. 6-18) misplaced.

Only the right knowledge of Yahweh, and of His will for men, will profit a man.

<sup>23</sup> Thus saith Yahweh, Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, neither let the mighty man<sup>a</sup> glory in his might, let not the rich man glory in his riches: <sup>24</sup> but let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and that he knoweth me, that I am Yahweh which doeth kindness, judgement, and righteousness, in the earth: for in these things do I delight, saith Yahweh.

If Judah has only the circumcision of the flesh, it will be treated by Yahweh as no better than other nations.

in uncircumcision ;<sup>a</sup> <sup>26</sup> Egypt, and Judah, and Edom, and the children of Ammon, and Moab, and all that have the corners (of their hair) clipt,<sup>b</sup> that dwell in the wilderness : for all the nations are uncircumcised, and all the house of Israel are uncircumcised in heart.<sup>c</sup>

Chap. x. 1—16.

No need to dread the gods of the heathen.

This section (x. 1-16) interrupts the connexion (for x. 17-25 carries on the train of thought of ix. 1-22) ; and in all probability is the work not of Jeremiah himself, but of some later prophet, probably of one living in the latter part of the Babylonian captivity, when the exiles were in danger of being overawed by the elaborate idol-worship carried on by the Babylonians around them.<sup>d</sup> Cf. the similar descriptions and arguments of the second Isaiah, Is. xl. 19-22, xli. 7, 29, xliv. 9-20, xlv. 5-7.

<sup>a</sup> Lit. with a foreskin (an oxymoron). The meaning is, those who are circumcised externally, but have the foreskin of their heart (iv. 4) unremoved.

<sup>b</sup> Certain Arab tribes, who, contrary to the Jewish practice (Lev. xix. 27), shaved the hair off their temples (Herod. iii. 8). The same peculiar epithet (lit. the corner-clipt) recurs in xxv. 23, xlix. 32.

<sup>c</sup> Judah, having no circumcision of the heart, is no better than Egypt, Edom, etc., which, like it, are circumcised externally, or than other nations which are not circumcised at all.

<sup>d</sup> See the writer's Introd. to the Lit. of the O.T., p. 254. Jeremiah's contemporaries looked for help from unreal gods, and are told by the prophet that they cannot save them (ii. 28, xi. 12) ; the Israelites here addressed are in a different situation altogether, and are told not to dread unreal gods, for they cannot harm them.

<sup>1</sup> Hear ye the word which Yahweh hath spoken unto you, O house of Israel : <sup>2</sup> Thus saith Yahweh, Learn not the way of the nations, and be not dismayed at the signs of heaven ;<sup>a</sup> for the nations are dismayed at them. <sup>3</sup> For the customs<sup>b</sup> of the peoples are vanity : for (an idol is) a tree which one cutteth out of the forest, the work of the hands of the craftsman<sup>c</sup> with the axe. <sup>4</sup> They beautify it with silver and with gold ; they fasten them with nails and with hammers, that they<sup>d</sup> shake not. <sup>5</sup> They are like a pillar<sup>e</sup> in a cucumber-garden, and speak not : they must needs be borne, because they cannot go. Be not afraid of them ; for they cannot do evil, neither is it in their power to do good.

<sup>f</sup> So with a change of punctuation. Or, omitting a letter, There is none like, etc. The Heb. text, as it stands, is not translatable. So in v. 7.

thou art great, and thy name is great in might.
 7 Who should not fear thee, O King of the nations ?
 for thee it beseemeth ; forasmuch as among all the wise men of the nations, and in all their kingdoms, whence is any like unto thee ? 8 But they<sup>a</sup> are one and all senseless and foolish : the instruc-
 into plates which is brought from Tarshish, and gold from Ophir,<sup>e</sup> the work of the craftsman, and of the hands of the goldsmith ; blue and purple is their clothing, they are all the work of skilled men.
 10 But Yahweh is God in truth ;

He is a living God, and an everlasting king :
 At his wrath the earth trembleth,

And the nations cannot abide his indignation :

[<sup>11</sup> Thus<sup>f</sup> shall ye say unto them, The gods that have not made the heavens and the earth, shall perish from

<sup>f</sup> This verse is written in Aramaic ; it interrupts the connexion between v. 10 and v. 12 (notice ' Who made ' at the beginning of v. 12), and was probably originally a marginal note, suggested by the argument of the text, and intended as a reply which might be used by Jews living in heathen countries, when invited to take part in idol-worship.

- <sup>12</sup> Who made the earth by his power,
 Who established the world by his wisdom,
 And by his understanding stretched out the heavens.
- <sup>13</sup> When he uttereth his voice,<sup>a</sup> there is a roar of waters in the heavens, And he causeth the vapours to ascend from the ends of the earth ;
 He maketh lightnings for the rain,
 And bringeth forth the wind out of his treasuries : <sup>b</sup>
- <sup>14</sup> (Then) every man becometh senseless and loseth knowledge ;
 Every goldsmith is put to shame by his graven image :
 For his molten image is falsehood, and there is no breath in them.<sup>c</sup>
- <sup>15</sup> They are vanity, a work of mockery :
 In the time of their visitation they will perish.<sup>d</sup>
- <sup>16</sup> The portion of Jacob is not like these ;
 For he is the former of all things ;

Yahweh of hosts is his name.

Chap. x. 17—25.

(Continuation of ix. 22).

The prophet sees in spirit the capital invested by the foe, and bids the inhabitants prepare to depart into exile.

my children are gone forth from me, and they are not; there is none to stretch forth my tent any more, and to set up my curtains.<sup>a</sup> <sup>21</sup> For the shepherds<sup>b</sup> are become senseless, and have not inquired of Yahweh: therefore they have not prospered, and all their flock<sup>c</sup> is scattered. <sup>22</sup> Hark! a rumour, behold it cometh, and a great commotion out of the north country, to make the cities of Judah a desolation, a dwelling place of jackals.

<sup>g</sup> Heb. diminish me (xxix. 6, xxx. 19 ['be few']; Ezek. xxix. 15; Ps. cvii. 39 ['are minished']). 'Me' in this verse signifies the people.

the nations that have not known thee, and upon the families that have not called upon thy name : for they have devoured Jacob,<sup>a</sup> and consumed him, and have laid waste his homestead.’<sup>b</sup>

<sup>a</sup> So Sept. The Heb. text adds, and devoured him (a corrupt repetition of the previous, and anticipation of the following word).

<sup>b</sup> Cf. Ps. lxxix. 6, 7. Jeremiah was profoundly convinced that a nation which did not ‘know’ Yahweh was nevertheless the Divinely appointed agent for the punishment of Judah: hence this verse—unless it may be regarded as merely the expression of the people’s point of view—can scarcely have been written by Jeremiah, but must be the addition of a later hand, introduced (as indeed its latter part seems independently to suggest) after the desolation of the land was complete.

CHAPTERS XI. 1—XII. 6

Chap. xi. 1—8.

The date is apparently shortly after the discovery of Deuteronomy in Josiah's 18th year (B.C. 621).

Jeremiah is instructed to exhort the people to live in accordance with the Deuteronomic Law.

XI. <sup>1</sup> The word that came to Jeremiah from Yahweh, saying, <sup>2</sup> 'Hear thou the words of this covenant, and speak them<sup>a</sup> unto the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, <sup>3</sup> and say unto them, Thus saith Yahweh, the God of Israel: Cursed be the man that heareth not the words of this covenant,<sup>b</sup> <sup>4</sup> which I commanded your fathers in the day that I brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, out of the iron-furnace,<sup>c</sup> saying,

<sup>c</sup> I.e. the furnace in which iron is smelted; fig. of a place of severe suffering. So Deut. iv. 20; 1 Kings viii. 51.

“ Harken unto my voice, and do<sup>a</sup> according to all that I command you ; and ye shall be to me a people, and I will be to you a God ; <sup>5</sup> that I may establish the oath which I sware unto your fathers, to give them a land flowing with milk and honey, as at this day<sup>b</sup>.” ’
 And I answered and said, ‘ Amen, O Yahweh.’

Jeremiah instructed again to exhort the people to like effect, and to remind them of the consequences of disobedience.

<sup>6</sup> And Yahweh said unto me, Proclaim all these words in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, saying, Hear ye the words of this covenant, and do them. <sup>7</sup> For I earnestly protested unto your fathers in the day that I brought them up out of the land of Egypt, even unto this day, rising early and protesting, saying, ‘ Harken unto my voice.’ <sup>8</sup> Yet they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear, but walked every one in the stubbornness of their evil heart : so I brought upon them all the words of this covenant,<sup>c</sup> which I commanded them to do, but they did them not.

Chap. xi. 9-17.

This part of the chapter belongs probably to the reign of Jehoiakim, when it had become clear (v. 10) that Josiah's reformation had led to no lasting results.

The present generation has returned<sup>a</sup> to the sins of their forefathers, and the prophet therefore re-affirms against them the sentence of judgement.

<sup>9</sup> And Yahweh said unto me, A conspiracy is found among the men of Judah, and among the inhabitants of Jerusalem. <sup>10</sup> They have returned to the iniquities of their forefathers, which refused to hear my words; and they are gone after other gods to serve them: the house of Israel and the house of Judah have broken my covenant which I made with their fathers. <sup>11</sup> Therefore thus saith Yahweh, Behold, I am bringing evil upon them, which they shall not be able to escape; and they shall cry unto me, but I will not hearken unto them. <sup>12</sup> And the cities of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem shall go, and cry unto the gods unto whom they offer incense: but they shall not save them at all in the time of their trouble. <sup>13</sup> For

according to the number of thy cities are thy gods, O Judah; and according to the number of the streets of Jerusalem have ye set up altars <sup>a</sup>to the shameful thing, even altars<sup>a</sup> to burn incense unto Baal.

Yahweh will accept no intercession on behalf of His people; and hypocritical service will not avail to avert the doom.

<sup>a</sup> Jeremiah appeals to Yahweh, who can test the inmost feelings and purposes both of himself and of his foes, and knows therefore on which side the right lies. The 'reins' (i.e. the kidneys) were regarded by the Hebrews as the seat of feeling (cf. Prov. xxiii. 16 ; Ps. xvi. 7, lxxiii. 21 ; Job xix. 27), as the heart was with them the seat of the understanding (cf. ch. v. 21) : hence when it is said of Yahweh that He 'tries' (i.e. tests or examines), or 'sees,' the 'reins and hearts,' the meaning is that He is cognizant of man's emotions and affections as well as of his purposes and thoughts. Cf. xvii. 10, xx. 12 ; Ps. vii. 9, xxvi. 2.

CHAPTER XII. 7-17.

The prophecy dates probably from c. 598 B.C., when, after Jehoiakim's revolt from Nebuchadnezzar, the territory of Judah was overrun by bands of Syrians, Moabites, and Ammonites (2 Kings xxiv. 1, 2)

A lamentation on the desolation of Judah by its evil-disposed neighbours (v. 14).

The speaker is Yahweh; and the sorrow and reluctance with which He gives up His heritage are pathetically depicted.

<sup>g</sup> So, changing a letter. The Heb. text has, and be ye disappointed (or and they shall be disappointed) of your fruits.

Judah's evil-disposed neighbours will be taken into exile ; but if they adopt from the heart Judah's religion, they will be restored to their own lands.

<sup>14</sup> Thus saith Yahweh concerning all mine evil neighbours, that touch the inheritance which I have caused my people Israel to inherit : Behold I am plucking them up from off their land, and the house of Judah will I pluck up from the midst of them.

<sup>15</sup> And it shall come to pass, after that I have plucked them up, I will turn, and have compassion on them ; and I will bring them back, every man to his inheritance, and every man to his own land.

<sup>16</sup> And it shall come to pass, if they diligently learn the ways of my people, to swear by my name, 'As Yahweh liveth,'<sup>a</sup> even as they taught my people to swear by Baal, then shall they be built up in the midst of my people. <sup>17</sup> But if they do not hear, then will I utterly pluck up that nation, plucking up and destroying it, saith Yahweh.

CHAPTER XIII

Vv. 18, 19 belong clearly to the reign of Jehoiachin (B.C. 597), the rest of the chapter dates, probably, from that of Jehoiakim (B.C. 608–597).

Jeremiah performs a symbolical act, illustrating the corrupt condition of the people, and its consequences.

<sup>1</sup> Thus said Yahweh unto me, Go, and buy thee a linen waist-cloth,<sup>a</sup> and put it upon thy loins, but bring it not into water. <sup>2</sup> So I bought the waist-cloth according to the word of Yahweh, and put it upon my loins.

<sup>3</sup> And the word of Yahweh came unto me a second time, saying, <sup>4</sup> Take the waist-cloth that thou hast bought, which is upon thy loins, and arise, go to Euphrates,<sup>b</sup> and bury it there in a

Perhaps, however, as Pěrāth, when it means the Euphrates, has generally ‘the river’ prefixed, and as a double journey (vv. 5–7) for such a distance is not very probable, the word should be read, with the change of a point, as Parah, the

So I went, and buried it by<sup>a</sup> Euphrates, as Yahweh commanded me. <sup>6</sup> And it came to pass after many days, that Yahweh said unto me, Arise, go to Euphrates, and take the waist-cloth from thence, which I commanded thee to bury there. <sup>7</sup> Then I went to Euphrates, and digged, and took the waist-cloth from the place where I had buried it: and, behold, the waist-cloth was marred,<sup>b</sup> it was profitable for nothing.

<sup>8</sup> And the word of Yahweh came unto me, saying, <sup>9</sup> Thus saith Yahweh, After this manner will I mar the pride of Judah, and the great pride of Jerusalem. <sup>10</sup> This evil people, which refuse to hear my words, which walk in the stubbornness of their heart, and are gone after other gods, to serve them, and to worship them—let it be, then, as this waist-cloth, which is profitable for nothing! <sup>11</sup> For as the waist-cloth cleaveth to the loins of a man,

CHAPTERS XIV.—XV.

XIV. <sup>1</sup> That which came as Yahweh's word unto Jeremiah with regard to the drought.

The prophet, interpreting the drought as a sign of Yahweh's anger, utters a confession and supplication in the name of his people.

<sup>7</sup> ' Though our iniquities testify against us, work<sup>c</sup> thou, O Yahweh, for thy name's sake: for our backturnings are many; against thee have we sinned. <sup>8</sup> O thou hope of Israel, the saviour thereof in the time of trouble, why shouldst thou be as sojourner in the land, and as a wayfaring man that turneth aside to tarry for a night?<sup>d</sup> <sup>9</sup> Why shouldst thou be as a man surprised, as a mighty man<sup>e</sup> that cannot save? yet thou, O Yahweh, art in the midst of us, and thy name hath been called over us ;<sup>a</sup> leave us not.'

Yahweh's reply : He will accept no intercession on behalf of the people.

<sup>10</sup> Thus saith Yahweh of this people : Even so<sup>b</sup> have they loved to wander ; they have not refrained their feet : and Yahweh doth not accept them ; now will he remember their iniquity, and visit their sins.<sup>c</sup> <sup>11</sup> And Yahweh said unto me, ' Pray not for this people for their good. <sup>12</sup> When they fast, I will not hear their cry ; and when they offer burnt-offering and oblation, I will not accept them : but I will consume them by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence.'

<sup>13</sup> And I said, ' Ah, Lord Yahweh ! behold, the prophets say unto them : " Ye shall not see the sword, neither shall ye have famine ; but I will give you assured peace<sup>d</sup> in this place." '

Yahweh replies again : the prophets to whom Jeremiah refers have spoken lies in His name : and the doom of Jerusalem will not be deferred.

<sup>14</sup> And Yahweh said unto me, The prophets prophesy lies in my name : I sent them not, neither have I commanded them, neither spake I unto them : they prophesy unto you a lying vision, and a worthless divination,<sup>a</sup> and the deceit of their own heart.

<sup>15</sup> Therefore thus saith Yahweh concerning the prophets that prophesy in my name, and I sent them not, yet they say, 'Sword and famine shall not be in this land : ' By sword and famine shall those prophets be consumed. <sup>16</sup> And the people to whom they prophesy shall be flung out in the streets of Jerusalem because of the famine and the sword ; and they shall have none to bury them, them, their wives, nor their sons, nor their daughters ; for I will pour their wickedness upon them. <sup>17</sup> And thou shalt say this word unto them, 'Let mine eyes run down with tears night and day, and let them not cease : for the virgin daughter of my people is broken with a great breach, with a very grievous<sup>b</sup> wound. <sup>18</sup> If I go forth into the field.

then behold the slain with the sword! and if I enter into the city, then behold the torments<sup>a</sup> of famine! yea, both the prophet and the priest have gone as traffickers<sup>b</sup> into a land that they knew not.<sup>c</sup>

Jeremiah, in more beseeching tones, renews his supplication and confession in the name of his people.

<sup>19</sup> 'Hast thou utterly rejected Judah? or hath thy soul loathed Zion? why then hast thou smitten us, and there is no healing for us? we wait for peace, but no good cometh; and for a time of healing, but behold dismay! <sup>20</sup> We acknowledge,<sup>d</sup> O Yahweh, our wickedness, and the iniquity of our fathers: for we have sinned against thee. <sup>21</sup> Do not contemn (us), for thy name's sake; do not treat with contumely the throne of thy glory: remember, break not thy covenant with us. <sup>22</sup> Are there any among the vanities<sup>e</sup> of the nations that can cause rain ? or can the heavens give the winter-rains ? art not thou Yahweh our God ? and we wait for thee ; for thou hast made all these things.’

The prophet's intercession is rejected even more decisively than before : the fate of Judah is sealed.

XV. <sup>1</sup> And Yahweh said unto me, Though Moses and Samuel stood before me, yet my mind<sup>a</sup> would not be toward this people : send them away from before me, and let them go forth. <sup>2</sup> And it shall come to pass, when they say unto thee, ‘ Whither shall we go forth ? ’ that thou shalt tell them, Thus saith Yahweh : Such as are for death,<sup>b</sup> to death ; and such as are for the sword, to the sword ; and such as are for famine, to famine ; and such as are for captivity, to captivity. <sup>3</sup> And I will appoint over them four kinds,<sup>c</sup> saith Yahweh : the sword to slay, and the dogs to drag, and the fowls of the heaven and the beasts of the earth to devour and to destroy. <sup>4</sup> And I will make them a consternation<sup>d</sup> to all the kingdoms of the earth, because of Manasseh the son of Hezekiah king of Yahweh reassures him: The time will come when his enemies, crushed by the Chaldaean power, and with exile imminent before them, will come to implore his help.

<sup>e</sup> If Jeremiah turns back from his distrust and despair, then Yahweh will co-operate with him, and help him again to resume his place as His minister. To stand before any one is to wait upon him, or be his servant (see e.g. Deut. i. 38 ; 1 Kings x. 8, xii. 8 ; and of the Levites, performing menial offices for the worshippers, Num. xvi. 9). It is used of the priests, as God's ministers, Deut. xvii. 12, xviii. 10 al. ; and of a prophet, as here, specially of Elijah and Elisha, 1 Kings xvii. 1, xviii. 15, 2 Kings iii. 14, v. 16.

from the common,<sup>a</sup> thou shalt be as my mouth<sup>b</sup> : they may return unto thee ; but thou shalt not return unto them. <sup>20</sup> And I will make thee unto this people a fortified wall of bronze : and they shall fight against thee, but they shall not prevail against thee : for I am with thee to save thee and to deliver thee, saith Yahweh. <sup>21</sup> And I will deliver thee out of the hand of the wicked, and I will redeem thee from the clutch<sup>c</sup> of the terrible.

<sup>a</sup> I.e., probably, if thou separatest, like a refiner, what is pure and divine in thee from the slag of earthly passion and weakness, with which it is mixed.

CHAPTERS XVI. 1—XVII. 18.

Further predictions of the coming disaster.

Jeremiah is not to be the father of a family: for a terrible end will ere long overtake the families of Judah.

XVI. <sup>1</sup> And the word of Yahweh came unto me, saying, <sup>2</sup> Thou shalt not take thee a wife, neither shalt thou have sons or daughters in this place. <sup>3</sup> For thus saith Yahweh concerning the sons and concerning the daughters that are born in this place, and concerning their mothers that bare them, and concerning their fathers that begat them in this land: <sup>4</sup> They shall die of grievous deaths<sup>a</sup>; they shall not be bewailed; neither shall they be buried; they shall be as dung upon the face of the ground: and they shall be consumed by the sword, and by famine; and their carcasses shall be food for the fowls of heaven, and for the beasts of the earth.

He is to take no part in either the domestic sorrows or the domestic joys of his people : for a time is coming in which there will be no place for either.

<sup>b</sup> Marks of mourning : see Deut. xiv. 1, Am. viii. 10, Mic. i. 16, Is. xxii. 12.

<sup>c</sup> The allusion is to the custom, according to which, when the first outbreak of grief had subsided, the friends of the mourners would endeavour to comfort them, and induce them to take food (cf. 2 Sam. iii. 35, xii. 17). Food partaken of in this way was 'unclean,' on account of the mourners having been in close proximity to a corpse : cf. the allusions in Deut. xxvi. 14 ; Hos. ix. 4 ; Ez. xxiv. 17

<sup>9</sup> For thus saith Yahweh of hosts, the God of Israel : Behold, I am making to cease out of this place, before your eyes and in your days, the voice of mirth and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride.

<sup>10</sup> And it shall come to pass, when thou shalt declare unto this people all these words, and they shall say unto thee, ' Wherefore hath Yahweh pronounced all this great evil against us ? or what is our iniquity, or what is our sin, wherewith we have sinned against Yahweh our God ? ' <sup>11</sup> that thou shalt say unto them, ' Because your fathers have forsaken me, saith Yahweh, and have walked after other gods, and have served them, and have worshipped them, but me they have forsaken, and my law they have not kept ; <sup>12</sup> and ye have done evil more than your fathers ; for, behold, ye walk every one after the stubbornness of his evil heart, so that ye hearken not unto me.' <sup>13</sup> And I will hurl you forth out of this land into the land that ye know not, neither ye nor your fathers : and there shall ye serve other gods day and night ; for I will grant you no favour.

The two following verses recur (with slight verbal differences) in xxiii. 7, 8, where they form a suitable close to the preceding prophecy. It is hardly possible that they can have originally stood here at all; for the context, on both sides, relates to Judah's approaching exile, and vv. 16-18 continue the line of thought of vv. 10-13.

<sup>14</sup> Therefore, behold, the days are coming, saith Yahweh, that it shall no more be said, 'As Yahweh liveth, which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt'; <sup>15</sup> but, 'As Yahweh liveth, which brought up the children of Israel from the north country, and from all the countries whither he had driven them': and I will bring them back into their land that I gave unto their fathers.

(Continuation of vv. 10-13.)

<sup>16</sup> Behold, I will send many fishers, saith Yahweh, and they shall fish them; and afterward I will send many hunters, and they shall hunt them, from every mountain, and from every hill, and out of the chinks of the rocks. <sup>17</sup> For mine eyes are upon all their ways: they are not hid from my face, neither is their iniquity concealed from mine eyes. <sup>18</sup> And <sup>a</sup> I will recompense their iniquity and their sin double ; because they have polluted my land with the dead bodies of their detestable things,<sup>b</sup> and have filled mine inheritance with their abominations.

Yahweh is the prophet's hope and strength ; and the time will come when He will be recognized, even by the heathen, as the true God. Meanwhile Judah will be taught by Yahweh, who it is that they have rejected.

<sup>19</sup> O Yahweh, my strength and my stronghold, and my refuge in the day of trouble, unto thee shall nations come from the ends of the earth, and shall say, ' Only lies have our fathers inherited ; even vanity, and things among which there is none that profiteth.'<sup>c</sup> <sup>20</sup> Should a man make gods unto himself, which yet are no gods ? <sup>21</sup> Therefore, behold, I will cause them to know, this once will I cause them to know mine hand and my might ; and they shall know that my name is Yahweh.

<sup>a</sup> So Sept. The Heb. text adds first, which must mean, before the restoration promised in vv. 14, 15. But the word harmonizes badly with the thought of vv. 17, 18 ; and most probably it is a gloss, added after vv. 14, 15 were inserted in their present place.

<sup>c</sup> Cf. ii. 8, 11, 1 Sam. xii. 21, Isa. xliv. 9, 10.

<sup>c</sup> Upon which, in rites of atonement, some of the blood was put (Lev. iv. 7, 18, 25, etc.). But here they are represented as polluted by the blood of idolatrous sacrifices.

<sup>d</sup> The 'Ashérah' was a roughly-hewn wooden pole,—representing, it is probable, a sacred tree,—planted beside an altar, and condemned by the spiritually-minded Israelites on account of its heathen associations : see Ex. xxxiv. 13, Deut. xii. 3, xvi. 21, 1 Kings xiv. 15, 23, 2 Kings xxi. 3, 7, etc.

<sup>e</sup> Often alluded to as places of idolatrous rites : Deut. xii. 2, 1 Kings xiv. 23, Jer. ii. 20, iii. 6, 13, etc.

<sup>f</sup> The meaning is supposed to be (Graf), when their children, beside every spreading tree, and every high hill, remember the altars and Ashérim, by which their fathers sinned : this is evidence how deeply engraven upon the heart of the nation its sin is. But the sense thus obtained is forced. Keil renders : As (they) think of their children, (so they think of) their altars, etc. ; they are as devoted to them as to their own children : but this requires more to be supplied than is legitimate. There must be some error in the text, though we cannot be sure exactly where it lies. Duhm (with whom Cornill agrees) supposes that the words, when their children remember their altars and their Ashérim, are a gloss, added by a later hand, to illustrate how inveterate Israel's sin must have been if even generations living mountain in the field,<sup>a</sup> thy substance and all thy treasures I will give for a spoil, and thy high places, because of sin, throughout all thy borders.

<sup>4</sup> And thou shalt withdraw thine hand from<sup>b</sup> thine heritage that I gave thee ; and I will make thee to serve thine enemies in the land which thou knowest not : for ye have kindled a fire in mine anger, which shall burn for ever.<sup>c</sup>

It is useless to trust in man : Yahweh, to those who put their trust in Him and act righteously (vv. 9-11), is the sole source of strength in the hour of trouble.

long afterwards still thought of their fathers' idolatries : if this view be adopted, the original passage will run—

*The sin of Judah is written with a pen of iron,
 With a point of adamant is it graven upon the tablet of their heart,*

Upon the horns of their altars, upon [every] spreading tree, Upon the high hills, the mountains in the field (see the next note.)

<sup>a</sup> If the text is correct, a designation of Jerusalem (cf. xxi. 13). But the designation is a very strange one, and perhaps the words, pointed so as to mean 'the mountains in the field' (cf. xiii. 27 'on the hills in the field'), should be attached to the end of v. 2 : see the last note.)

<sup>c</sup> Vv. 3 (from 'thy substance'), 4 (from 'and I will make') are nearly identical with xv. 13, 14.

trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm, but whose heart from Yahweh turneth aside. <sup>6</sup> He shall be like a juniper tree<sup>a</sup> in the steppe, and shall not see when good cometh; but he shall inhabit parched places in the wilderness, a salt land and not inhabited.

<sup>7</sup> Blessed is the man that trusteth in Yahweh, and whose confidence Yahweh is. <sup>8</sup> He shall be as a tree planted by the waters, and that stretcheth out its roots to the stream, and he shall not fear<sup>b</sup> when heat cometh, but his leaf shall be spreading; and in the year of drought he shall not be anxious, neither shall he cease from yielding fruit. <sup>9</sup> The heart is deceitful above all things, and it is desperately sick: who can know it? <sup>10</sup> I Yahweh search the heart, and try the reins; and give unto every man according to his ways, according to the fruit of his doings. <sup>11</sup> (Like) a partridge that gathereth (young) which she hath not brought forth,<sup>c</sup> is he

<sup>c</sup> Alluding, it is supposed, to a popular belief (arising perhaps out of the unusually large number of eggs laid by it) that the partridge brooded on eggs which were not its own: the young birds soon forsake their false mother, and so does wealth its unjust possessor. Or perhaps the words should be rendered, that getteth riches, but not by right : in the midst of his days he shall leave them, and at his end he shall be a fool.<sup>a</sup> 12 A glorious throne, on high from the beginning, is the place of our sanctuary ! 13 O Yahweh, the hope of Israel, all that forsake thee shall be put to shame ; they that turn aside from thee<sup>b</sup> shall be written on the earth,<sup>c</sup> because they have forsaken Yahweh, the fountain of springing waters.<sup>d</sup>

14 Heal me, Yahweh, and I shall be healed ; save me, and I shall be saved : for thou art my praise.
15 Behold, they say unto me, ' Where is the word that heapeth together (eggs), but doth not bring forth (young)—with allusion to the large number of eggs laid by the partridge, which are eagerly sought for by the Arabs as food, so that the bird often hatches no young (Tristram, NHB. p. 224 f.).

<sup>a</sup> I.e. he will show himself to be morally and spiritually blinded (the word does not mean ' fool ' in an intellectual sense : see the glossary in the writer's Parallel Psalter, p. 457).

<sup>b</sup> So Vulg. Targ. The Heb. text has, me (one letter dropped out).

<sup>c</sup> I.e. (if the text is correct) on the soft soil from which their names will soon be obliterated. But the expression is a strange one, and the text is open to suspicion. Plausible emendations are (Ewald, Cornill, Duhm), ' they that turn aside from thee in the land shall be brought to confusion,' and (Giesebrecht), ' they that turn aside from thee shall be cut off from the earth' (Ps. xxxiv. 17).

of Yahweh? let it come, pray.<sup>a</sup> 16 As for me, I have not hastened from being a shepherd<sup>b</sup> after thee; neither have I desired the woeful day; thou knowest: that which came out of my lips was before thy face.<sup>c</sup> 17 Be not a (cause of) dismay unto me: thou art my refuge in the day of evil. 18 Let them be put to shame that persecute me, but let not me be put to shame: let them be dismayed, but let not me be dismayed: bring upon them the day of evil, and destroy them with double destruction.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>b</sup> Fig. for a prophet—an application which does not occur elsewhere. Giesebrecht, Duhm, and Cornill, vocalizing one word (with Aq. Symm.) differently, read, I have not hastened after thee because of evil, i.e., I have not run after thee, importuning thee to bring on the evil day: the clause will then be parallel with the following one.

<sup>c</sup> Jer. protests that he has not shrunk from following Yahweh as a prophet, or announced the day of woe, because (as his enemies declared) he desired it: Yahweh knows that he is speaking the truth; why, then, should He abandon him to his foes?

CHAPTER XVII. 19-27.

An exhortation to observe the Sabbath.

<sup>b</sup> So, changing a letter (see Deut. iv. 15, Josh. xxiii. 11). The text has, in.

might not receive instruction.<sup>a</sup> <sup>24</sup> And it shall come to pass, if ye diligently hearken unto me, saith Yahweh, to bring in no burden through the gates of this city on the sabbath day, but to hallow the sabbath day, to do no work therein; <sup>25</sup> then shall there enter in by the gates of this city kings [and princes]<sup>b</sup> sitting upon the throne of David, riding in chariots and on horses, they and their princes, the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem: and this city shall be inhabited<sup>c</sup> for ever. <sup>26</sup> And they shall come from the cities of Judah; and from the places round about Jerusalem, and from the land of Benjamin, and from the lowland, and from the hill country, and from the South,<sup>d</sup> bringing burnt offerings, and sacrifices, and oblations, and frankincense, and bringing (sacrifices of)

<sup>b</sup> The bracketed words are here out of place: 'princes' would not be sitting on the throne, or have 'their princes' under them. They must be an addition, older than the Sept., which has crept in from a reminiscence of ii. 26, xxv. 18, xxxii. 32, xliv. 17, 21. For 'kings sitting,' etc., comp. xiii. 13, xxii. 4, <sup>c</sup> Heb. shall sit. A city or land, when it is inhabited and flourishing, is said in Heb. to 'sit'; so v. 6, Isa. xiii. 20, Jer. i. 13, 39 al.

<sup>d</sup> Three districts of Judah: the low hills and flat valley-land stretching down towards the Philistine plain on the W. and S.W.; the elevated 'hill country' about Hebron; and the Negeb (see on xiii. 19), or the 'South.' See Josh. xv. 33-44; 48-60; 21-32 (where the cities in each are enumerated); and cf. Deut. i. 7, Josh. x. 40, Jer. xxxii. 44, xxxiii. 13.

thanksgiving<sup>a</sup> unto the house of Yahweh. <sup>27</sup> But if ye hearken not unto me to hallow the sabbath day, and not to bear a burden and enter in at the gates of Jerusalem on the sabbath day, <sup>b</sup> I will kindle a fire in the gates thereof, and it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem,<sup>b</sup> and not be quenched.

CHAPTER XVIII.

A lesson from the potter.

XVIII. <sup>1</sup> The word which came to Jeremiah from Yahweh, saying, <sup>2</sup> Arise, and go down to the potter's house, and there I will cause thee to hear my words. <sup>3</sup> So I went down to the potter's house, and, behold, he was doing (his) work upon the wheels.<sup>a</sup> <sup>4</sup> And if the vessel that he was making of the clay was marred in the hand of the potter, he would make it again into another vessel, as seemed good to the potter to make it.

As the potter, if the need arises, can change the vessel that he is making into another, so can Yahweh deal with His people : if it repents, He can withdraw His threats ; if it does evil, He can revoke His promises.

<sup>5</sup> Then the word of Yahweh came unto me, saying, <sup>6</sup> O house of Israel, cannot I do with you as this potter ? saith Yahweh. Behold, as the clay in the potter's hand, so are ye in mine hand, O house of Israel. <sup>7</sup> At one moment I speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom, to pluck up, and to break down, and to destroy it; <sup>8</sup> but if that nation, concerning which I have spoken, turn from its evil, then I repent me of the evil that I thought to do unto it. <sup>9</sup> And at another moment I speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom, to build and to plant it; <sup>10</sup> but if it do evil in my sight, that it hearken not to my voice, then I repent of the good, wherewith I said I would benefit it.

<sup>a</sup> Heb. on the two (circular) stones, the lower one being turned by the feet (cf. Eccclus. xxxviii. 29), and the upper (on the same vertical axle) supporting the clay. See the illustration in Encycl. Bibl. iii. 3820 (Fig. 8), or Thomson, The Land and the Book, Southern Pal., p. 35 (in the one vol. ed., p. 521)

Let Judah, then, repent, in order that the threatened doom may be averted.

<sup>11</sup> Now, therefore, go to, speak to the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, saying, Thus saith Yahweh: Behold I am framing<sup>a</sup> evil against you, and devising a device against you: return, I pray you, every one from his evil way, and amend your ways and your doings.

But Judah refuses to repent; and so the judgement originally pronounced is re-affirmed.

<sup>12</sup> But they say, 'There is no hope:<sup>b</sup> for we will walk after our own devices, and we will execute every one the imagination of his evil heart' <sup>13</sup> Therefore thus saith Yahweh: Ask ye, now, among the nations, who hath heard such things? the virgin of Israel hath done very greatly an horrible thing. <sup>14</sup> Doth the snow of Lebanon leave<sup>a</sup> the rock of the field?<sup>b</sup> or are the cold<sup>c</sup> flowing streams dried up<sup>d</sup>? <sup>15</sup> For my people have forgotten me, they burn incense unto worthlessness;<sup>e</sup> and they have been made to stumble in their ways, in the old tracks,<sup>f</sup> to walk in by-paths, in a way not

<sup>b</sup> I.e. (if the text is correct) Lebanon itself, rising up out of the level land around it. But the expression is a strange one, and Duhm would read, Doth the hoar frost leave Sirion (Ps. xxix. 6,—the Phœnician name of Hermon, Deut. iii. 9), the snow Lebanon? (מִצֹּר יִרְדֵּי for כַּפּוֹר יִרְדֵּי).

<sup>d</sup> So, transposing two letters. The Heb. text has, plucked up (viz. like a tree: an idea unsuitable to 'waters'). The text of this verse is in parts open to suspicion, but the general sense is clear. The snow of Lebanon never fails; its gushing streams (Cant. iv. 15) never dry up (cf. Encycl. Bibl. iii. 2757); what a contrast to Israel's fickleness (v. 15)!

cast up ; <sup>16</sup> to make their land an appalment,<sup>a</sup> and a perpetual hissing ; everyone that passeth by it shall be appalled, and shake his head. <sup>17</sup> I will scatter them like a sirocco<sup>b</sup> before the enemy ; I will look upon them with the back, and not the face,<sup>c</sup> in the day of their calamity.

<sup>18</sup> Then said they, 'Come, and let us devise devices against Jeremiah ; for direction<sup>d</sup> will not perish from the priest, nor counsel from the wise, nor the word from the prophet.<sup>e</sup> Come, and let us

<sup>a</sup> The same Heb. word means also desolation ; and this sense is probably also in the prophet's mind. Cf. xix. 8 ; xxv. 9, 11, 18, 38, and elsewhere.

<sup>d</sup> I.e. direction to the laity what to do on points of ceremonial observance : see the note on viii. 8.

<sup>e</sup> They cannot imagine that the time will ever come when, smite him with the tongue,<sup>a</sup> and let us not give heed to any of his words.'

Jeremiah's prayer that their plots against him may be frustrated.

<sup>19</sup> Give heed to me, Yahweh, and hearken to the voice of them that contend with me. <sup>20</sup> Should evil be recompensed for good, that they have digged a pit for my soul? Remember how I stood before thee to speak good for them, to turn back thy fury from them. <sup>21</sup> Therefore deliver up their children to the famine, and give them over to the power of the sword;<sup>b</sup> and let their wives become childless, and widows; and let their men be slain of death,<sup>c</sup> and their young men smitten of the sword in battle. <sup>22</sup> Let a cry be heard from their houses, when thou shalt bring a troop suddenly upon them: for they have digged a pit to take me, and traps have they hidden for my feet. <sup>23</sup> Yet thou, Yahweh, knowest all their counsel against me as Jeremiah declared, the State would come to an end, and the priest, the wise man, and the prophet be no longer able to fulfil their various vocations. Cf. Ezek. vii. 26.

CHAPTERS XIX.-XX.

The lesson of the broken cruse, and its consequences.

The date, to judge from the distinctness with which Babylon is mentioned (xx. 4-6), will be after Nebuchadnezzar's victory at Carchemish (see on xxv. 1), though probably still in the reign of Jehoiakim, i.e. between 605 and 597 B.C.

Jeremiah, prophesying in the Valley of the son of Hinnom, teaches, by an effective symbolism, that the disaster, impending upon the nation, will be final and irretrievable.

XIX. <sup>1</sup> Thus said Yahweh: Go, and buy a potter's earthen cruse,<sup>a</sup> and take<sup>b</sup> of the elders of the people, and of the elders of the priests; <sup>2</sup> and go forth unto the valley of the son of Hinnom, which is by the entry of the potsherd gate,<sup>c</sup> and proclaim

<sup>c</sup> Probably a gate near which broken earthenware, etc., was thrown, or, perhaps, crushed, as it is now (Quarterly Statements of the Pal. Expl. Fund, 1904, p. 136), on a flat rock, with heavy stone rollers, into dust from which a cement is made, used for plastering cisterns. The place where this is now done is near the Birket es-Sultan, a pool at the S.W. of the city, in the upper part of what was probably the ancient Valley of Hinnom.

<sup>a</sup> The Heb. text has, overseer, ruler: but the expression is peculiar; and 'ruler' is probably a gloss, identifying Jeremiah's 'overseer' (see xxix. 26) with the 'ruler' often mentioned in later times in connexion with the Temple, 1 Chron. ix. 11 (= Neh. xi. 11), 2 Chron. xxxi. 13, xxxv. 8.

<sup>b</sup> Probably the N. gate (the territory of Benjamin being on the N. of Jerusalem) of the inner court of the Temple, which, as the Temple was at the top of the hill of Zion, was higher than the larger 'outer' court surrounding it, and is called the 'upper' court in ch. xxxvi. 10, the gate from the N. leading into it being called similarly the 'upper' gate in Ezek. ix. 2, 2 Kings xv. 35.

<sup>c</sup> I.e. Terror on every side: cf. the same expression in v. 10, vi. 25, xlvi. 5, xlix. 29; Lam. ii. 22.

<sup>a</sup> Pashhur and his friends represented a policy opposed to that of Jeremiah : they believed that fear of the Chaldaeans was groundless, and that with the help of Egypt Judah would be able to resist them successfully. The name here given to him is intended to describe partly the consternation of which he will be the centre, partly the consternation which he will experience himself, when the fatal consequences of his policy have become apparent to all in the fall of the city, and exile of the nation, at the hands of the Chaldaeans.

A warning addressed to the royal house. Only by the strict observance of justice can the coming doom be averted.

Apparently a misplaced fragment. V. 12 is parallel in general thought to xxii. 3, 5, but is out of connexion with either xxi. 1-10 or xxi. 13-14.

Yahweh is against Jerusalem, and will punish her inhabitants for their wrong-doing.

A poetical epilogue to vv. 1-10.

lies neither in a 'vale,' nor upon a 'rock' rising out of a 'plain,' or table-land; and its elevation is such (2,500 feet above the Mediterranean Sea) that a foe could not be said naturally to 'come down' upon it. It is possible that the verse was written originally with reference to some other city (the mishōr, or 'plain,' is commonly used of the 'table-land' upon which the principal cities of Moab lay, Jer. xlviii. 8, 21), but placed here by the compiler of the book of Jeremiah, who treated it as referring to Jerusalem.

Vv. 19-20 recur, with unimportant differences, in xxx. 23, 24; and it is doubtful if they are here in their original place. The word massā ('oracle,' 'burden'), which was applied mockingly to the prophecies of the true prophets, to be no more used in Judah.

To understand the following paragraph, it is necessary to remember the double sense of the Heb. massā. Massā means something lifted or taken up, i.e. either literally a burden, or fig.

something taken up upon the lips, a solemn utterance, or oracle (see RVm. of 2 Kings ix. 26 [where 'uttered' is lit. took up], Is. xiii. 1, xv. 1, etc.). It seems that on account of Jeremiah's prophecies being so constantly of coming disaster, this term was applied to them derisively in the sense of burden, and hence it is forbidden to be in future used in Judah: people are not to ask a prophet, 'What massā have you?' but 'What hath Yahweh answered?' or 'What hath Yahweh said?' At the same time Yahweh retorts the people's word upon themselves by saying, 'Not my words, but you yourselves, are the "burden"; and I will no longer be burdened with you; I will cast you from me!'

<sup>33</sup> And when this people, or the prophet, or a priest, shall ask thee, saying, 'What is Yahweh's massā ('oracle')?' then shalt thou say unto them, 'Ye are the massā ("burden")!<sup>a</sup> and I will cast you off,' saith Yahweh. <sup>34</sup> And as for the prophet, and the priest, and the people, that shall say, 'Yahweh's oracle,' I will punish that man and his house. <sup>35</sup> Thus shall ye say every one to his neighbour, and every one to his brother, 'What hath Yahweh answered?' and, 'What hath Yahweh spoken?' <sup>36</sup> But Yahweh's 'oracle' ye shall mention<sup>b</sup> no more: for every man's own word is his oracle, and ye pervert the words of the living God, of Yahweh of hosts, our God. <sup>37</sup> Thus shalt thou say to the prophet, 'What hath Yahweh answered thee?' and 'What hath Yahweh spoken?'

<sup>38</sup> But if ye say, 'Yahweh's oracle,' therefore thus saith Yahweh: Because ye say this word, 'Yahweh's oracle,' and I have sent unto you, saying, Ye shall not say, 'Yahweh's oracle'; <sup>39</sup> therefore, behold, here I am, and I will surely take you up,<sup>a</sup> and cast you off, and the city that I gave you and your fathers, away from before me: <sup>40</sup> and I will lay upon you everlasting reproach, and a perpetual confusion which shall not be forgotten.

<sup>a</sup> So Sept. Syr. Vulg. (with a play on massā, something 'taken up'). The Heb. text has, I will surely forget you (the two words are very similar in Hebrew).

The different characters and destinies of the Jews taken into exile with Jehoiachin (B.C. 597), and of those remaining in the city with Zedekiah, as symbolized by two baskets of figs, seen by Jeremiah in a vision.

XXIV. <sup>1</sup> Yahweh shewed me,<sup>a</sup> and, behold, two baskets of figs set before Yahweh's temple, after that Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon had carried into exile Jeconiah, the son of Jehoiakim, king of Judah, and the princes of Judah, and the craftsmen, and the smiths,<sup>b</sup> from Jerusalem, and had brought them to Babylon. <sup>2</sup> One basket had very good figs, like the figs that are first ripe : and the other basket had very bad figs, which could not be eaten, they were so bad.

CHAPTER XXV

The Babylonian supremacy foretold.

Jeremiah, in accordance with the view to which he was led by the defeat of the Egyptians at Carchemish, B.C. 605 (see the Introduction to ch. xlvi.), that the Chaldaeans were destined to become the rulers of Western Asia, declares here, first that Judah and the surrounding nations (vv. 1-14) will be subject to them for seventy years, and afterwards that the then known world generally (vv. 15-38) will fall into their hands.

XXV. <sup>1</sup> The word that came to Jeremiah concerning all the people of Judah in the fourth year of Jehoiakim,<sup>a</sup> the son of Josiah, king of Judah (the same was the first year of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon); <sup>2</sup> the which Jeremiah the prophet spake unto all the people of Judah, and to all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, saying: <sup>3</sup> From the thirteenth year of Josiah, the son of Amon, king of Judah, even unto this day, now three and twenty years,<sup>b</sup>

the word of Yahweh hath come unto me, and I have spoken unto you, rising early and speaking; but ye have not hearkened. <sup>4</sup> And Yahweh hath sent unto you all his servants the prophets, rising early and sending them,—though ye have not hearkened, nor inclined your ear to hear,—<sup>5</sup> saying, ‘Return, I pray you, every one from his evil way, and from the evil of your doings, and dwell in the land that Yahweh hath given unto you and to your fathers, from of old and even for evermore<sup>a</sup>: <sup>6</sup> and go not after other gods to serve them, and to worship them, and vex me not with the work of your hands: and I will do you no hurt.’ <sup>7</sup> But ye hearkened not unto me, saith Yahweh, that ye might vex me with the work of your hands to your own hurt.<sup>b</sup>

Judah, therefore, not less than the neighbouring countries, will be laid waste by the Chaldeans, and be subject to them for seventy years.

<sup>8</sup> Therefore thus saith Yahweh of hosts: Because ye have not heard my words, <sup>9</sup> behold, I will send and take all the families of the north, saith Yahweh, <sup>c</sup>and (I will send) unto Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, my servant,<sup>c</sup> and will bring them

Jeremiah (in a vision) gives the cup of Yahweh's fury to the nations to drink.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>15</sup> For thus said Yahweh, the God of Israel, unto me : Take the cup of the wine of this fury from my hand, and cause all the nations, to whom I send thee, to drink it. <sup>16</sup> And they shall drink, and reel to and fro, and be mad, because of the sword which I am sending among them. <sup>17</sup> And I took the cup from Yahweh's hand, and made all the nations to drink, unto whom Yahweh had sent me : <sup>18</sup> to wit, Jerusalem, and the cities of Judah, and the kings thereof, and the princes thereof, to make them a waste, an appalment, an hissing, and a curse [as it is this day]<sup>b</sup> ; <sup>19</sup> Pharaoh king of Egypt, and his servants, and his princes, and all his people ; <sup>20</sup> and all the mixed people,<sup>c</sup> and all the kings of the land of Uz,<sup>d</sup> and all the kings of the land of the

<sup>b</sup> The bracketed words are omitted in the Sept., and describing, as they do, the agreement of the prediction with the fulfilment, they cannot have formed part of the prophecy of Jehoiakim's fourth year, but must have been added at some period after B.C. 586, during the exile.

Here it is used of the war-shout (cf. Jer. li. 14, where the Heb. word is the same) with which, by a bold anthropomorphism, Jeremiah pictures Yahweh as treading down the nations of the earth.

<sup>c</sup> So Syr. (cf. xiii. 14). Or, and I will dash you in pieces, (and ye shall fall, etc.), might be read. The Heb. text has a peculiar form, which is very doubtfully rendered, I will scatter you.

no way to flee;<sup>a</sup> and none shall escape of the noble of the flock. <sup>36</sup> Hark! a cry of the shepherds, and the howling of the noble of the flock! for Yahweh is laying waste their pasture. <sup>37</sup> And the peaceful meadows shall be brought to silence because of the fierce anger of Yahweh. <sup>38</sup> He hath forsaken his covert, as a lion: for their land is become an appalment,<sup>b</sup> because of the oppressing sword,<sup>c</sup> and because of his fierce anger.

(with omission of ונפצתם 'and ye shall be dashed in pieces,' as a faulty anticipation of ונפלתם 'and ye shall fall,' and with ככרי for ככלי)

<sup>a</sup> Heb. refuge shall perish from the shepherds,—an idiomatic expression found also in Am. ii. 14; Job xi. 20; Ps. cxlii. 4 (Heb. 5).

<sup>b</sup> Or, a desolation. The meaning is, Judah being now a desolation, Yahweh is obliged to leave it, just as a lion has to leave its lair when it has been destroyed. The past tenses are so-called 'prophetic' pasts, describing the future as though it had already taken place.

CHAPTER XXVI

Jeremiah, warning the people publicly that, unless they mend their ways, the Temple will share the same fate which of old befel the sanctuary of Shiloh, escapes narrowly with his life.

The occasion is generally considered to be the same as that which forms the subject of ch. vii., ch. vii. reporting more fully what Jeremiah said, and this chapter describing at length what is not mentioned in ch. vii., the personal consequences to Jeremiah himself. V. 1 fixes the date to B.C. 608, or shortly after.

XXVI. <sup>1</sup>In the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim, the son of Josiah, king of Judah, came this word from Yahweh, saying, <sup>2</sup>Thus saith Yahweh : Stand in the court of Yahweh's house, and speak unto all the cities of<sup>a</sup> Judah, which come to worship in Yahweh's house, all the words that I have commanded thee to speak unto them ; keep not back a word. <sup>3</sup> It may be they will hearken, and turn every man from his evil way, that I may repent me of the evil, which I am purposing to do unto them because of the evil of their doings.<sup>a</sup> <sup>4</sup> And thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith Yahweh : If ye hearken not unto me, to walk in my law, which I have set before you,<sup>b</sup> <sup>5</sup> to hearken to the words of my servants the prophets, whom I send unto you,<sup>c</sup> rising up early and sending them, but ye have not hearkened ; <sup>6</sup> then will I make this house like Shiloh,<sup>d</sup> and this city I will make a curse to all the nations of the earth.

Jeremiah is attacked on account of what he had said by the priests and prophets opposed to him.

<sup>7</sup> And the priests and the prophets<sup>e</sup> and all the people heard Jeremiah speaking these words in Yahweh's house. <sup>8</sup> And it came to pass, when Jeremiah had made an end of speaking all that Yahweh had commanded him to speak unto all the people, that the priests and the prophets <sup>a</sup>and all the people<sup>a</sup> laid hold on him, saying, 'Thou shalt surely die. <sup>9</sup> Wherefore hast thou prophesied in Yahweh's name, saying, "This house shall be like Shiloh, and this city shall be desolate without an inhabitant"?' And all the people were gathered unto Jeremiah in Yahweh's house.

He is saved from death only by the intervention of the princes and the people, who endorse his plea that he has simply spoken as Yahweh had commanded him.

But we are doing a great evil against our own lives.’

Jeremiah thus escapes with his life ; but Uriah, a prophet like-minded with him, falls under the displeasure of the king, and is put to death.

CHAPTERS XXVII.—XXIX.

Jeremiah, on three separate occasions, insists that there is no prospect of a speedy deliverance from the yoke of the king of Babylon, or of a speedy return of the sacred vessels which Nebuchadnezzar had carried away with Jehoiachin in 597 to Babylon.

(1) Chap. xxvii

The yoke of the king of Babylon not yet to be broken.

In the fourth year (see xxviii. 1) of Zedekiah (B.C. 593), the kings of Edom, Moab, the Ammonites, Tyre, and Zidon, having invited Zedekiah to join them in revolting from Nebuchadnezzar, Jeremiah sends to warn them of the futility of making any such attempt.

XXVII. <sup>1</sup>In the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah,<sup>a</sup> the son of Josiah, king of Judah, came this word unto Jeremiah from Yahweh, saying, <sup>2</sup>Thus saith Yahweh to me: Make thee thongs and bars,<sup>b</sup> and put them upon thy neck, <sup>3</sup> and send<sup>a</sup> to the king of Edom, and to the king of Moab, and to the king of the children of Ammon, and to the king of Tyre, and to the king of Zidon, by the hand of the messengers which are come to Jerusalem unto Zedekiah, king of Judah; <sup>4</sup> and give them a charge unto their masters, saying, ‘ Thus saith Yahweh of hosts, the God of Israel, Thus shall ye say unto your masters: <sup>5</sup> I have made the earth, the man and the beast that are upon the face of the earth, by my great power and by my stretched out arm; and I give it unto whom it seemeth right unto me. <sup>6</sup> And now I have given all these lands into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar, the king of Babylon, my servant; and the beasts of the field also have I given him to serve him. <sup>7</sup> And<sup>b</sup> all the nations shall serve him, and his son, and his son’s son, until the time of his land come, even his also: and then many nations and great kings shall serve themselves of him.<sup>c</sup> <sup>8</sup> And it shall come to pass, that the nation and the kingdom which <sup>d</sup>will not serve him, even Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, and that<sup>d</sup>

<sup>c</sup> I.e. use him as their servant (cf. xxv. 14, with the note). There is a play on the double use of the word ‘serve.’

will not put their neck into the yoke of the king of Babylon, with the sword, and with the famine, and with the pestilence will I punish that nation, saith Yahweh, until I have given<sup>a</sup> them into his hand. <sup>9</sup> But ye, hearken not ye to your prophets, nor to your diviners, nor to your dreamers,<sup>b</sup> nor to your soothsayers, nor to your sorcerers, which speak unto you, saying, 'Ye shall not serve the king of Babylon': <sup>10</sup> for they prophesy a lie unto you, in order to remove you far from your land; and that I should drive you out and ye should perish. <sup>11</sup> But the nation that shall bring their neck into the yoke of the king of Babylon, and serve him, I will leave them in their own land, saith Yahweh; and they shall till it, and dwell therein.'

<sup>12</sup> Unto Zedekiah king of Judah, also, spake I according to all these words, saying, 'Bring your necks into the yoke of the king of Babylon, and serve him and his people, and live. <sup>13</sup> Why will ye die, thou and thy people, by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence, as Yahweh hath

The prophets who promise the speedy restoration of the sacred vessels delude the people with false hopes : even the vessels still left in Jerusalem will also be carried away, and restored only in a still undetermined future.

<sup>16</sup> And to the priests<sup>a</sup> and to all this people spake I, saying, ‘ Thus saith Yahweh : <sup>b</sup> Hearken not to the words of your prophets that prophesy unto you, saying, “ Behold, the vessels of Yahweh’s house shall now shortly be brought back from Babylon : ” for they prophesy a lie unto you. <sup>17</sup> Hearken not <sup>a</sup> Who were unfriendly to Jeremiah, and disposed to listen to the ‘ false ’ prophets ; cf. xxvi. 8, 11, 16.

<sup>b</sup> In verses 16-22 of this chapter the text of the Sept. is much shorter than the Heb. text, the general effect of the differences being that the Sept. speaks only of the captivity of the sacred vessels still left in Jerusalem, and not also, as the Heb. text does, of their restoration.

(2) Chap. xxviii

Hananiah, one of the prophets alluded to in ch. xxvii., announces that within two years the yoke of the Chaldaeans will be broken : the sacred vessels will then be restored, and the exiled Jews will return.

XXVIII. <sup>1</sup> And it came to pass the same year, in the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah king of Judah, in the fourth year, in the fifth month, that Hananiah, the son of Azzur, the prophet, which was of Gibeon,<sup>b</sup> spake unto me in Yahweh's house, in the presence of the priests and of all the people, saying, <sup>2</sup> Thus speaketh Yahweh of hosts, the God of Israel, saying, ' I have broken the yoke of the king of Babylon. <sup>3</sup> Within two years I will bring back into this place all the vessels of Yahweh's house, that Nebuchadnezzar king of

with an emphatic contradiction.*

letters<sup>a</sup> in thine own name unto all the people that are in Jerusalem, and to Zephaniah<sup>b</sup> the son of Maaseiah, the priest, and to all the priests<sup>c</sup>, saying, <sup>26</sup> ‘Yahweh hath made thee priest instead of Jehoiada the priest, that thou shouldest be overseer<sup>d</sup> in Yahweh’s house for every man that is mad, and maketh himself a prophet,<sup>e</sup> that thou shouldest put him in the stocks and in the collar: <sup>27</sup> now, therefore, why hast thou not rebuked Jeremiah of Anathoth, which maketh himself a prophet to you, <sup>28</sup> forasmuch as he hath sent unto us to Babylon, saying, “(The time)<sup>f</sup> is long: build ye houses, and dwell (in them); and plant gardens, and eat the fruit of them”?’ <sup>29</sup> And Zephaniah the priest read this letter in the ears of Jeremiah the prophet.

<sup>b</sup> To judge from xxi. 1, xxxvii. 3, a man of some importance; and probably identical with the Zephaniah who in lii. 24 (= 2 Kings xxv. 18) is called the ‘second priest,’ i.e. the one next in rank to the chief priest.

<sup>d</sup> So Sept. Syr. Targ. Vulg. The Heb. text has, overseers. The office is that which in xx. 1 is represented as held by Pashhur son of Immer.

<sup>e</sup> Or, behaveth as a prophet,—viz. with wild and frenzied gestures, resembling those of a modern dervish, such as sometimes characterized the ancient prophets. Cf. 1 Sam. x. 10, 11, 13, xix. 20-24 (where ‘prophesied’ means acted like a prophet, i.e. behaved excitedly); and the use of the word ‘mad’ (the same word as here) in 2 Kings ix. 11.

<sup>30</sup> Then came the word of Yahweh unto Jeremiah, saying, <sup>31</sup> Send to all the exiles, saying, Thus saith Yahweh concerning Shemaiah the Nehelamite : Because that Shemaiah hath prophesied unto you, and I sent him not, and he hath caused you to trust in a lie, <sup>32</sup> therefore thus saith Yahweh : Behold, I will punish<sup>a</sup> Shemaiah the Nehelamite, and his seed : he shall not have a man to dwell among this people, neither shall he behold the good that I will do unto my people, saith Yahweh ; because he hath spoken defection against Yahweh.<sup>b</sup>

CHAPTERS XXX.—XXXIII.

Prophecies and promises of restoration.

(1) Chap. xxx.

Judah, though she has suffered greatly for her sins, will nevertheless be restored; her exiles will return, and Jerusalem will be rebuilt.

XXX. <sup>1</sup>The word that came to Jeremiah from Yahweh, saying, <sup>2</sup>Thus speaketh Yahweh, the God of Israel, saying, Write thee all the words that I have spoken unto thee in a book. <sup>3</sup>For, behold, the days are coming, saith Yahweh, that I will turn the captivity of my people Israel and Judah, saith Yahweh; and I will bring them back unto the land that I gave to their fathers, and they shall possess it.

<sup>4</sup>And these are the words that Yahweh spake concerning Israel and concerning Judah.

A day of judgement is coming upon the world, out of which, however, Israel will be delivered.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>5</sup> For thus saith Yahweh : (Ye say,) ‘ A voice of trembling have we heard ; there is terror, and no peace.’<sup>b</sup> <sup>6</sup> Ask ye, now, and see whether a man doth travail with child ? why then do I see every man with his hands on his loins, as a woman in travail, and all faces are turned into paleness ?<sup>c</sup> <sup>7</sup> Ah ! for that day is great ; whence is any like it ?<sup>d</sup> and it is a time of trouble for Jacob ; but he shall be saved out of it. <sup>8</sup> And it shall come to pass in that day, saith Yahweh of hosts, that I will break his yoke from off his<sup>e</sup> neck, and will burst his<sup>e</sup> thongs ; and strangers shall no more use him

<sup>a</sup> Comp. the description in Isa. xiii. 6–15 of the terrors accompanying the day of Babylon’s fall, which is also (xiv. 1 f.) to end in Israel’s deliverance ; and the judgement described in Isa. xxiv., which ends similarly (vv. 14, 15, 23, xxv. 1–8).

<sup>b</sup> Yahweh is represented here as quoting the words in which the people are supposed to express their consternation when the judgement breaks upon the earth.

<sup>c</sup> Men do not suffer the pains of child-bearing ; what, then, is the cause of the terror and agony which they are all displaying ?

<sup>d</sup> So the Heb. text. Or, with other vowel-points (AV., RV.), so that none is like it.

<sup>e</sup> So Sept. (except that the pron. is plural, ‘ their ’). The Heb. text has thy (an error due probably to a scribe who supposed Israel to be addressed, and who also, perhaps, had Isa. x. 27 in his mind : see, however, the next clause).

as their servant<sup>a</sup> : <sup>9</sup> but they<sup>b</sup> shall serve Yahweh their God, and David their king,<sup>c</sup> whom I will raise up unto them. <sup>10</sup> And<sup>d</sup> thou, fear thou not, O Jacob, my servant, saith Yahweh : neither be dismayed, O Israel : for, lo, I will save thee from afar, and thy seed from the land of their captivity ; and Jacob shall return, and shall be in rest and at ease, and none shall make him afraid.<sup>e</sup> <sup>11</sup> For I am with thee, saith Yahweh, to save thee : for I will make a full end of all the nations whither I have scattered thee, only of thee will I not make a full end : but I will correct thee with judgement,<sup>f</sup> and will in no wise leave thee unpunished.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>d</sup> Vv. 10, 11 are not in the Sept. They recur in xlvi. 27, 28 (both Heb. and Sept.). The contrast between the promise to Israel and the preceding prophecy of ruin for Egypt (xlvi. 14-26) might suggest that the latter was their more original place, and that they were afterwards added here for the purpose of enhancing the promises of vv. 7*b*, 8 ; see, however, the note, p. 277*f*.

Israel, for her sins, has suffered greatly : ruin and exile have fallen upon her : but now Yahweh will heal her wounds, and she will be freed from her oppressors.

<sup>a</sup> See v. 17. In vv. 12-17 the pronouns are throughout feminine, showing that 'Zion,' i.e. not the place, but the personified community. the 'daughter of Zion,' is addressed. Cf. on vii. 29, x. 17.

<sup>c</sup> Properly, a compressed place, i.e. a bound up wound. So Hos. v. 13 ; cf. the verb 'bound up' in Isa. i. 6.

 17 For I will bring up fresh flesh for thee,<sup>b</sup> and I will heal thee of thy wounds, saith Yahweh; because they have called thee Outcast, (saying,) 'It is Zion; she hath none to seek (after her).'<sup>c</sup>

The exiles will return, Jerusalem will be rebuilt, and again enjoy prosperity, under the rule of an independent prince of David's line.

18 Thus saith Yahweh: Behold, I am turning the captivity of Jacob's tents, and I will have compassion on his dwelling-places; and the city shall be builded upon her own mound,<sup>d</sup> and the palace shall be inhabited<sup>e</sup> after its accustomed manner.
 19 And out of them shall proceed thanksgiving and the voice of those that make merry: and I will multiply them, and they shall not be diminished;<sup>f</sup> I will also glorify them, and they shall not be small.<sup>g</sup> 20 Their children also shall be as aforetime, and their congregation shall be established

<sup>c</sup> I.e. their future native ruler will have the right of access to the altar, and enjoy priestly privileges; comp. the same two verbs in Num. xvi. 5; Lev. xxi. 21, 23; Ezek. xliv. 13.

<sup>d</sup> Heb. hath gone surety for his heart (courage); i.e. who has ever guaranteed to himself the courage to do this of his own accord, unauthorized by me? Cf. Est. vii. 5 (lit. 'whose heart [courage] hath filled him to do so').

• Vv. 23, 24 are nearly identical with xxiii. 19, 20.

(2) Chap. xxxi.

The territory of Ephraim to be again re-peopled and cultivated.

XXXI. <sup>1</sup> At that time, saith Yahweh, I will be a God unto all the families of Israel, and they shall be to me a people. <sup>2</sup> Thus saith Yahweh: The people which survived the sword hath found grace in the wilderness :<sup>a</sup> I will go that I may cause Israel to rest. <sup>3</sup> 'From afar<sup>b</sup> hath Yahweh appeared unto me,<sup>c</sup> (saying,) "And with everlasting love have I loved thee: therefore draw I thee with kindness." ' <sup>4</sup> Again will I build thee, and thou shalt be built, O virgin of Israel: again shalt thou adorn thee with thy timbrels,<sup>d</sup> and go forth in the <sup>a</sup> The 'wilderness' is here fig. of the land of exile: and the meaning is that such of the long-exiled Israelites as have escaped destruction will now find favour from Yahweh in their banishment. The past tense, 'hath found,' is the 'prophetic' past, the prophet viewing the future as accomplished, and describing it accordingly.

<sup>b</sup> I.e. from Zion—the people being supposed to be in the land of their exile.

<sup>c</sup> If 'me' is right, the people in exile must be supposed to be suddenly introduced as speaking in this verse. But the Sept. has unto him (יְהוָה for יָהּ), i.e. unto Israel, which is very possibly right. The verse will then no longer be in inverted commas.

<sup>d</sup> Or, hand-drums, i.e. a ring of wood or metal, covered with a tightly drawn skin, held up in one hand, and struck by the dances of them that make merry. <sup>5</sup> Again shalt thou plant vineyards upon the mountains of Samaria: the planters shall plant, and enjoy<sup>a</sup> the fruit thereof. <sup>6</sup> For there will be a day when the (vineyard-)keepers<sup>b</sup> in the highlands of Ephraim shall cry, 'Arise ye, and let us go up to Zion unto Yahweh our God.'<sup>c</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Heb. treat as common—the first produce of fruit-trees being regarded as sacred, and not used for food (see Lev. xix. 23–25). The same word is used in the same sense in Deut. xx. 6, xxviii. 30.

<sup>b</sup> Or, more generally, (orchard-)keepers. Such seems to be the only legitimate rendering of נְצָרִים: see Job xxvii. 18 ('as a booth which the keeper maketh'); and cf. Isa. xxvii. 3, Prov. xxvii. 18. So 2 Kings xvii. 9 = xviii. 8 (the 'keepers' tower'). נְצָר is to keep: it does not mean to 'watch' in the sense of to look out, but only to 'watch' in the sense of to guard.

<sup>8</sup> Behold, I am bringing them from the north country, and I will gather them from the uttermost corners of the earth, among them the blind and the lame, the woman with child and her that travaileth with child together: a great company shall they return hither. <sup>9</sup> They shall come with weeping, and with supplications will I lead them: I will bring them unto streams of water,<sup>a</sup> in an even way wherein they shall not stumble: for I am become (again) a father to Israel, and Ephraim is my first-born.

virgin rejoice in the dance, and the young men and the old together<sup>a</sup>; and I will turn their mourning into joy, and will comfort them, and make them rejoice from their sorrow. <sup>14</sup> And I will satiate<sup>b</sup> the soul<sup>c</sup> of the priests with fatness,<sup>d</sup> and my people shall be satisfied with my bounty, saith Yahweh.

The prophet hears in imagination Rachel, the mother of Joseph and Benjamin, bewailing from her grave near Ramah the exile of her sons: but Yahweh bids her stay her grief; there is still hope for her sons' return.

<sup>c</sup> I.e. the appetite,—the 'soul' being viewed by the Hebrews as the seat of desire, and in particular of appetite: cf. Num. xi. 6, Mic. vii. 1, Ps. cvii. 18, Job xxxiii. 20, Prov. xxiii. 2 (where 'a man given to appetite' is lit. a possessor of soul), xxvii. 7; and see further the writer's Parallel Psalter, p. 460.

<sup>d</sup> Or, richness. (Not the usual word for fat; but often used fig. of rich satisfaction: see Isa. lv. 2 end, Ps. xxxvi. 8; and cf. the cognate verb in Prov. xi. 25, xiii. 4, xv. 30, xxviii. 25).

<sup>e</sup> Ramah was five miles north of Jerusalem. Rachel's grave (see 1 Sam. x. 2, 3) was on the north border of Benjamin, not far from Bethel (which was ten miles north of Jerusalem), and, to judge from the present passage, at no great distance from Ramah either (see Hastings' D.B. s.v. RACHEL).

weeping for her children ; she refuseth to be comforted for her children, because they are not. <sup>16</sup> Thus saith Yahweh : Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears : for there is a reward for thy work, saith Yahweh ; and they shall return from the land of the enemy. <sup>17</sup> And there is hope for thy latter end, saith Yahweh ; and thy children shall return to their own border.

<sup>18</sup> I have surely heard Ephraim bemoaning himself, (and saying,) 'Thou hast corrected me, and I let myself be corrected, as a calf untrained :<sup>a</sup> O bring me back,<sup>b</sup> that I may return (to thee) ; for thou art Yahweh my God. <sup>19</sup> For after that I turned (from thee),<sup>c</sup> I have repented ; and after that I was brought to knowledge, I have smitten upon my thigh :<sup>d</sup> I am put to shame, yea, even <sup>a</sup> Which has to be taught by punishment to work and bear the yoke.

<sup>b</sup> I.e. take me back (xv. 19), like a prodigal but repentant son. Or the words may be rendered, O turn me, and I will turn (in penitence) : but v. 19 seems to show that Ephraim is pictured as already penitent, at the time when he is represented as speaking these words.

confounded, because I do bear the reproach of my youth.' <sup>20</sup> Is Ephraim my dear son? is he a delightful child? that as often as I speak against him, I do earnestly remember him still? therefore my bowels yearn<sup>a</sup> for him; I will surely have compassion upon him, saith Yahweh.

<sup>d</sup> I.e., probably, In the new future (Isa. xliii. 19, xlviii. 6, 7, lxxv. 17) which Yahweh is purposing to create in the earth, the woman, instead of holding aloof and waiting to be sought by the man (typifying Yahweh), will affectionately cling round her divine husband (Hos. ii. 16; Isa. liv. 5, 6): why, then, should Ephraim, the 'virgin of Israel,' defer to yield herself to the Divine purpose? Ewald, Duhm, and Cornill, however, with a very slight change in the text, read, shall be turned into a man: there will be no more need for the 'virgin' of Israel to be timid or hesitate: frail woman that she is, she will be wonderfully endowed by Yahweh with the strength and courage of a man. See further the note at the end of the volume.

Yahweh will then be watchful over His restored people; and will so transform the constitution of society that, whereas now the children suffer for their fathers' sins, then the bitter consequences of sin will be confined to the sinner.

<sup>27</sup> Behold, the days are coming, saith Yahweh, that I will sow the house of Israel and the house of Judah with the seed of man, and with the seed of beast. <sup>28</sup> And it shall come to pass, that like as I have been wakeful over them, to pluck up, and to break down, and to pull down, and to destroy, and to afflict; so will I be wakeful over them, to build, and to plant, saith Yahweh. <sup>29</sup> In those days they shall say no more, 'The fathers have eaten unripe grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge.' <sup>30</sup> But every one shall die for his own iniquity: every man that eateth the unripe grapes, his teeth shall be set on edge.

Israel, in the ideal future, is to be ruled, not by a system of observances imposed from without, but by a law written in the heart, a principle operative from within, filling all with the knowledge of Yahweh, and prompting all to ready and perfect obedience.

that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah : <sup>32</sup> not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt ; which my covenant they brake, although I was an husband unto them,<sup>a</sup> saith Yahweh : <sup>33</sup> but this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith Yahweh : I will put my law in their inward parts, and upon their hearts will I write it ; and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people. <sup>34</sup> And they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, and every man his brother. saying, ' Know Yahweh ' : for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith Yahweh : for I will forgive their iniquity, and their sin will I remember no more.

Two solemn promises of the national permanence of Israel.

<sup>35</sup> Thus saith Yahweh, which giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and of the stars for a light by night, which stirreth up the sea so that the waves thereof roar (Yahweh of hosts is His name) : <sup>36</sup> If these ordinances depart from before me, saith Yahweh, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before me for ever.

<sup>a</sup> Cf. iii. 14. But perhaps we should read, changing one letter, 'and I abhorred them' (see xiv. 19, Lev. xxvi. 30). Sept. Syr. also express a similar sense, disregarded, despised.

<sup>37</sup> Thus saith Yahweh : If heaven above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth searched out beneath, then will I also cast off the whole seed of Israel for all that they have done, saith Yahweh.

Jerusalem will be rebuilt, even beyond its former limits, and be holy to Yahweh.

(3) Chap. xxxii.

In the second year of the siege of Jerusalem (B.C. 587), Jeremiah's cousin comes to him, offering him the redemption of some land belonging to him at Anathoth. Jeremiah, seeing in this a divine sign, or omen, that, though the exile of the nation was imminent, the Jews would still once again possess the soil of Benjamin and Judah, redeems the land, and takes special precautions to ensure the preservation of the title-deeds, vv. 1-15. In vv. 16-25 Jeremiah records how his heart afterwards misgave him, and in vv. 26-44 how he was reassured by Yahweh.

XXXII. <sup>1</sup> The word that came to Jeremiah from Bibl. ii., facing col. 2419-20). The Wādy er-Rabābi was in all probability the ancient valley of Hinnom: and the 'dead bodies' and 'altar-ashes' (for this word, meaning lit. 'fat,' see Lev. i. 16, 1 Kings xiii. 3, 5) would be no doubt those of the human sacrifices offered in it to Molech (Jer. vii. 31, xxxii. 35).

<sup>b</sup> Jerusalem is to be rebuilt, and (v. 40) certain districts on the S.W. and S., outside the old city, and polluted by human sacrifices, are to be included in it. The whole city, thus formed, is to be holy to Yahweh (cf. Joel iii. 17; Zech. xiv. 20 f.).

Yahweh in the tenth year of Zedekiah king of Judah, which was the eighteenth year of Nebuchadrezzar. <sup>2</sup> Now at that time the king of Babylon's army was besieging Jerusalem: and Jeremiah the prophet was shut up in the guard-court,<sup>a</sup> which was in the king of Judah's house. (<sup>3</sup> For<sup>b</sup> Zedekiah king of Judah had shut him up, saying, 'Wherefore dost thou prophesy, and say,<sup>c</sup> "Thus saith Yahweh, Behold, I will give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall take it; <sup>4</sup> and Zedekiah king of Judah shall not escape out of the hand of the Chaldeans, but shall surely be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon, and shall speak with him mouth to mouth,<sup>d</sup> and his eyes shall behold his eyes; <sup>5</sup> and unto Babylon shall he lead Zedekiah, and there shall he be until I visit him, saith Yahweh: though <sup>a</sup> A part of the court surrounding the Palace railed off to guard prisoners in, whom it was not desired to throw into the common dungeon: their friends had free access to them, but they might not pass beyond the area in which they were confined.

<sup>b</sup> Vv. 3-5 are parenthetical, Zedekiah's question being intended merely to suggest indirectly the reason why Jeremiah was confined in the 'guard-court' (see xxxvii. 21, xxxviii. 13, 28). V. 6 is not to be understood as an answer to Zedekiah's question.

<sup>b</sup> Probably technical legal terms,—the 'injunction' bidding the seller cede possession of the property, and the 'conditions' (the word usually rendered 'statutes') stating the terms on which the property was purchased by the buyer. The two words are not in the Sept. ; and it is possible that they were originally an explanatory gloss, written on the margin.

of hosts, the God of Israel: "Houses and fields and vineyards shall yet again be bought in this land."'

Appearances were so strongly against such hopes, that Jeremiah's heart misgave him; and he casts himself upon Yahweh in prayer.

<sup>16</sup> Now after that I had given the purchase-deed unto Baruch the son of Neriah, I prayed unto Yahweh, saying,<sup>a</sup> <sup>17</sup> Ah Lord Yahweh! behold, thou hast made the heaven and the earth by thy great power and by thy stretched out arm; there is nothing too hard<sup>b</sup> for thee: <sup>18</sup> which shewest kindness unto thousands, and recompensest the Ionian custom. Contracts stamped upon clay tablets have been found, namely, in Babylonia, enclosed in an envelope of clay, on the outside of which an exact duplicate of the contract was impressed (see an illustration in Maspero, The Dawn of Civilization, p. 732): if in course of time any disagreement arose, and it was suspected that the outside text had been tampered with, the envelope was broken in the presence of witnesses to see if the inside text agreed with it or not. Earthen jars containing such duplicate contracts have been excavated at Nippur (Peters, Nippur, ii. 198).

CHAPTER XXXIV

Incidents during the siege of Jerusalem by the Chaldaeans (B.C. 588-6).

(1) Jeremiah declares to Zedekiah the issue of the siege, and the king's own future fate.

XXXIV. <sup>1</sup> The word which came unto Jeremiah from Yahweh, when Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and all his army, and all the kingdoms of the land of his dominion, and all the peoples, were fighting against Jerusalem, and against all the cities thereof, saying : <sup>2</sup> Thus saith Yahweh, the God of Israel, Go, and speak to Zedekiah king of Judah, and say unto him, Thus saith Yahweh, Behold, I am giving this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall burn it with fire : <sup>3</sup> and thou shalt not escape out of his hand, but shalt surely be taken, and delivered into his hand ; and thine eyes shall behold the eyes of the king of Babylon, and he shall speak with thee mouth to mouth,<sup>a</sup> and unto Babylon shalt thou come. <sup>4</sup> Only hear the word of Yahweh, O Zedekiah king of Judah: Thus saith Yahweh concerning thee, Thou shalt not die by the sword: <sup>5</sup> thou shalt die in peace;<sup>a</sup> and as at<sup>b</sup> the burnings for thy fathers, the former kings which were before thee, so shall they burn (odours) for thee;<sup>c</sup> and 'Ah lord!' shall they wail for thee; for I have spoken the word, saith Yahweh.

Yahweh, after that king Zedekiah had made a covenant with all the people which were in Jerusalem, to proclaim liberty unto them ; <sup>9</sup> that every man should let his bondman,<sup>a</sup> and every man his bondmaid,<sup>a</sup> being an Hebrew or an Hebrewess, go free ;<sup>b</sup> that none should use a Jew his brother as a slave. <sup>10</sup> And all the princes and all the people obeyed, which had entered into the covenant, that every one should let his bondman, and every one his bondmaid, go free, that none should use them as slaves any more ; they obeyed, and let them go : <sup>11</sup> but afterwards they turned, and caused the bondmen and the bondmaids, whom they had let go free, to return, and brought them into subjection for bondmen and for bondmaids.

Yahweh will emancipate them from His own service and protection unto destruction ; and the Chaldeans will ere long return, and take the city.

CHAPTER XXXV

Jeremiah and the Rechabites.

Towards the close of the reign of Jehoiakim, in consequence of the territory of Judah being overrun by marauding bands of Chaldaeans, Syrians, and others, the family of the Rechabites, who had hitherto lived a nomad life in tents, took refuge in Jerusalem; and Jeremiah, from the example of their staunch adherence to the precepts of their ancestor, points a lesson for his own countrymen.

XXXV. <sup>1</sup> The word which came unto Jeremiah from Yahweh in the days of Jehoiakim, the son of Josiah, king of Judah, saying, <sup>2</sup> Go unto the house of the Rechabites,<sup>a</sup> and speak with them, and bring them into the house of Yahweh, into one of the chambers,<sup>b</sup> and give them wine to drink. <sup>3</sup> Then <sup>a</sup> The Rechabites were a subdivision of the Kenites (1 Chron. ii. 55), a nomad tribe early associated with Israel, settled afterwards in the S. of Judah (Jud. i. 16, 1 Sam. xv. 6, cf. xxvii. 10).

<sup>b</sup> The 'chambers' arranged round the courts of the Temple, and used partly as storehouses, partly as residences for the priests, etc. See Ez. xl. 17, 38, 45, 46, etc.; 2 Kings xxiii. 11; 1 Chron. ix. 26; Neh. x. 37-39; Jer. xxxvi. 10.

I took Jaazaniah, the son of Jeremiah, the son of Habazziniah, and his brethren, and all his sons, and the whole house of the Rechabites ; <sup>4</sup> and I brought them into the house of Yahweh, into the chamber of the sons of Hanan the son of Igdaliah, the man of God, which was by the chamber of the princes, that was above the chamber of Maaseiah<sup>a</sup> the son of Shallum, the keeper of the threshold<sup>b</sup> : <sup>5</sup> and I set before the sons of the house of the Rechabites bowls full of wine, and cups, and I said unto them, ‘ Drink ye wine.’ <sup>6</sup> But they said, ‘ We will drink no wine : for Jonadab the son of Rechab,<sup>c</sup> our father, commanded us, saying, “ Ye shall drink no wine, neither ye, nor your sons, for ever : <sup>7</sup> neither shall ye build house, nor sow seed, nor plant vineyard, nor have any : but all your days ye shall dwell in tents ; that ye may live many days in the land wherein ye be sojourners.” <sup>8</sup> And we have hearkened to the voice of Jehonadab the son of Rechab, our father, in all that he charged us, to drink no wine all our days, we, our wives, our sons, nor our daughters ; <sup>9</sup> nor to build houses for us to dwell in : nor to have vineyard, nor field, nor seed : <sup>10</sup> but we have dwelt in tents, and have hearkened and done according to all that Jonadab our father commanded us. <sup>11</sup> But it came to pass, when Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon came up into the land, that we said, “ Come, and let us go to Jerusalem for fear of the army of the Chaldaeans, and for fear of the army of the Syrians<sup>a</sup>,” so we dwell in Jerusalem.’

<sup>12</sup> Then came the word of Yahweh unto Jeremiah saying, <sup>13</sup> Thus saith Yahweh of hosts, the God of Israel : Go, and say to the men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, Will ye not receive instruction<sup>b</sup> to hearken to my words ? saith Yahweh. <sup>14</sup> The words of Jehonadab the son of Rechab, that he commanded his sons, not to drink wine, are performed ; and they drink none unto this day, for they hearken unto their father’s commandment : but I have spoken unto you, rising up early and speaking ; and ye have not hearkened unto me. <sup>15</sup> I have sent also unto you all my servants the prophets, rising up early and sending them, saying, ‘ Return, I pray you, every man from his evil way, and amend your doings, and go not after other gods to serve them, and ye shall dwell in the land which I have given to you and to your fathers<sup>a</sup> : ' but ye have not inclined your ear, nor hearkened unto me. <sup>16</sup> For the sons of Jehonadab the son of Rechab have performed the commandment of their father which he commanded them ; but this people hath not hearkened unto me. <sup>17</sup> Therefore thus saith Yahweh, the God of hosts, the God of Israel : Behold, I am bringing upon Judah and upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem all the evil that I have pronounced against them : because I have spoken unto them, but they have not hearkened ; and I have called unto them, but they have not answered. <sup>18</sup> But unto the house of the Rechabites said Jeremiah, Thus saith Yahweh of hosts, the God of Israel : Because ye have hearkened unto the commandment of Jehonadab your father, and kept all his commandments, and done according unto all that he commanded you ; <sup>19</sup> therefore thus saith Yahweh of hosts, the God of Israel : Jonadab the son of Rechab shall not want a man to stand<sup>b</sup> before me<sup>c</sup> for ever.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

How Jeremiah's prophecies were first committed to writing.

In the fourth year of Jehoiakim (B.C. 604), Jeremiah is commanded to write down all the prophecies which had been uttered by him during the past twenty-three years.<sup>a</sup>

XXXVI. <sup>1</sup> And it came to pass in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, the son of Josiah, king of Judah, that this word came unto Jeremiah from Yahweh, saying, <sup>2</sup> Take thee a roll of a book, and write on it all the words that I have spoken unto thee concerning Israel,<sup>b</sup> and concerning Judah, and concerning all the nations, from the day I spake unto thee, from the days of Josiah, even unto this day. <sup>3</sup> It may be that the house of Judah will hear all the evil which I am purposing to do unto them ; that they may return every man from his evil way, and that I may forgive their iniquity and their sin.

<sup>b</sup> Sept. has, Jerusalem, probably rightly: for Jeremiah addresses Israel (i.e., by the side of 'Judah', the N. kingdom) only with promises (iii. 6-18, xxxi. 2-22); and these would not subserve the purpose of the roll, as suggested by v. 3.

<sup>4</sup> Then Jeremiah called Baruch the son of Neriah ; and Baruch wrote from the mouth of Jeremiah all the words of Yahweh, which he had spoken unto him, upon a roll of a book. <sup>5</sup> And Jeremiah commanded Baruch, saying, ' I am detained ;<sup>a</sup> I cannot go into the house of Yahweh : <sup>6</sup> therefore go thou, and read in the roll, which thou hast written from my mouth, the words of Yahweh in the ears of the people in Yahweh's house upon a fast day : and thou shalt read them also in the ears of all Judah that come out of their cities. <sup>7</sup> It may be they will present their supplication<sup>b</sup> before Yahweh, and will return every one from his evil way : for great is the anger and the fury that Yahweh hath pronounced against this people.' <sup>8</sup> And Baruch the son of Neriah did according to all that Jeremiah the prophet commanded him, reading in the book the words of Yahweh in Yahweh's house.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>c</sup> V. 8 is a summary statement of what is described with more particulars in vv. 9-10.

In the following year Baruch reads the roll in the Temple. Some of the princes, hearing of its contents, have it read again to themselves, and resolve then to inform Jehoiakim about it.

<sup>9</sup> And it came to pass in the fifth year of Jehoiakim, the son of Josiah, king of Judah, in the ninth month,<sup>a</sup> that all the people in Jerusalem, and all the people that came from the cities of Judah into Jerusalem, proclaimed a fast before Yahweh.

<sup>a</sup> I.e. the later Chisleu (Neh. i. 1), corresponding to our December (cf. v. 22). The Hebrew year at this time began in spring.

<sup>b</sup> Heb. the scribe. The king's 'scribe,' or, as we should say, secretary (1 Kings iv. 3 al., RVm.), was an important minister of state: see 1 Kings iv. 3, 2 Kings xii. 10, Isa. xxxvii. 2. It was the secretary, Shaphan, here mentioned, who, 18 years before, brought and read Deuteronomy to Josiah, after it had been discovered by the high priest, Hilkiah, in the Temple: see 2 Kings xxii. 3, 8, 9-11, 12, 14. Gemariah was the brother of Ahikam, who had befriended Jeremiah a few years previously (xxvi. 24).

<sup>11</sup> And when Micaiah, the son of Gemariah, the son of Shaphan, had heard out of the book all the words of Yahweh, <sup>12</sup> he went down<sup>a</sup> to the king's house, into the secretary's chamber: and, lo, all the princes were sitting there, even Elishama the secretary, and Delaiah the son of Shemaiah, and Elnathan the son of Achbor,<sup>b</sup> and Gemariah the son of Shaphan, and Zedekiah the son of Hananiah, and all the (other) princes. <sup>13</sup> And Micaiah told them all the words that he had heard, when Baruch read the book in the ears of the people. <sup>14</sup> Then all the princes sent Jehudi, the son of Nethaniah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Cushi, unto Baruch, saying, 'Take in thine hand the roll wherein thou hast read in the ears of the people, and go.' So Baruch the son of Neriah took the roll in his hand, and came unto them. <sup>15</sup> And they said unto him, 'Sit down, now, and read it in our ears.' So Baruch read it in their ears. <sup>16</sup> And it came to pass, when they had heard all the words, that they turned in fear one toward other, and said unto Baruch, 'We will surely tell the king of all these words.' <sup>17</sup> And they asked Baruch, saying, 'Tell us, now, How didst thou write all these words at his mouth<sup>a</sup>?’ 18 And Baruch said unto them, ‘He pronounced all these words unto me with his mouth, and I wrote them with ink in the book.’ 19 Then said the princes unto Baruch, ‘Go, hide thee, thou and Jeremiah; and let no man know where ye be.’ 20 And they went in to the king into the court<sup>b</sup>; but they laid up the roll in the chamber of Elishama the secretary: and they told all these<sup>c</sup> things in the ears of the king.

Jehoiakim orders the roll to be brought and read before him. Enraged by its contents, he cuts it in pieces, and burns it in the fire.

21 So the king sent Jehudi to fetch the roll: and he took it out of Elishama the secretary’s chamber. And Jehudi read it in the ears of the king, and in the ears of all the princes which stood beside<sup>d</sup> the king. 22 Now the king was sitting in the winter-house<sup>a</sup>: and the fire<sup>b</sup> on the brasier was burning before him. <sup>23</sup> And it came to pass, that as often as Jehudi read three or four columns, he cut them<sup>c</sup> with a penknife,<sup>d</sup> and flung (them) into the fire that was on the brasier, until all the roll was consumed in the fire that was on the brasier. <sup>24</sup> And they were not afraid, nor rent their garments, neither the king, nor any of his servants that heard all these words. <sup>25</sup> Yet Elnathan and Delaiah and Gemariah had made intercession to the king that he would not burn the roll: but he hearkened not to them. <sup>26</sup> And the king commanded Jerahmeel the king's son,<sup>e</sup> and Seraiah the son of Azriel, and Shelemiah the son of Abdeel, to fetch Baruch the scribe and Jeremiah the prophet: but Yahweh hid them.

<sup>a</sup> So Sept. The Heb. text adds, in the ninth month, which is here superfluous, and is probably a gloss based upon v. 9, and intended to explain why the king should be in the winter-house.

<sup>e</sup> I.e., probably, a royal prince, one who had a king among his ancestors, but not necessarily a son of the reigning king. So xxxviii. 6, 1 Kings xxii. 26*b*, and esp. Zeph. i. 8 (written at a time when the reigning king, Josiah, could not have had a grown-up 'son').

Jeremiah is commanded to rewrite the roll of his prophecies; and to announce to Jehoiakim the failure of his dynasty and his own ignominious death.

<sup>27</sup> Then the word of Yahweh came to Jeremiah, after that the king had burned the roll, and the words which Baruch had written at the mouth of Jeremiah, saying, <sup>28</sup> Take thee again another roll, and write on it all the former words that were on the first roll, which Jehoiakim the king of Judah hath burned. <sup>29</sup> And to Jehoiakim king of Judah thou shalt say, Thus saith Yahweh: Thou hast burned this roll, saying, ‘Why hast thou written therein, saying, “The king<sup>a</sup> of Babylon shall certainly come and destroy this land, and shall cause to cease from it man and beast”?’ <sup>30</sup> Therefore thus saith Yahweh concerning Jehoiakim king of Judah: He shall have none to sit upon the throne of David: and his dead body shall be flung forth<sup>b</sup> in the day to the heat, and in the night to the frost. <sup>31</sup> And I will punish him and his seed and his servants for their iniquity;<sup>c</sup> and I will bring upon them, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and upon the men of Judah, all the evil that I have pronounced against them, but they hearkened not.

<sup>32</sup> Then took Jeremiah another roll, and gave it to Baruch the scribe, the son of Neriah ; who wrote thereon from the mouth of Jeremiah all the words of the book which Jehoiakim king of Judah had burned in the fire : and there were added besides unto them many like words.

CHAPTERS XXXVII-XXXVIII 28<sup>a</sup>

The personal history of Jeremiah during the siege of Jerusalem by the Chaldaeans (B.C. 588-6): his arrest on a charge of deserting to the enemy; his confinement, first in a dungeon in the house of Jonathan, the king's secretary, then in the guard-court, after that, in an underground cistern, and lastly in the guard-court again; and his interviews with Zedekiah.

XXXVII. <sup>1</sup> And Zedekiah, the son of Josiah, whom Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon had made king in the land of Judah, reigned as king, instead of Coniah<sup>a</sup> the son of Jehoiakim. <sup>2</sup> But neither he, nor his servants, nor the people of the land, did hearken unto the words of Yahweh, which he spake by the prophet Jeremiah.

The Chaldaeans being obliged to raise the siege, Jeremiah, in reply to an enquiry addressed to him by the king, declares that they will soon return and take the city.

Shelemiah, and Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah, the priest,<sup>a</sup> to the prophet Jeremiah, saying, ‘ Pray, now, for us unto Yahweh our God.’<sup>4</sup> Now Jeremiah was still coming in and going out among the people : for they had not yet put him into prison.<sup>b</sup> <sup>5</sup> And Pharaoh’s army<sup>c</sup> was come forth out of Egypt ; and when the Chaldaeans that were besieging Jerusalem heard tidings of them, they brake up from Jerusalem.

<sup>6</sup> Then came the word of Yahweh unto Jeremiah the prophet, saying, <sup>7</sup> Thus saith Yahweh, the God of Israel : Thus shall ye say to the king of Judah, that sent you unto me to enquire of me, Behold, Pharaoh’s army, which is come forth to help you, shall return to Egypt into their own land. <sup>8</sup> And the Chaldaeans shall come again, and fight against this city ; and they shall take it, and burn it with fire. <sup>9</sup> Thus saith Yahweh : Deceive not yourselves,<sup>d</sup> saying, ‘ The Chaldaeans will surely depart from us ’ : for they will not depart. <sup>10</sup> For though ye had smitten the whole army of the Chaldaeans that fight against you, and there were left but wounded men<sup>e</sup> among them, yet would they rise the king's secretary.*

*He is arrested as a deserter ; and thrown into a

<sup>13</sup> And it came to pass, as he was in the Benjamin-gate,<sup>b</sup> that a sentinel<sup>c</sup> was there, whose name was Irijah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Haniah ; and he laid hold on Jeremiah the prophet, saying, ' Thou art falling away<sup>d</sup> to the Chaldaeans.'

<sup>14</sup> Then said Jeremiah, ' It is false ; I am not falling away to the Chaldaeans ' ; but he hearkened not to him : so Irijah laid hold on Jeremiah, and brought him to the princes. <sup>15</sup> And the princes were wroth with Jeremiah, and smote him, and put him in prison in the house of Jonathan the secretary :<sup>a</sup> for they had made that the prison.

 16 Thus<sup>b</sup> Jeremiah came into the dungeon house, and into the cells ; and Jeremiah remained there many days.

Jeremiah tells Zedekiah that he will fall into the hands of the Chaldeans. He is removed from the dungeon, and placed in honourable confinement in the guard-court, adjoining the royal palace.

17 Then king Zedekiah sent, and fetched him : and the king asked him secretly in his house, and said, ‘Is there any word from Yahweh?’ And Jeremiah said, ‘There is.’ And he said, ‘Thou shalt be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon.’ 18 And Jeremiah said unto king Zedekiah, ‘Wherein have I sinned against thee, or against thy servants, or against this people, that ye have put me in prison ? 19 And where are your prophets which prophesied unto you, saying, “The king of Babylon shall not come against you,<sup>c</sup> nor against this land” ? 20 And now hear, I pray

And in the cistern there was no water, but mire; and Jeremiah sank in the mire.

Zedekiah again consults Jeremiah secretly; and is again told by him that his only hope of safety is to surrender Jerusalem to the Chaldaeans.

<sup>14</sup> Then king Zedekiah sent, and took Jeremiah the prophet unto him into the third entry that is in the house of Yahweh: and the king said unto Jeremiah, 'I will ask thee a thing; hide nothing from me.' <sup>15</sup> And Jeremiah said unto Zedekiah, 'If I declare it unto thee, wilt thou not surely put me to death? and if I give thee counsel, thou wilt not hearken unto me.' <sup>16</sup> So king Zedekiah swore unto Jeremiah secretly, saying, 'As Yahweh liveth, that made us this soul, I will not put thee to death, neither will I give thee into the hand of these men that seek thy life.' <sup>17</sup> Then said Jeremiah unto Zedekiah, 'Thus saith Yahweh, the God of hosts, the God of Israel: If thou goest forth unto the king of Babylon's princes, then thy soul will live, and this city will not be burned with fire; and thou wilt live, thou, and thine house: <sup>18</sup> but if thou goest not forth to the king of Babylon's princes, then will this city be given into the hand of the Chaldaeans, and they will burn it with fire, and thou wilt not escape out of their hand.' <sup>19</sup> And king Zedekiah said unto Jeremiah, 'I am afraid of the Jews that are fallen away to the Chaldaeans, lest they deliver me into their hand, and they mock me.' <sup>20</sup> But Jeremiah said, 'They will not deliver thee. Hearken, I beseech thee, to the voice of Yahweh, in that which I speak unto thee: so shall it be well with thee, and thy soul shall live. <sup>21</sup> But if thou refuse to go forth, this is the word that Yahweh hath shewed me<sup>a</sup> :

Zedekiah enjoins Jeremiah not to say anything to the princes about the conversation which they had had together.

<sup>24</sup> Then said Zedekiah unto Jeremiah, ‘ Let no man know of these words, and thou shalt not die. <sup>25</sup> But if the princes hear that I have talked with thee, and they come unto thee, and say unto thee, “ Tell us, now, what thou hast said unto the king : hide it not from us, and we will not put thee to death : also what the king said unto thee ” : <sup>26</sup> then thou shalt say unto them, “ I was presenting my supplication before the king, that he would not cause me to return to Jonathan’s house, to die there.” ’ differently, renders more clearly, avoiding the change of subject, They have made thy feet to sink in the swamp. The meaning is : Zedekiah’s friends, i.e. his misguided counsellors, have led him, against his own judgement, into a hopeless struggle with the Chaldaeans, and then, when he was in difficulties, turned back and deserted him.

<sup>27</sup> Then came all the princes unto Jeremiah, and asked him : and he told them according to all these words that the king had commanded. The favour shown to Jeremiah by the Chaldeans after the capture of Jerusalem. He is entrusted to the care of Gedaliah, son of his friend Ahikam (xxvi. 24), and allowed to retire to his own home.

The narrative is interrupted by particulars respecting the capture of the city, and incidents following it (xxxix. 1-2, 4-13 : see the notes on vv. 1 and 4).

And it came to pass, when Jerusalem was taken, —XXXIX. [<sup>1</sup> In<sup>a</sup> the ninth year of Zedekiah, king of Judah, in the tenth month, came Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon and all his army against Jerusalem, and besieged it ; <sup>2</sup> in the eleventh year of Zedekiah, in the fourth month, the ninth day of the month, a breach was made in the city],—<sup>3</sup> that all the princes of the king of Babylon came in,

<sup>a</sup> Vv. 1-2 interrupt the connexion,—not only (in v. 1) going back to the beginning of the siege, but being inserted in the middle of a sentence,—in a manner which shows that they must originally have been a marginal gloss on the words ‘ Jerusalem was taken,’ added to explain how this came about. In substance the verses are an abridgement of 2 Kings xxv. 1-3a, 4a (—Jer. lii. 4-6a, 7a).

<sup>c</sup> Vv. 4-13 are omitted in the Sept., probably rightly. Vv. 4-10, containing particulars of what happened after the capture of the city,—in fact (see 2 Kings xxv. 8=Jer. lii. 12) a month afterwards,—are abridged from 2 Kings xxv. 4 (second and following clauses), 5-7, 9-12, in the purer and more original text preserved in Jer. lii. 7, 8-11, 13-16. The verses were probably (like vv. 1, 2) inserted where they now stand, long after the rest of the narrative was completed. It is doubtful also whether vv. 11-13 form part of the original narrative here: not only are they also absent in the Sept., but v. 11 and v. 13 both attach badly to v. 3; Nebuzaradan, the principal officer in vv. 11, 13, is not mentioned at all in v. 3, and Jer. lii. 12 shows that he did not come to Jerusalem till a month after the city had been taken. What we expect to find after xxxviii. 28*a* is an account of what happened to Jeremiah after the capture of Jerusalem; and this is contained in xxxviii. 28*b*, xxxix. 3, 14.

<sup>d</sup> On the S. of the city (the 'king's garden' was near the pool of Siloam, Neh. iii. 15), probably the 'fountain gate' of Neh. ii. 14, iii. 15, xii. 37; the 'two walls' (cf. Is. xxii. 11) being those below this gate along the W. side of the E. hill of Jerusalem, and the E. side of the W. hill.

Vv. 15-18 form evidently a supplement to ch. xxxviii. They relate to a period anterior in date to the capture of Jerusalem (xxxix. 1-14), while Jeremiah was confined in the guard-court (xxxviii. 13, 28).

<sup>15</sup> Now unto Jeremiah had come the word of Yahweh, while he was shut up in the guard-court, saying, <sup>16</sup>Go, and speak to Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, saying, Thus saith Yahweh of hosts, the God of Israel: Behold, I am bringing my words upon this city for evil, and not for good; and they shall be (accomplished) before thee in that day. <sup>17</sup> But I will deliver thee in that day, saith Yahweh: and thou shalt not be given into the hand of the men of whom thou art in dread. <sup>18</sup> For I will surely save thee, and thou shalt not fall by the sword, but thy life shall be for a prey unto thee:<sup>a</sup> because thou hast put thy trust in me, saith Yahweh.

Events in Jeremiah's life after the capture of Jerusalem by the Chaldaeans. The appointment of Gedaliah as governor of Judah; his murder by Ishmael; Johanan and the other Jews with him oblige Jeremiah to migrate with them into Egypt.

Jeremiah is released by Nebuzaradan, and allowed to go where he pleases. He joins Gedaliah (whom Nebuchadnezzar had made governor of Judah) at Mizpah.

XL. <sup>1</sup> The word that came to Jeremiah from Yahweh, after that Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard had let him go from Ramah,<sup>a</sup> when he had taken him, whilst he was bound in chains among all the exiles of Jerusalem and Judah, which were carried into exile to Babylon. <sup>2</sup> And the captain of the guard took Jeremiah, and said unto him, 'Yahweh thy God hath pronounced this evil upon this place: <sup>3</sup> and Yahweh hath brought and done it, according as he spake; because ye have sinned against Yahweh, and have not hearkened to his voice, and so this thing is come upon you. <sup>4</sup> And now, behold, I loose thee this day from the chains which are upon thine hands. If it seem good unto thee to come with me unto Babylon, come ; and I will look well unto thee<sup>a</sup> : but if it seem ill unto thee to come with me unto Babylon, forbear : behold, all the land is before thee : whither it seemeth good and right for thee to go, go.' <sup>5</sup> <sup>b</sup>Now while he was not yet gone back<sup>b</sup>, 'Go back, then,' (said he,) 'to Gedaliah, the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan,<sup>c</sup> whom the king of Babylon hath made governor over the cities of Judah, and dwell with him among the people ; or go whithersoever it seemeth right unto thee to go.' So the captain of the guard gave him victuals and a present, and let him go. <sup>6</sup> Then came Jeremiah unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam to Mizpah<sup>d</sup> ; and dwelt with him among the people that were left in the land.

<sup>13</sup> And Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were in the fields, came to Gedaliah unto Mizpah, <sup>14</sup> and said unto him, 'Dost thou know that Baalis the king of the children of Ammon<sup>b</sup> hath sent Ishmael the son of

But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam believed them not. <sup>15</sup> Then Johanan the son of Kareah spake to Gedaliah in Mizpah secretly, saying, ' Let me go, I pray thee, and I will slay Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and no man shall know it : wherefore should he take thy life, that all the Jews which are gathered unto thee should be scattered, and the remnant of Judah perish ?' <sup>16</sup> But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam said unto Johanan the son of Kareah, ' Do not this thing : for thou speakest falsely of Ishmael.'

*Gedaliah is murdered in Mizpah by Ishmael.**

XLI. <sup>1</sup> Now<sup>b</sup> it came to pass in the seventh month, that Ishmael, the son of Nethaniah, the son of Elishama, of the seed royal, and (one of) the chief officers of the king, and ten men with him, came unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam to Mizpah ; and they ate bread there together in Mizpah. <sup>2</sup> Then arose Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and the ten men that were with him, and they smote Gedaliah, the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, with

<sup>4</sup> And it came to pass the second day after they had slain Gedaliah, and no man knew it, <sup>5</sup> that there came certain from Shechem, from Shiloh, and from Samaria, even fourscore men, having their beards shaven and their clothes rent, and having gashed themselves,<sup>d</sup> with oblations and frankincense in their hand, to bring them to the house of Yahweh. <sup>6</sup> And Ishmael the son of Nethaniah went forth from Mizpah to meet them, weeping all along as he went :<sup>e</sup> and it came to pass, as he met them, that he said unto them, ‘Come to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam.’ <sup>7</sup> And it was so, when they came into the midst of the city, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah slew them, (and cast them) into the midst of the cistern, he, and the men that were with him. <sup>8</sup> But ten men were found among them that said unto Ishmael, ‘Slay us not; for we have stores buried<sup>a</sup> in the field, of wheat, and barley, and oil, and honey.’ So he forbore, and slew them not among their brethren. <sup>9</sup> Now the cistern wherein Ishmael cast all the dead bodies of the men whom he had slain, was a great cistern<sup>b</sup> which king Asa had made for fear of Baasha king of Israel :<sup>c</sup> it did Ishmael the son of Nethaniah fill with them that were slain.

Ishmael, taking forcibly with him the other refugees, starts to cross over to the Ammonites, but is overtaken by Johanan at Gibeon, and obliged to flee with the loss of his captives.

<sup>a</sup> The allusion is to large subterranean pits, such as are still used in Palestine for the storage of grain. See Thomson, The Land and the Book, i. 89, 90, ii. 194, iii. 458.

<sup>b</sup> So Sept. The change is very slight; and the Heb. text yields no satisfactory sense.

king's daughters, and all the people that were left in Mizpah, whom Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard had committed to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam : and Ishmael the son of Nethaniah carried them away captive, and departed to go over to the children of Ammon.

<sup>11</sup> But when Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, heard of all the evil that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah had done, <sup>12</sup> then they took all the men, and went to fight with Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and found him by the great waters that are in Gibeon.<sup>a</sup> <sup>13</sup> Now it came to pass, that when all the people which were with Ishmael saw Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, then they were glad. <sup>14</sup> So all the people that Ishmael had carried away captive from Mizpah turned about, and came back, and went unto Johanan the son of Kareah. <sup>15</sup> But Ishmael the son of Nethaniah escaped from Johanan with eight men, and went to the children of Ammon.

Johanan and his companions, with the refugees recovered from Ishmael, withdraw to Bethlehem, intending eventually to find a home in Egypt.

16 Then took Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, all the remnant of the people whom Ishmael the son of Nethaniah had taken captive<sup>a</sup> from Mizpah, after that he had slain Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, even men, [the men of war,]<sup>b</sup> and women, and children, and eunuchs,<sup>c</sup> whom he had brought back from Gibeon: 17 and they departed, and dwelt in Geruth-Chimham,<sup>d</sup> which is by Beth-lehem, to go to enter into Egypt, 18 because of the Chaldaeans: for they were afraid of them, because Ishmael the son of Nethaniah had slain Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, whom the king of Babylon had made governor over the land.

<sup>a</sup> So, with a slight change. The Heb. text has, whom he had brought back (recovered) from Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, from Mizpah, where 'recovered from Mizpah' cannot be right.

<sup>b</sup> These words seem to be a gloss; cf. xliii. 6, xliv. 20.

<sup>d</sup> Probably a village, so called from the Chimham (pron. 'Kimham'), son of Barzillai the Gileadite, who accompanied David to Jerusalem, after Absalom's rebellion (2 Sam. xix. 37-40). For 'Gērūth,' for which it is difficult to find a probable meaning ('lodging-place' of RVm. is very questionable), we should perhaps read, with Aq., Josephus, and Sept. (partly), Gidroth, i.e. '(sheep-)folds of Chimham.'

Johanan and the people with him consult Jeremiah, promising faithfully to do whatever he may tell them.

XLII. <sup>1</sup> Then<sup>a</sup> all the captains of the forces, and Johanan the son of Kareah, and Azariah<sup>b</sup> the son of Hoshaiah, and all the people from the least even unto the greatest, came near, <sup>2</sup> and said unto Jeremiah the prophet, ‘Let, we pray thee, our supplication be accepted<sup>c</sup> before thee, and pray for us unto Yahweh thy God, even for all this remnant; for we are left but a few out of many, as thine eyes do behold us: <sup>3</sup> that Yahweh thy God may declare unto us the way wherein we should walk, and the thing that we should do.’ <sup>4</sup> Then Jeremiah the prophet said unto them, ‘I hear; behold, I will pray unto Yahweh your God according to your words; and it shall come to pass that whatsoever thing Yahweh shall answer you, I will declare it unto you; I will keep nothing back from you.’ <sup>5</sup> Then said they to Jeremiah, ‘Yahweh be a true and faithful witness against us, if we do not even according to all the word wherewith Yahweh thy God shall send thee to us. <sup>6</sup> Whether it be good, or whether it be evil, we will hearken to the

One of these obelisks is still standing in situ; another is the so-called 'Cleopatra's needle,' now on the Thames Embankment.

<sup>f</sup> An inscription of Nebuchadnezzar states that in his 37th year (B.C. 568) he invaded Egypt, defeated its king, Amasis (570-526), and slaughtered, or carried away, soldiers and horses. Further particulars are not known, as the inscription is fragmentary. See the writer's essay on Archaeology and the O.T. in Hogarth's Authority and Archaeology, p. 117.

It is not improbable that the 'oblong area' of v. 9 is the large oblong brick pavement close to the palace-fort built by Psammetichus I. (B.C. 664-610), which was excavated by Prof. Petrie at Tell Defneh in 1886;<sup>7</sup> see ibid. and cf. <sup>7</sup> Now, therefore, thus saith Yahweh, the God of hosts, the God of Israel: Why are ye doing a great evil against yourselves, to cut off from you man and woman, child and suckling, out of the midst of Judah, to leave you no remnant; <sup>8</sup> in that ye vex me with the works of your hands, burning incense unto other gods in the land of Egypt, whither ye be come to sojourn, that ye might cut yourselves off, and that ye might become a curse and a reproach among all the nations of the earth? <sup>9</sup> Have ye forgotten the wickednesses of your fathers, and the wickednesses of the kings of Judah, and the wickednesses of their princes,<sup>a</sup> and your own wickednesses, and the wickednesses of your wives,<sup>b</sup> which they have committed in the land of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem? <sup>10</sup> They are not humbled even unto this day, neither have they feared, nor walked in my law, nor in my

The Jews who worshipped the queen of heaven reply that, as long as they had worshipped her, prosperity had attended them, but it had now ceased.

‘ We will surely perform our vows that we have vowed, to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto her ’ : establish then your vows,<sup>a</sup> and perform your vows! <sup>26</sup> Therefore hear ye the word of Yahweh, all Judah that dwell in the land of Egypt : Behold, I have sworn by my great name,<sup>b</sup> saith Yahweh, that my name shall no more be named in the mouth of any man of Judah, saying, ‘ As Yahweh liveth,’ in all the land of Egypt.<sup>c</sup> <sup>27</sup> Behold, I am wakeful over them for evil, and not for good :<sup>d</sup> and all the men of Judah that are in the land of Egypt shall be consumed by the sword and by the famine, until there be an end of them. <sup>28</sup> And they that escape the sword shall return out of the land of Egypt into the land of Judah, few in number ; and all the remnant of Judah, that are come into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall know whose word shall stand, mine, or theirs.

<sup>29</sup> And this shall be the sign unto you, saith Yahweh, that I will punish you in this place, that ye may know that my words shall surely stand against you for evil: <sup>30</sup> Thus saith Yahweh: Behold, I am giving Pharaoh Hophra king of Egypt into the hand of his enemies, and into the hand of them that seek his life; as I gave Zedekiah king of Judah into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, his enemy, and that sought his life.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Pharaoh Hophra (called by the Greeks Apries) reigned from B.C. 590 to B.C. 571. He was deposed by a military revolution; and Amasis (into whose hands he fell, and who ultimately succeeded him) delivered him over to the Egyptians, by whom he was strangled (Herod. ii. 161-163, 169).

CHAPTER XLV

Words of mingled reassurance and reproof, addressed to Baruch, in the depression and disappointment which overcame him, after writing the roll of the fourth year of Jehoiakim.

A supplement to xxxvi. 1-8.

XLV. <sup>1</sup>The word that Jeremiah the prophet spake unto Baruch the son of Neriah, when he wrote these words<sup>a</sup> in a book at the mouth of Jeremiah, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, the son of Josiah, king of Judah, saying, <sup>2</sup>Thus saith Yahweh, the God of Israel, concerning thee, O Baruch: <sup>3</sup>Thou didst say, 'Oh, woe to me! for Yahweh hath added sorrow to my pain; I am weary with my groaning,<sup>b</sup> and I find no rest.'<sup>4</sup> Thus shalt thou say unto him, Thus saith Yahweh:

<sup>a</sup> I.e. the words forming the roll of Jeremiah's prophecies, written by Baruch, at Jeremiah's dictation, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, B.C. 605 (xxxvi. 1-4); and containing predictions of disaster for Judah, and (xxv. 15-38) Western Asia generally.

Behold, that which I have built am I breaking down, and that which I have planted am I plucking up; and that is the whole earth.<sup>a</sup> <sup>5</sup> And dost thou seek great things for thyself? seek them not: for, behold, I am bringing evil upon all flesh,<sup>b</sup> saith Yahweh: but thy life will I give unto thee for a prey in all places whither thou goest.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Alluding to the ruin of kingdoms to be wrought by Nebuchadnezzar, described (figuratively) in xxv. 15–38 (spoken also, according to xxv. 1, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim).

CHAPTERS XLVI-LI

(1) Chaps. xlv. - xlix.

Concerning the army of Pharaoh Necho king of Egypt, which was by the river Euphrates in Carchemish, which Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon <sup>a</sup> smote in the fourth year of Jekoiakim, the son of Josiah, king of Judah.

Pharaoh Necho (B.C. 610-594), an ambitious and aspiring prince, essayed to add Syria, and the neighbouring parts of Asia, W. of the Euphrates, to his dominions. As he was marching through Palestine to effect his purpose, Josiah, attempting to turn him back, met his death at <sup>a</sup> Nebuchadnezzar was not yet actually 'king' of Babylon, though he became so a few months afterwards; see the writer's Daniel (in the Cambridge Bible), pp. xlix. 2. The fourth year of Jehoiakim is in xxv. 1 equated with the first year of Nebuchadnezzar (B.C. 604): so it seems that the battle of Carchemish took place really in the previous year, 605.

Megiddo (B.C. 609). Three months later Necho is mentioned as being at Riblah, in the land of Hamath, some seventy miles N. of Damascus (see 2 Kings xxiii. 29, 33). Some years afterwards (B.C. 608), he set out with a large army, and joined battle with Nabopolassar, the king of Babylon, at Carchemish, the great commercial city and fortress, commanding the principal ford of the Euphrates, by which armies marching to and fro between Babylon and Palestine, or Egypt, regularly crossed the river, about 260 miles N.N.E. of Damascus. There his army was completely defeated by Nebuchadnezzar, acting as general for his father, Nabopolassar. This defeat of the Egyptians at Carchemish was politically the turning-point of the age. Jeremiah at once saw that the Chaldaeans were destined to become the rulers of Western Asia (cf. ch. xxv.); and his sense of this led him to come forward with the doctrine,—which to many of his fellow-countrymen seemed unpatriotic,—that the safety of Judah was to be found in submission to the Chaldaean supremacy (xxi. 1–10; xxvii. 5–8, 12, etc.).

The group of prophecies contained in chaps. xlvi.–xlix., except the one on Elam (xlix. 34–39), which is assigned by its title to a later period, reflect the impression which Nebuchadnezzar's successes made upon the prophet: he pictures not only Egypt, but also the Philistines, Moab, Ammon, Edom, Damascus (all of whom had in the past been often unfriendly to Israel), and even the more distant Kedar, as one after another succumbing helplessly before the invader.<sup>a</sup> Chapter xxv. may be regarded as an in-

<sup>a</sup> It ought, however, to be mentioned that most recent authorities on Jeremiah, including even A. B. Davidson (Hastings' Dict. of the Bible, ii. 573*b*), are of opinion, partly upon grounds of difference of literary style, partly on account of the nature of their contents, that chaps. xlvi.–xlix. are either wholly (Stade, roduction to these prophecies: it acquaints the reader with Jeremiah's general view of the political situation, which is then illustrated, and poetically developed, with reference to particular countries, in the present prophecies. Probably, in the original form of the book of Jeremiah, these prophecies followed immediately after chapter xxv., from which they are now separated by the mainly biographical matter contained in chapters xxvi.-xlvi.

Let the warriors arm themselves, and advance to the fight!

Wellhausen, Duhm), or in part (Giesebrecht, Kuenen, Davidson), not Jeremiah's. Gie. accepts only xlvii. 2, 3 b, 4 a, 5, xlix. 7-8, 10-11, and perhaps 13, and a nucleus in xlvi. 3-12. But, though the prophecies may have been amplified in parts by a later hand (or hands), it is doubtful whether there are sufficient reasons for reducing the original nucleus to such small dimensions as these. Kuenen (Einl. § 56. 9-11) accepted the whole, except xlvi. 27 f. (=xxx. 10 f.), and certain parts of chap. xlviii. (see the note on xlviii. 1). Cornill, while allowing that there are parts which either upon the grounds mentioned above, or on metrical grounds, must in his judgement be rejected, argues strongly against the rejection of the whole, and accepts himself xlvi. 3-26 (Egypt), and substantial parts of most of the other prophecies. On l. 1-li. 58, see the note prefixed to l. 1.

Hardly has the prophet said these words, when he sees the Egyptians already in flight.

The prophecy vv. 14–26 seems naturally to be the sequel to vv. 3–12; though Cornill has urged that it may be later, and belong to the period of Jeremiah's residence in Egypt (xliii. 7 ff.), to which xliii. 10–13 (shortly after 586), foretelling Nebuchadnezzar's invasion and conquest of Egypt, also belongs. Nebuchadnezzar did in fact invade Egypt in 568: see the note on xliii. 13.

<sup>a</sup> The bracketed words (which mar the symmetry and rhythm of the verse, and are not expressed in the Sept.) are probably later explanatory additions to the original text. Migdol and Tahpanhes (called by the Greeks Daphnae) were border cities of Egypt, in the direction of Asia; Noph (i.e. Memphis) was the capital of Lower Egypt. Cf. ii. 16, xliv. 1.

Vulg. have, thy strong one (the difference in the Heb. is very slight, and the verb dashed down and following pronouns are all singular).

<sup>a</sup> The Sept., reading what is now one word (נִסְתַּחַף) as two (נִסְ חַף) has, Wherefore is Apis fled ? Thy strong one [paraphrased in Sept. by Thy choice calf] stood not, etc.

<sup>c</sup> Read probably (from the beginning of the verse), Thy mixed people (עַרְבֵיךָ for הַרְבֵּה) have stumbled (so Sept.) and fallen ; and they said one to another (the transposition, as Sept.). The words following speak of a return of foreigners to their own country, of whom in the existing Heb. text there has been no mention. The ‘mixed people’ will be either foreign traders settled in Egypt, or foreign mercenaries serving in the Egyptian army (cf. v. 21) : see ch. xxv. 20, with the note.

<sup>e</sup> Pharaoh is to be called by a name symbolical of a great disaster (cf. xx. 3) : cf. for the word xxv. 31 ; Hos. x. 14 and Am. ii. 2 (of the roar or din of battle : AV., RV., ‘tumult’).

Vv. 27, 28 are nearly identical with xxx. 10, 11. As vv. 14-26 seem to be of the same date as vv. 3-12 (605), they can hardly be here in their original place ; for they imply that the exile has begun, and contrast too strongly with the tone of menace, in which in 605-4 (xxv. 8-11) Jeremiah was expressing himself. Probably the two verses were handed down independently ; and were placed by a com-

<sup>a</sup> I.e. Thebes, the capital of Upper Egypt, mentioned also in Nah. iii. 8, Ezek. xxx. 14, 15, 16. Amon was the tutelary god of Thebes : cf. Nah. iii. 8.

piler in ch. xxx. on account of their being germane there to the context, and also added here as a suitable counterpart to vv. 14–26.

<sup>27</sup> But thou, fear thou not, O Jacob, my servant ; neither be dismayed, O Israel : for, lo, I will save thee from afar, and thy seed from the land of their captivity ; and Jacob shall return, and shall be in rest and at ease, and none shall make him afraid.

<sup>28</sup> Fear not thou, O Jacob, my servant, saith Yahweh ; for I am with thee : for I will make a full end of all the nations whither I have driven thee, yet of thee will I not make a full end : but I will correct thee with judgement, and will in no wise leave thee unpunished.

On the Philistines.

XLVII. <sup>1</sup> That which came as Yahweh's word unto Jeremiah the prophet concerning the Philistines, before that Pharaoh smote Gaza.<sup>a</sup>

up out of the north, and they shall become an overflowing torrent, and shall overflow the land and all that is in it, the city and them that dwell therein : and the men shall cry, and all the inhabitants of the land shall howl. <sup>3</sup> At the noise of the galloping of the hoofs of his steeds, at the rattling of his chariots, at the rumbling of his wheels, the fathers look not back to their children for feebleness of hands ; <sup>4</sup> because of the day that cometh to spoil all the Philistines, to cut off from Tyre and Zidon every helper that surviveth : for Yahweh is spoiling the Philistines, the remnant of the isle<sup>a</sup> of Caphtor.<sup>b</sup> <sup>5</sup> Baldness<sup>c</sup> is come upon Gaza ; Ashkelon is brought to nought : O remnant of the Anakim,<sup>d</sup> how long wilt thou gash thyself ?<sup>e</sup> <sup>6</sup> ‘ Ah,<sup>f</sup> thou sword of Yahweh ! how long will it be ere thou be quiet ? put up thyself into thy scabbard ; rest, and be

<sup>d</sup> So Sept. (ענקים for עמקים). The Heb. text has, of their vale, which is unsuited to the context. The Anākim were a giant race, who were supposed to have dwelt in or near Hebron in prehistoric times (Num. xiii. 22, 28 ; Josh. xi. 21, xiv. 12, 15, xv. 13, 14 = Jud. i. 20), and also in the Philistine country ; see Josh. xi. 22, which explains the expression used here. Or, perhaps, O remnant of Ekron (xxv. 20) should be read.

The territory occupied by Moab was the elevated and rich plateau on the E. of the Dead Sea. Originally (Num. xxi. 26) the Moabite territory extended as far N. as Heshbon, to the N.E. of the Dead Sea (see on v. 2); but the Israelites, after their conquest of the country E. of Jordan, considered the territory N. of the Arnon (which flows down through a deep gorge into the Dead Sea at about the middle of its E. side) to belong to Reuben (Josh. xiii. 15–21), and regarded the Arnon as the N. border of Moab. But Reuben did not ultimately remain in possession of the district allotted to it; and so here, as in Isa. xv.–xvi., many of the cities assigned in Josh. xiii. 15–21 to Reuben are mentioned as occupied by Moab.

and the flight of its population.<sup>b</sup>*

Thus saith Yahweh of hosts, the God of Israel :

<sup>a</sup> So Sept. Syr. Vulg. The Heb. text (by false assimilation to v. 6) has, canst thou.

<sup>b</sup> For most of the places mentioned in this chapter, see Num. xxxii. 3, 34–38, Josh. xiii. 16–19, xxi. 36–7, and Isaiah's prophecy on Moab, chaps. xv.–xvi. In vv. 5, 29–38, there are numerous verbal reminiscences from Isa. 15–16. The passages of this chapter which—chiefly on account of their lack of independence—Kuenen (see on xlvi. 1) regarded as later expansions of the original prophecy of Jeremiah are vv. 29–38; 40*b*, 41*b* (introduced from xlix. 22; also not in Sept.); 43, 44*a* (see Isa. xxiv. 17*b*–18); 44*b* (Jer. xi. 23, xxiii. 12); 45, 46 (see Num. xxi. 28, xxiv. 17, xxi. 29; not in Sept.). Cornill considers the original prophecy to have consisted of vv. 1–3, 6–7, 11–14, 16–19, 25, 28, 33*a*, 35, 38*b*, 39*b*, 44*b*, 47*a*.

Ah, for Nebo!<sup>a</sup> because it is spoiled; Kiriathaim is put to shame, it is taken: Misgab<sup>b</sup> is put to shame and dismayed; <sup>2</sup> the renown of Moab is no more. In Heshbon<sup>c</sup> they have devised evil against her, saying, 'Come, and let us cut her off from being a nation: also, O Madmen,<sup>d</sup> thou shalt be brought to silence; the sword shall follow after thee.'<sup>e</sup> <sup>3</sup> The sound of a cry from Horonaim, spoiling and great destruction!<sup>e</sup> <sup>4</sup> Moab is destroyed<sup>f</sup>; they make a cry to be heard unto Zoar.<sup>g</sup> <sup>5</sup> For by the ascent of Luhith with weeping do they go up<sup>h</sup>; for

<sup>b</sup> A place not elsewhere mentioned. The word means a high retreat (Isa. xxv. 12, RV. high fort); so it was doubtless the name of some fortress.

<sup>c</sup> An ancient and famous city on the E. of Jordan, about thirteen miles E. of the upper end of the Dead Sea: originally Moabite (Num. xxi. 26), afterwards the capital of Sihon, king of the Amorites, allotted to Reuben (Josh. xiii. 17), and now again in the possession of Moab (cf. Isa. xv. 4, xvi. 8, 9). In the Heb. there is a play on the name in 'devised.' 'They' will be the foe, who must be supposed to have captured Heshbon, and to be planning there the ruin of the entire nation ('her' = Moab).

<sup>f</sup> The national god of Moab : cf. Num. xxi. 29, 1 Kings xi. 7. V. 7b is modelled on Am. i. 15.

<sup>h</sup> The Mishōr (or ‘plain-country’), the regular name of the extensive elevated plateau (c. 2500 ft. above the Medit. Sea), on which most of the Moabite cities lay : cf. Deut. iii. 10 (RVm.) ; Josh. xiii. 9, 16, 17, 21.

he that doeth Yahweh's work negligently, and cursed be he that keepeth back his sword from blood!

*Moab has for long been left unmolested in his land ;
but now his security will be rudely disturbed.*

<sup>c</sup> Or, as we should say, be disappointed by ; viz. through the expected help not being given. The prep. (lit. from) denotes the source whence the disappointment comes. Cf. ii. 36, xiv 3 ; Isa. i. 29, xx. 5. The meaning is not ' to be ashamed of (AV., RV.) as we should understand the expression.

and all ye that know his name ;

O thou daughter<sup>f</sup> that inhabitest Dibon ;<sup>g</sup>
For the spoiler of Moab is come up against thee, he hath destroyed thy fortresses.

<sup>19</sup> Stand by the way, and watch,<sup>h</sup>

<sup>g</sup> Dibon lay on two hills (hence 'come down'), 13 miles E. of the Dead Sea, and 4 miles N. of the Arnon : see views in Libbey and Hoskins, The Jordan Valley and Petra (1905), i. 289, 293. It was here that the famous 'Moabite Stone' was found in 1868.

derision unto thee ? or was he found among thieves, that as often as thou spakest of him, thou didst wag the head ?<sup>a</sup> <sup>28</sup> Leave the cities, and dwell in the crags, O ye inhabitants of Moab, and be like the dove that maketh her nest in the sides of the hole's mouth.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>b</sup> Alluding to the inaccessible crevices and fissures, high up the rocky sides of the defiles and gorges of Palestine—including in particular, the gorge of the Arnon—in which innumerable doves make their nests. See Tristram, Nat. Hist. of the Bible, p. 215 ; and cf. Cant. ii. 14.

<sup>a</sup> Varied from Isa. xvi. 7*b* by the change of 'raisin-cakes' (רִצְצִים) into 'men' (אֲנָשִׁים). Kir-heres, the Kir-haréseth of Isa. xvi. 7, 2 Kings iii. 25, was probably Kerak, 18 miles S. of the Arnon, and 8 miles E. of the Dead Sea, a strongly fortified place, situated on a very steep rocky hill, surrounded by deep ravines.

<sup>b</sup> The Heb. has, will one, but the context requires the first person (one letter different).

<sup>c</sup> With a low, plaintive cry, resembling the note of the dove: cf. the same Heb. word in Isa. xxxviii. 14, lix. 11 (where 'mourn' in AV., RV., as in the present passage, does not mean to grieve or sorrow, but is equivalent to 'moan').

<sup>d</sup> Read probably, as Isa. xvi. 9*a*, With the weeping; i.e. as Jazer weeps (viz. over its ruined vineyards), so will I.

<sup>e</sup> I.e. the Dead Sea (so Isa. xvi. 8*d*). Sibmah, mentioned also Num. xxxii. 3 (Sēbām), 38, Josh. xiii. 19,—according to Jerome near Heshbon, and so perhaps the modern Sūmia, 2½ miles WNW. of Heshbon,—must have been famous for its vines (cf. Isa. xvi. 8, 9), and this verse must describe the area over which the vines derived from Sibmah extended: northwards to Jazer (according to Eusebius, 15 miles N. of Heshbon), westwards, over the Dead Sea: Isaiah (xvi. 8) adds eastwards also towards the wilderness.

from the fruitful field, and from the land of Moab ; and I have caused wine to cease from the winevats : none shall tread (the grapes) with shouting ;<sup>a</sup> the shouting shall be no shouting.<sup>b</sup> <sup>34</sup> From [or Because of] the cry of Heshbon even unto Elealeh,<sup>c</sup> even unto Jahaz have they uttered their voice, from Zoar even unto Horonaim and<sup>d</sup> the third Eglath<sup>e</sup> : for the waters of Nimrim also shall become desolate.<sup>f</sup> <sup>35</sup> And I will cause to cease from Moab, saith Yahweh, him that offereth in<sup>g</sup> the high place, and him that

<sup>b</sup> I.e. the huzzah of the grape-treaders will be no true huzzah : it will become the huzzah of the attacking foe (xxv. 30, li. 14, Isa. xvi. 9—in all the same word hēdād).

<sup>e</sup> Here also the text seems to be defective. Perhaps some such words as Moab calleth out should be inserted after 'the third Eglath.'

<sup>f</sup> Heb. desolations (so Isa. xv. 6). The meaning is, they will be dried up, their sources being stopped by the enemy (cf. 2 Kings iii. 25).

<sup>g</sup> So with the change of a point (lit. the offerer of). Or render, him that bringeth up (viz. a procession of worshippers) to. Or read, with Sept., him that goeth up to (one letter omitted). (The Heb. text, as pointed, cannot be rendered, 'him that offereth in.') For the 'high place,' cf. Isa. xv. 2, xvi. 12.

burneth incense to his god. <sup>36</sup> Therefore mine heart soundeth for Moab like pipes, and mine heart soundeth like pipes for the men of Kir-heres<sup>a</sup> : therefore the abundance that he hath gotten<sup>b</sup> is perished. <sup>37</sup> For every head is bald, and every beard clipped ; upon all hands are gashes, and upon all<sup>c</sup> loins is sackcloth.<sup>d</sup> <sup>38</sup> Upon all the housetops of Moab and in the broad places thereof every one is wailing :<sup>e</sup> for I have broken Moab like a vessel wherein is no pleasure, saith Yahweh. <sup>39</sup> How is it dismayed ! (how) do they howl ! how hath Moab turned the back with shame ! thus shall Moab become a derision and a dismaying to all that are round about him.

<sup>g</sup> An important city of Moab, mentioned also in Am. ii. 2, and by Mesha in his Inscription (the ' Moabite Stone '), l. 13, where he says that he ' dragged before Chemosh in Keriyioth ' (presumably in his sanctuary there) an altar-hearth which he had fastnesses are seized, and the heart of the mighty men of Moab in that day shall be as the heart of a woman in her pangs. <sup>42</sup> And Moab shall be destroyed from being a people, because he hath magnified himself against Yahweh. <sup>43</sup> Fear,<sup>a</sup> and the pit, and the trap, are upon thee, O inhabitant of Moab, saith Yahweh. <sup>44</sup> He that fleeth from the fear shall fall into the pit; and he that getteth up out of the pit shall be taken in the trap: for I will bring upon her, even upon Moab, the year of their visitation,<sup>b</sup> saith Yahweh. <sup>45</sup> Under the shadow of Heshbon they that fled stand without strength: for<sup>d</sup> a fire is gone forth out of Heshbon, and a flame from the house<sup>e</sup> of Sihon; and it hath devoured the temples of Moab's head, and the crown of the

<sup>e</sup> So, changing one letter (מבית for מבין), 'house of Sihon' being a poetical designation of Heshbon, Sihon's old capital (Num. xxi. 26, Deut. ii. 26, al.). The Heb. text has from the midst, which yields no satisfactory sense. Num. xxi. 28 has 'from the city (מקריית) of Sihon.'

head of the sons of tumult.<sup>a</sup> <sup>46</sup> Woe unto thee, O Moab ! the people of Chemosh is undone : for thy sons are taken away captive, and thy daughters into captivity. <sup>47</sup> Yet<sup>b</sup> will I turn the captivity of Moab in the latter days, saith Yahweh.

The Ammonites are threatened with retribution for taking to themselves the territory of Gad.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>d</sup> The territory of Gad was on the E. of Jordan, from Heshbon at least as far N. as the Jabbok (cf. Josh. xiii. 14-28 ; Num. xxxii. 34-36 ; but the details do not entirely agree ; see GAD in Hastings' Dict. of the Bible) : the Ammonite territory was on the E. of this, their principal city Rabbah (called by the Greeks, from Ptolemy Philadelphus, Philadelphia, now ' Ammān ), on the upper course of the Jabbok, being 14 miles NE. of Heshbon, and 24 miles E. of the Jordan.

<sup>e</sup> So Sept. (Μελχολ), Pesh. Vulg. The Heb. text, as pointed, has Malcam, which would mean ' their king.' Milcom was the national god of the Ammonites (1 Kings xi. 5, 33).

<sup>f</sup> I.e. Has Israel no children of its own, that the Ammonites should have taken possession of this portion of its territory ?

fore, behold, the days are coming, saith Yahweh, that I will cause the shout of battle to be heard against Rabbah of the children of Ammon ; and it shall become a desolate mound,<sup>a</sup> and her daughters<sup>b</sup> shall be burned with fire : then shall Israel inherit them that did inherit him, saith Yahweh. <sup>3</sup> Howl, O Heshbon, for Ai<sup>c</sup> is laid waste ; cry, ye daughters of Rabbah, gird you with sackcloth : wail, and run to and fro among the (sheep-)folds ; for Milcom<sup>d</sup> shall go into exile, his priests and his princes together.<sup>e</sup> <sup>4</sup> Why gloriest thou in the vales, (that) thy vale floweth (with fertility),<sup>f</sup> O backturning

<sup>a</sup> Heb. tēl, familiar now, in its Arabic form Tell, as the name of many 'mounds' in Palestine concealing the remains of ancient cities. So Deut. xiii. 16, Josh. viii. 28 (see RVm.).

<sup>b</sup> Fig. for surrounding towns or villages. So Num. xxi. 25, xxxii. 42 ; Josh. xv. 45 (see RVm.), al. Sept., however, perhaps rightly, has, her high places (one letter different).

<sup>c</sup> Heshbon was a Moabite city (xlviii. 2, 34, 45), so that it is difficult to understand why it should be mentioned in a prophecy on Ammon ; and Ai is an otherwise unknown place. Duhm's conjecture, removing both these difficulties, is a clever one : Howl, O palace (הַיִּצְבוֹן for אֶרְמוֹן) : cf., though the Hebrew words different, Am. viii. 3 RVm.), for the city (הָעִיר for עִי) is laid waste ; the palace and city will then be those of Rabbah (2 Sam. xii. 27), which is the subject of the context, both before (v. 2) and after (v. 3).

<sup>f</sup> The expression is peculiar, and doubtful : note that 'with fertility' has to be supplied to make sense. By a change in one letter, we could read (Grätz), Why gloriest thou in the vales, the multitude of thy vales ? Cornill would read simply, Why gloriest daughter?<sup>a</sup> that trusted in her treasures, that said,<sup>b</sup> 'Who shall come unto me?'<sup>5</sup> Behold, I am bringing a fear upon thee, saith the Lord Yahweh of hosts, from all that are round about thee; and ye shall be driven out every man right forth,<sup>c</sup> and there shall be none to gather up him that wandereth. <sup>6</sup> Yet afterward I will bring back the captivity of the children of Ammon, saith Yahweh.

thou in thy vale? The allusion would then be in particular to the broad open plain (c. 2700 feet above the sea), surrounded on three sides by mountains (c. 3100-3300 feet) in which Rabbah itself lay (see G. A. Smith's large map of Palestine).

<sup>d</sup> In this prophecy on Edom, v. 7 is similar to Obad. 8, and vv. 9-10a, 14-16, are largely identical, or nearly so, with Obad. 5-6, 1-4, respectively. The common passages are based probably upon some older prophecy, which Jer. and Obad. each adapt in his own way.

Its capital, Petra, lay in an amphitheatre of mountains, accessible only through the narrow gorge, called the Sik, winding in with precipitous sides from the W. ; and the mountain sides round Petra, and the ravines about it, contain innumerable rock-hewn cavities, some being tombs, but others dwellings, in which the ancient inhabitants lived. 'For' gives the reason why one like a lion is to be sent against Edom.

<sup>f</sup> I.e. who will summon me to meet him in a court of law, or in a trial of strength ? Exactly the same expression occurs in Job ix. 19.

<sup>b</sup> So with a very slight change in the punctuation(י for ה), The Heb. text has, she hath seized on trembling (cf. Job xviii. 20 RVm.).

<sup>c</sup> If the text is correct, this will be an example of an idiom common in German, but otherwise unknown in Heb., the meaning being (in English idiom), How is the city of renown forsaken ! Duhm would remove the anomaly by reading Woe to her ! (אוי לה) for לֵאמֹר the city of renown is forsaken.

<sup>d</sup> This verse must be supposed to be spoken by one of the citizens of Damascus. Syr. Targ. Aq. Symm. Theod. Vulg. (the reading of the Sept. cannot be determined), however, have the city of joy (מִשׁוֹשׁ for מִשׁוֹשׁ) ; cf. 'houses of joy' in Isa. xxxii. 13. If this be the true reading, the words will be the prophet's, and the inverted commas will of course disappear.

(2) Chaps. 1. 1.—li. 58.

On Babylon.

A long and impassioned prophecy against Babylon. The time of her end is approaching, when the violence done by her to Israel will at length be avenged (l. 17 f., 33 f., li. 24, 34-36) : a people from the north, even the Medes, are about to be stirred up against her : again and again the prophet with eager vehemence summons them to begin the fray, while he bids the Jewish exiles escape betimes from the doomed city, the future fate of which he contemplates with manifest delight. The date will naturally be shortly before B.C. 538, when the conquests of Cyrus began to kindle the hopes of the exiles, and to mark him out as their coming deliverer (Isa. xli. 2, 25, xliv. 28, etc.).

The prophecy cannot be Jeremiah's. According to li. 59, 60, its date, if it were Jeremiah's, would be the fourth year of Zedekiah (B.C. 593). But (1) the historical situation

presupposed by the prophecy is not that of B.C. 593, but much later: the Temple is alluded to as having suffered violence (l. 28, li. 11, 51), the Jews are in exile (l. 4 f., 17, li. 34), and the end of Babylon is approaching rapidly (l. 8 f., li. 6, 45 f.). Then (2) the point of view is not that of Jeremiah either in or about 593 B.C.: Jeremiah at that time, as we know from chaps. xxvii.–xxix., was earnestly opposing the prophets who promised that the yoke of Babylon would speedily be broken, and was exhorting the exiles to settle down contentedly in their new home: but the prophet who speaks in l. 1–li. 58 declares confidently that the fall of Babylon is close at hand, and does his utmost to inspire the exiles with the hope of a speedy release. And (3) the prophecy is animated by a temper which is not Jeremiah's. The vein of strong feeling against the Chaldaeans which pervades it, and the satisfaction shewn at the prospect of their approaching fate, are not consistent with Jeremiah's repeatedly avowed conviction that the Chaldaeans were the agents appointed by Providence for the punishment of Israel's sin—a work which in 593 was not yet accomplished. There breathes in this prophecy the spirit of an Israelite, whose experiences had been far other than Jeremiah's, who had smarted under the painful yoke of the Chaldaeans (cf. Isa. xlvi. 6 f., lii. 3), and whose thoughts were full of vengeance for the sufferings which his fellow-countrymen had endured at their hands. The prophecy must have been the work of a prophet familiar with Jeremiah's writings, and accustomed to the use of similar phraseology, who wrote shortly before the fall of Babylon (B.C. 538), from the same general standpoint as Isa. xiii. 2–xiv. 23, xl.–lxvi. In later times, it seems, the prophecy came to be attributed to Jeremiah, and was identified with the 'scroll' sent by him to Babylon, of which we read in li. 59–64: a late editor of the book of

Jeremiah thus prefixed it to li. 59-64, at the same time adding the title, and also li. 60*b*, for the purpose of identifying the prophecy with the contents of the scroll.<sup>a</sup>

The prophecy is remarkable for the many reminiscences, and even (l. 40, 41-43, 44-46, li. 15-19) excerpts from other prophecies, contained in it; the more striking instances are pointed out in the notes. The frequency with which, instead of the subject being developed regularly, the same thought is again and again reverted to (as l. 3, 9, 25, 41, li. 1*f*., 25; l. 14, 21, 26, 29, li. 11*f*, 27; l. 8, li. 6, 45, 50; l. 12, 39*f*., li. 26*b*, 29*b*, 37, 43), is due probably to the torrent of impetuous feeling by which the prophet is carried along.

<sup>35</sup> A sword is upon the Chaldeans, saith Yahweh, and upon the inhabitants of Babylon, and upon her princes, and upon her wise men. <sup>36</sup> A sword is upon the boasters<sup>a</sup>, and they shall dote<sup>b</sup> ; a sword is upon her warriors, and they shall be dismayed. <sup>37</sup> A sword is upon her<sup>c</sup> horses, and upon her<sup>c</sup> chariots, and upon all the mixed people<sup>d</sup> that are in the midst of her, and they shall become as women : a sword is upon her treasures, and they shall be robbed. <sup>38</sup> A drought<sup>e</sup> is upon her waters, and

<sup>e</sup> Sept. (Luc.), Syr. have, a sword. In the Heb. 'sword' (hereb) differs from 'drought' (horeb) only by a single vowel ; and it is uncertain whether the prophet intended thus slightly to vary the word used by him in the other cases so as to adapt Every goldsmith is put to shame by his graven image :

For his molten image is falsehood, and there is no breath in them.<sup>a</sup>

For he is the former of all things ;

And [Israel is]<sup>b</sup> the tribe of his inheritance :

Yahweh of hosts is his name.

<sup>c</sup> If the future tenses be kept in vv. 20-23, the reference will be to the conqueror of Babylon, Cyrus. But these verbs admit equally of being rendered 'do I dash in pieces,' 'do I destroy,' etc., i.e. I am in the habit of dashing in pieces, destroying, etc., and many moderns prefer this rendering: the reference will then be to Babylon (cf. l. 23), which has hitherto been Yahweh's instrument for subduing the earth, but which is now to reach shortly the term of her power. But v. 24 is unfavourable to this view.

and with thee will I destroy kingdoms; <sup>21</sup> and with thee will I dash in pieces the horse and his rider; and with thee will I dash in pieces the chariot and him that rideth therein; <sup>22</sup> and with thee will I dash in pieces man and woman; and with thee will I dash in pieces the old man and the youth; and with thee will I dash in pieces the young man and the maid; <sup>23</sup> and with thee will I dash in pieces the shepherd and his flock; and with thee will I dash in pieces the husbandman and his yoke (of oxen); and with thee will I dash in pieces governors and viceroys.<sup>a</sup> <sup>24</sup> And I will repay to Babylon and to all the inhabitants of Chaldaea all their evil that they have done in Zion before your eyes,<sup>b</sup> saith Yahweh.

Both these words (which occur also elsewhere in Heb.: see, for instance, for the former Hag. i. 1, Neh. ii. 7, and for the latter Isa. xli. 25) are of Assyrian origin; and are often used in the Assyrian inscriptions of the governors of cities or provinces. <sup>e</sup> Heb. tiphsar (also Nah. iii. 17), a word of foreign origin, to all appearance the Assyrian dupsarru, 'tablet-writer,' i.e. scribe, very common in the Assyrian inscriptions ; in Heb. (here and Nah. iii. 17) used of some high military official.

dominion. <sup>29</sup> And the land quaketh and is in anguish : for Yahweh's purposes against Babylon do stand, to make the land of Babylon a desolation, without inhabitant. <sup>30</sup> The mighty men<sup>a</sup> of Babylon have ceased to fight, they remain in the fastnesses : their might hath failed;<sup>b</sup> they are become as women<sup>c</sup> : her dwellingplaces are set on fire ; her bars are broken. <sup>31</sup> One post<sup>d</sup> runneth to meet another, and one messenger<sup>e</sup> to meet another, to tell the king of Babylon that his city is taken on every quarter ; <sup>32</sup> and that the ferries<sup>f</sup> are seized, and they have burned the pools<sup>g</sup> with fire, and the men of war are affrighted.

<sup>e</sup> So the Heb., as pointed (the word, as Isa. iv. 4 ‘purged,’ Ez. xl. 38 ‘washed’). But probably, with other points, we should read, hath driven me away (l. 17).

<sup>g</sup> Alluding probably to the great lake constructed by Nebuchadnezzar for the defence of Babylon (cf. Hdt. i. 185): as he tells us himself, ‘That foes with evil purpose the bounds of Babylon might not approach, great waters like the volume of the sea I carried round the land, and the crossing of these was like the crossing of the surging sea, of the briny flood' (India House Inscription, vi. 39 ff., translated in Records of the Past, second series, iii. 116).

<sup>38</sup> All together like young lions do they roar, they growl as lions' whelps.<sup>a</sup> <sup>39</sup> When they are heated, I will make their feast, and I will make them drunken,<sup>b</sup> that they may exult,<sup>c</sup> and sleep a perpetual sleep, and not wake, saith Yahweh. <sup>40</sup> I will bring them down like lambs to be slaughtered, like rams with he-goats.<sup>d</sup> <sup>41</sup> How is Sheshach<sup>e</sup> taken! and the praise of the whole earth seized! how is Babylon become an appalment among the

<sup>c</sup> I.e. that they may be elated, at least for the time, by the intoxication of the feast. But the idea agrees badly with the sequel. The Sept. has, be stupefied, which suits the context much better, though it is not apparent what Heb. word this rend. would express. Giesebr. suggests swoon (יעלזו for יעלפו), Isa. li. 20.

high gates shall be burned with fire; thus the peoples labour for vanity,<sup>a</sup> and the nations weary themselves<sup>b</sup> for the fire.<sup>c</sup>

The predictions contained in this narrative (vv. 62–64) do not either display the animus, or imply the historical situation, of l. 2–li. 58; there is thus no inconsistency in supposing Jeremiah to be their author. A simple, unimpassioned declaration of the future end of Babylon is not inconsistent with Jeremiah's attitude at the beginning of Zedekiah's reign (cf. the limit of seventy years assigned to Babylonian rule, and the promise of restoration afterwards, in xxix. 10), and the symbolical action of v. 63 is analogous to those narrated in xiii. 1–7, xix. 1, 10, xxvii. 2, xliii. 9.

Now Seraiah was quartermaster.<sup>a</sup> <sup>60</sup> And Jeremiah wrote all the evil that should come upon Babylon in a scroll [, even all these words that are written against Babylon].<sup>b</sup> <sup>61</sup> And Jeremiah said to Seraiah, ‘When thou comest to Babylon, then see thou, and read all these words, <sup>62</sup> and say, “O Yahweh, thou hast spoken against this place, to cut it off, that none shall dwell therein, neither man nor beast; for it shall be desolate for ever.” <sup>63</sup> And it shall be, when thou hast made an end of reading this scroll, that thou shalt bind a stone to it, and cast it into the midst of Euphrates: <sup>64</sup> and thou shalt say, “Thus shall Babylon sink, and shall not rise, because of the evil that I am bringing upon her.”’<sup>c</sup>

Thus far are the words of Jeremiah.<sup>d</sup>

CHAPTER LII

(1) The capture of Jerusalem by the Chaldaeans, and exile of its inhabitants.

Vv. 1-27 are excerpted from 2 Kings xxiv. 18-xxv. 21 : vv. 28-30 are taken by the compiler from some independent source. The entire account was probably added here for the purpose of shewing how Jeremiah's principal and most constant prediction was fulfilled. The text of vv. 1-27 has, in several places, been preserved here more purely than in Kings. Vv. 4-11, 13-16, have occurred already slightly abridged, in xixxx. 1-2, 4-10.<sup>a</sup>

LII. <sup>1</sup> Zedekiah was one and twenty years old when he began to reign; and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Hamutal the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah. <sup>2</sup> And he did that which was evil in Yahweh's eyes, according to all that Jehoiakim had done. <sup>3</sup> For through the anger of Yahweh did it come to pass in Jerusalem and Judah, until he cast them out from before his face :<sup>b</sup> and Zedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon. <sup>4</sup> And it came to pass in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, that Nebuchadrezzar king of

Babylon came, he and all his army, against Jerusalem, and pitched against it, and built forts against it round about. <sup>5</sup> So the city was besieged unto the eleventh year of king Zedekiah. <sup>6</sup> In the fourth month, in the ninth day of the month, the famine was sore in the city, so that there was no bread for the people of the land. <sup>7</sup> Then a breach was made in the city,<sup>a</sup> and all the men of war fled, and went forth out of the city by night by the way of the gate between the two walls, which was by the king's garden (the Chaldaeans being by the city round about); and they went by the way to the Arábah. <sup>8</sup> But the army of the Chaldaeans pursued after the king, and overtook Zedekiah in the steppes of Jericho; and all his army was scattered from him. <sup>9</sup> And they took the king, and carried him up unto the king of Babylon to Riblah in the land of Hamath; and he gave judgement upon him. <sup>10</sup> And the king of Babylon slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes: and all the princes of Judah also did he slay in Riblah. <sup>11</sup> And he put out the eyes of Zedekiah; and the king of Babylon bound him in fetters, and carried him to Babylon, and put him in prison<sup>b</sup> till the day of his death.

<sup>b</sup> So adding a letter (נָשָׂא לְפָנָיו for נָשָׂא): 'stood before' = was servant to (cf. on xv. 19). 2 Kings xxv. 8 has, the servant of (without 'before'). 'Stood' and 'servant' are in unpointed Hebrew very similar.

in Yahweh's house, did the Chaldaeans break in pieces, and carried all the bronze of them to Babylon. <sup>18</sup> The pots<sup>a</sup> also, and the shovels,<sup>a</sup> and the snuffers,<sup>b</sup> and the basons,<sup>a</sup> and the spoons, and all the vessels of bronze wherewith they used to minister, took they away. <sup>19</sup> And the cups,<sup>c</sup> and the snuffdishes,<sup>d</sup> and the basons,<sup>c</sup> and the pots, and the candlesticks,<sup>e</sup> and the spoons,<sup>c</sup> and the libation-bowls,<sup>f</sup> whatsoever was of gold, and whatsoever was of silver, respectively, did the captain of the guard take away. <sup>20</sup> The pillars, two, the sea, one, and the bronze bulls that were under it, twelve, and the bases,<sup>g</sup> which king Solomon had made for Yahweh's house [, ten]<sup>h</sup>: the bronze of all <sup>a</sup> 1 Kings vii. 45 (of bronze); see also Exod. xxvii. 3, which shews that they were used for the altar of burnt offering. The 'basons' (lit. tossing-vessels) were for 'tossing' the sacrificial blood against the sides of the altar (Lev. i. 5, 11, iii. 2, 8, 13 al., where 'sprinkle' in AV., RV., should be toss or dash).

these vessels was without weight. <sup>21</sup> And as for the pillars, the height of the one pillar was eighteen cubits ; and a line of twelve cubits did compass it ; and the thickness thereof was four fingers : it was hollow. <sup>22</sup> And a chapter<sup>a</sup> of bronze was upon it ; and the height of the one chapter was five cubits ; and network and pomegranates were upon the chapter round about, all of bronze : and the second pillar also had like unto these, (even) [network]<sup>b</sup> and pomegranates. <sup>23</sup> And the pomegranates were ninety and six, windwards<sup>c</sup> ; all the pomegranates were an hundred upon the network round about.<sup>d</sup> <sup>24</sup> And the captain of the guard took Seraiah the chief priest, and Zephaniah the

<sup>c</sup> So the Heb. ; but the meaning is very uncertain : visible outwards (four of the hundred surrounding each capital being supposed to be hidden where the pillar approached closely the wall of the porch), and hanging loosely (four of the pomegranates being supposed to be fixed to the network on the capitals, and the rest to have hung down in festoons between them), have both been suggested, the former by the Jewish Commentator, Rashi (A.D. 1040-1105). In 1 Kings vii. 20, 42 the number of pomegranates on each capital is said to have been 200, arranged in two rows ; the present verse is apparently to be understood as referring only to one of the two rows.

<sup>d</sup> For vv. 21-23, cf. 1 Kings vii. 15-18. Vv. 17, 18 are corrupt ; and we must read, partly after Sept., connecting v. 18 with v. 20b : <sup>17</sup> 'And he made two nets to cover the chapters which were upon the top of the pillars ; a net for the one chapter, and a net for the other chapter. <sup>18</sup>And he made the pomegranates ; second priest, and the three keepers of the threshold :<sup>a</sup> <sup>25</sup> he took also out of the city an eunuch, which had the charge of the men of war ; and seven men of them that saw the king's face,<sup>b</sup> which were found in the city ; and the scribe<sup>c</sup> of the captain of the host, who enlisted<sup>d</sup> the people of the land ;<sup>e</sup> and threescore men of the people of the land, that were found in the midst of the city. <sup>26</sup> So Nebuzaradan, the captain of the guard, took them, and brought them to the king of Babylon to Riblah. <sup>27</sup> And the king of Babylon smote them, and put them to death in Riblah in the land of Hamath. Thus Judah was carried into exile out of its land.<sup>f</sup> and two rows of pomegranates in bronze were upon the one network, and the pomegranates were two hundred, in two rows round about upon the one chapter ; and so made he for the other chapter (cf. v. 42). See Burney's Notes on the Heb. text of the Book of Kings, ad loc. ; or Skinner's note on the passage in the Century Bible.

<sup>f</sup> The compiler has omitted here 2 Kings xxv. 22-26 (appointment of Gedaliah as governor, his murder by Ishmael, and migration of Jews into Egypt), as unnecessary, after the fuller particulars already given in Jer. xxxix. 14, xl. 7-9, xli. 1, 2, xliii. 4-7.

(2) The favour shown by Evil-Merodach to Jehoiachin.

Excerpted from 2 Kings xxv. 27–30.

<sup>a</sup> Vv. 28–30 are not in the Sept. (or in 2 Kings xxv.).

<sup>b</sup> Read, probably, seventeenth. This would be the year in which the siege of Jerusalem was begun (comp. v. 4 with v. 12) : the reference appears to be to the men of Judah taken prisoners (as opposed to those out of Jerusalem, v. 29). The items given do not include the numbers taken into exile after the capture of Jerusalem (in Nebuchadnezzar's nineteenth year).

NOTES EXPLANATORY OF SOME OF THE RENDERINGS ADOPTED

II. <sup>3</sup> produce. תבואה denotes properly 'in-come,' used primarily of that which comes in annually in kind from the fields. In Lev. xxv. 15, 16 RV., well rendered by crops; elsewhere (as Prov. iii. 9) by increase, sometimes also (as Lev. xxv. 22; Prov. viii. 19, xv. 6) by fruit(s) or (in a fig. sense) by revenue(s).

<sup>8</sup> rebelled. The idea in פִּיטוֹ is not that of transgression against a law, but that of defection or revolt against a person. See 2 Kings i. 1, iii. 5, viii. 22.

<sup>9</sup> Plead has become a misleading rendering; for (unless it is used in a palpably forensic connexion) it suggests inevitably to a modern reader the idea of entreat, intercede. It is true, it always in AV. means 'to argue for or against a cause' (Hastings, s.v.); but who is to know this, unless he happens to have been a student of Old English? AV. itself has sometimes 'contend' (as Isa. xlix. 25, l. 8); and the American revisers have very reasonably preferred this in many cases where the English revisers have left 'plead' (see the Appendix to the RV. of OT., 'Classes of passages,' VII.). Cf. Hos. ii. 2, where 'plead with' is as misleading as it is here, the meaning being really expostulate. For other examples of the same Heb. word (פָּרַע) see Gen. xxvi. 20 ('strove,' i.e. disputed), xxxi. 36 ('chode,' i.e. contended), Ex. xvii. 2, 4 ('strove': cf. v. 7), Jud. vi. 31 ('plead,' i.e. argue), Isa. i. 17 ('plead for.' i.e. defend the cause of), iii. 13 ('to plead,' i.e. to argue his case), xlv. 9, l. 8 ('contend'); and of Yahweh in relation to His servants, or His people, in a friendly or unfriendly sense, according to the context, Isa. xlix. 25, li. 22 (so Ps. xxxv. 1, xliii. 1, al.), lvii. 16, Ps. ciii. 9 ('chide'), Mic. vii. 9, Jer. l. 34, li. 36. It is a pity, in the case of such a word as this, that we have no one equivalent, clearly understood, which will suit all passages. For the cognate subst., see, in a literal forensic sense, Deut. xxv. 1 ('controversy'), 2 Sam. xv. 2, 4 ('suit'): fig., in connexion with Yahweh, Jer. xxv. 31 ('controversy'); so Hos. iv. 1, Mic. vi. 2.

<sup>16</sup> The mixture of metaphors is strange: a depastured, or devastated, country (for  $\text{רָעַר} = \text{feed on}$ , cf. Mic. v. 6 [Heb. 5] RVm., where, however, the use of the word is evidently determined by the 'shepherds' of the preceding verse, and Jer. vi. 3, where the 'shepherds' must be fig. of foes), and a shaven head [cf. Isa. vii. 20]; though in the Heb., it may be observed, the 'crown of the head' is at least not the direct object of the verb, the more exact rend. being 'depasture thee as to (or on) the crown of the head' (construction as Ps. iii. 8: G.-K. § 117 ll.). However, Gesenius, Ewald, and Graf all accepted 'feed on'; the last-named scholar urging against the alternative vocalization  $\text{רָעַרְךָ}$ , 'break' (Ps. ii. 9) 'the crown of thy head,' that this would assert the absolute ruin of Judah (Ps. lxviii. 21), and consequently imply too much (especially as the tense used denotes properly 'keep breaking'). Duhm suggests either  $\text{רָעַרְךָ}$ , 'break,' or  $\text{רָעַרְךָ}$ , 'lay bare (viz. by shaving) the crown of thy head'; Cornill also accepts lay bare. Still, we at least do not know whether  $\text{רָעַר}$  would have been used of laying bare the head, though the derivative  $\text{רָעַר}$  signifies a razor.

when he led thee by the way. The Heb. (lit. 'in the time of one leading thee by the way') is very peculiar (Tenses, § 135. 6 Obs. 2): the change of הוֹלִיכְךָ into the perf. הוֹלִיכָה would, however, remove this difficulty. A reference to Israel's unfaithfulness at the time of the Exodus as the cause of its present troubles is not, however, probable: and Duhm may be right in his suggestion that בעת מוֹלִיכְךָ בְּדֶרֶךְ may be a corrupt anticipation of the following ועתה מה לך לְדֶרֶךְ.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>22</sup> (footnote). 'Alkali' (Arab.) means properly 'that which is burnt' (the same word kali in Heb. [קָלִי] signifies 'parched [corn]'). That the renderings 'soda' and 'alkali' are correct has been long known: see Smith's D.B. s.v. SOAP; Payne Smith in the Speaker's Commentary; or Plumptre in Bp. Ellicott's Commentary, ad loc. 'Lye' is a word which few now understand, though, with an explanatory footnote, I have ventured to retain it.

<sup>24</sup> תִּצְנֶה. From צָנָה to bring at the right time — to cause to meet (Exod. xxi. 13): hence, properly, right or opportune meeting. With a different nuance, הִצְנִיחַ (Judg. xiv. 4) — opportunity.

<sup>32</sup> attire (AV., RV.) means here, as generally in Old English, headband (see Dr. Aldis Wright's Bible Word-Book, s.v.): cf. the same English word in Ezek. xxiii. 15, and the verb in Lev. xvi. 4. The Heb. word however means more probably something bound on like a 'sash' (so Isa. iii. 20 RV.): notice the use of the cognate verb in Isa. xlix. 18 (RV. gird). As may be inferred from this passage and Isa. xlix. 18, it was something worn specially by a bride.

<sup>36</sup> goest thou about. It is true, הֹלֵךְ (which is the usual Aramaic word for to go; e.g. Dan. ii. 17) in the four other passages in which it occurs in the Hebrew of the Old Testament (Deut. xxxii. 36; 1 Sam. ix. 7; Job xiv. 11; Prov. xx. 14) means to go away, or fail, rather than simply to go; but it is doubtful whether this constitutes a sufficient ground for holding that it might not (like הִלֵּךְ) have the more general sense of go.<sup>a</sup> Giesebrecht and Duhm (after LXX. κατεφρόνησας) vocalize הִלֵּךְ, 'how greatly thou makest light of changing thy way!' i.e. how easily thou turnest from Assyria to Egypt! but הִזִּיל, in the only other place in which it occurs in Hebrew (Lam. i. 8), means specifically to make light of in the sense of to treat as common, despise (cf. זוּלל, Jer. xv. 19, Lam. i. 11; so also the Syr. Afel זוּל), not to make light of in the sense of to do easily. However, קָלַל (קָלַל) combines both ideas (2 Kings iii. 18; Gen. xvi. 4, 5); so it is possible that זוּלל may have done the same. Still, we do not know that it did so. It is thus, under the circumstances, impossible to feel confidence that הִזִּיל is right.

III. <sup>1</sup> [with]. אֵת must be supplied after וַיָּנִיחַ.

וַיָּשׁוּב. Lit. and a returning to me! (is that imaginable?). See G.-K. § 113 ee.

<sup>6</sup> backturning. The play on the two senses of שׁוּב, to turn back from Yahweh, and to turn back (or return) from false gods to Him, which runs through all this passage (as far as iv. 1) is lost by the rend. 'backsliding.' Moreover, 'backsliding' does not suggest with sufficient clearness that the face is turned from Yahweh.

went up, etc. As the reference is obviously to the Northern Kingdom, which had ceased to exist a century before Jeremiah's time, the rendering (AV., RV.) is gone up . . . and hath played, suggesting something recent and even present, yields an incorrect sense.

<sup>10</sup> The Sept. has simply faithless Judah in vv. 7, 8, 10. Perhaps indeed this was the original reading in each verse: in v. 10 it is distinctly preferable; for in 'her faithless sister Judah,' the pronoun would naturally be understood by a reader to refer to the subject of v. 9, which however is incorrect, as of course Judah is there meant. The omission of 'her sister' in v. 10 removes an element of confusion in the verse, while not in the least altering the general sense.

<sup>13</sup> hearkened unto. More graphic, and also more faithful to the original, than 'obeyed'; and moreover often used elsewhere in AV., RV., for the same Hebrew. It is true, 'obeyed' is etymologically 'hearkened to,' but the sense has by long usage become obscured, and few English readers realize the fact, while many, it is certain, do not know it at all: in the Hebrew the meaning 'hearkened to' is apparent at once.

<sup>20</sup> For the omission of 'as,' cf. Isa. lv. 9, Hos. xi. 2, Job vii. 9 (Lex. p. 486*b*). בְּנִרָה for בְּנִרָה (Giesebrecht, ed. 2) would ease the construction: but after said (= thought, supposed) אֵין, not אַר, is idiomatic (see Lex. p. 38 b).

The pregnant construction, 'is faithless from,' is of course fully justifiable in Hebrew; but Sept. has eis, exactly as in clause b; and it is quite possible that ברעה should be read for נִרעה (on the frequent confusion of נ and נ in one stage of the Hebrew script, as evidenced by the versions, see the writer's Notes on Samuel, p. lxxviii.).

<sup>23</sup> Or (Gie., l.c.), changing only one point, Truly in vain from the hills (is heard) the tumult on the mountains; but 'tumult on the mountains' does not come in very naturally after 'from the hills.' Giesebr. (Comm.), Duhm, and Cornill, following the Sept., read, 'Truly in vain are the hills,' etc. (with ה for נ); but Heb. idiom would surely not say absolutely that 'the hills' were in vain, but would specify what it was in connexion with them that was in vain.

IV. <sup>1</sup> wander (i.e. wander aimlessly from Yahweh). It has been objected to this rendering that נִיר (of Cain, Gen. iv. 12 ['fugitive']; of a bird, Prov. xxvi. 2; of fugitives from a captured country or city, Jer. xlix. 30, l. 3, 8) does not express the idea of wilful wandering about, but rather of being driven out ; but, in view of the rarity with which the word occurs in Heb., it may be doubted whether this negative position can be sustained (note also Prov. xxvi. 2 of the aimless flittings of a bird). At any rate, if a doubt should be felt whether, standing alone, the word would have a moral connotation, the reading of the Sept., ‘ and dost not wander from before me ’ (ומפני לא תנוד for מפני ולא תנוד), quoted in the footnote, would go far to remove it ; and the very slight alteration of תנוד to תרוד, ‘ and dost not roam at large ’—the rare word used by Jeremiah himself in ii. 31—would remove it altogether.

detestable things. On this rend. of טְקוּצִים see the art. ABOMINATION in Hastings’ D.B. It is so rendered in AV., when it stands beside תועבה, ‘ abomination ’ (Ezek. v. 11, vii. 20), and once (Ezek. xxxvii. 23), even where it stands alone ; and it is better, for distinction, to keep the same rendering uniformly. Cf. vii. 30.

<sup>11</sup> On this use of not, suggesting or insinuating something not expressed, see Lex. p. 518*b* ; and cf. 2 Kings vi. 10, Isa. xlvii. 14*b*, Job xxxiv. 20.

<sup>12</sup> reason the case with them (so AV. marg. on xii. 1) ; lit. speak judgements (or pleadings) with them. The expression occurs also i. 16, xii. 1, xxxix. 5 = liii. 9 = 2 Kings xxv. 6 ; Jer. xii. 1 shows that it cannot really mean ‘ utter judgements against,’ but that it must acquire the sense of condemning or punishing from the context in which it is used. The passages to be compared are those in which נשפט, to argue together in judgement (G.-K. § 51*d*), is used of Yahweh :

see Jer. ii. 35, xxv. 31, Isa. lxvi. 16, Ez. xvii. 20, xx. 35, 36, xxxviii. 22, Joel iii. 2 (in all which passages 'plead' means argue or dispute in judgement, though it obviously at the same time implies that punishment will follow). מוֹתֵם is an incorrect pronunciation of the original מוֹתֵם, for מוֹתֵם, as often in Jer., Ez., 1 Kings xx.—2 Kings viii., and occasionally besides: see Lex. p. 85*b*.

<sup>14, 15</sup> On מוֹתֵם, rendered naughtiness in v. 14, and trouble in v. 15, see my Parallel Psalter, p. 450.

<sup>17</sup> me hath she defied. Inversions in English prose do not appear to me to be thoroughly natural or idiomatic; but they may perhaps be permitted occasionally, where the emphasis indicated by the Hebrew cannot be otherwise conveniently expressed. Cf. in AV. Gen. xli. 13, xlii. 36, Judg. xx. 5; also Deut. x. 20; Matt. xxvii. 32, Acts xvi. 3.

<sup>19</sup> alarm. I.e. properly All' arme! To arms! But in modern English the word has lost this meaning, and is simply (except with a verb such as sound or blow) a synonym for a shock of fear. The Heb. is shout or shouting; and the word, even in AV., is usually so rendered (e.g. Jer. xx. 16, Amos i. 14). For the rend. alarm, see Num. x. 5, 6 (with 'blow'); Jer. xlix. 2, Zeph. i. 16.

<sup>20</sup> my. I.e. not the prophet's, but the people's (hence the plural). See, for the idiom, my Introduction, p. 366 f. (ed. 7, p. 390).

<sup>23</sup> formless and empty. Heb. tōhū wā-bōhū, an alliterative description of a chaos (Gen. i. 2), in which nothing can be distinguished or defined. Tōhū is a word which it is often difficult to represent satisfactorily in English: but a survey of the passages in which it is used appears to shew that it denotes properly—not a 'waste,' but—what is undefinable, unsubstantial, or (fig.) unreal (as of idols, 1 Sam. xii. 21, of what is baseless, Isa. xxix. 21 ['a thing of nought'], of what is morally unreal, i.e. falsehood, Isa. lix. 4). The ancient Versions usually render it by words signifying emptiness, nothingness, or (fig.) vanity. Comp. the note in the writer's Book of Genesis, on i. 2.

<sup>31</sup> נָנ, implying entreaty, is rendered Oh in AV. RV. of xlv. 4. In 'Woe to me now!' it could hardly fail to be misunderstood in a temporal sense. Cf. xlv. 3.

V. <sup>1</sup> be. The italics (both here and elsewhere) are intended to indicate emphasis. וּ in Heb. always affirms with emphasis: e.g. Ps. lviii. 11 'that there is a God judging the earth'; Deut. xiii. 3 'to know whether you do love,' etc.

<sup>3</sup> חָלַל (mil'el) is derived naturally from חוּל, to be in anguish; though it might (on the analogy of a few exceptional forms, such as חָוַו Job xxiv. 1, חָוַו Isa. xvi. 8: Ges.-K. § 75*m*) just come from חָלַה, to be sick. Prov. xxiii. 35, and the frequent combination of חָלַל and מָצַה, make the latter sense the more probable; but it is better then simply to accent חָלַל (milra').

<sup>4, 5</sup> ordinance, i.e. the right way of worshipping God. The word is lit. judgement (properly a decision given by a judge), the term being used in an enlarged sense of a prescribed system of observances: so viii. 7 (where RV. has ordinance). The word thus becomes sometimes virtually equivalent to religion: see Isa. xlii. 1 ('he will bring forth—i.e. publish—religion to the nations'), 3 ('he will bring forth religion faithfully,'—in faithfulness to the trust committed to him), 4, li. 4 (|| law); cf. 2 Kings xvii. 26, 27 (where AV., RV. render poorly by 'manner'). מִשְׁפָּט is not unfrequently rendered ordinance in AV.; but judgement often remains where it is difficult to think that it can convey any clear idea to an English reader. It is particularly to be regretted that it remains in Isa. xlii. 1, 3, 4; for it here entirely obscures the prophet's sense of the 'servant's' work: religion is the word which ought here to have been employed. The references to Isa. ii. 4 (on v. 1) and to Ps. ix. 8 (on v. 3) in the recently published RV. with marginal references gloss the word incorrectly: Isa. ii. 3, li. 4 would have been the truer parallels. In other directions, also, מִשְׁפָּט acquires meanings not covered by its etymology; thus it may mean right, not in a forensic (Isa. xl. 27) or ethical (Gen. xviii. 25) sense, but in the sense of just measure or proportion: and so it denotes the right disposition of a building, Exod. xxvi. 30, 1 Kings vi. 38, Ez. xlii. 11, or of a palace, Jer. xxx. 18, a proper measure or due, 1 Kings iv. 28 (Heb. v. 8); fitness, Isa. xxviii. 26 (RV. 'aright,' lit. 'according to right or fitness'); and in Isa. xl. 14 the 'path of right' is the path by which, in the work of creation, everything was arranged in its proper measure or proportion.

<sup>7</sup> gédūd means 'troop' in the sense of a marauding troop, not 'troop' in the general sense of company.

הַדְּבָר. The intention of the Mass. punctuation is not clear; Ewald (§ 156, 2a) gives it the meaning speech. He that speaketh (Hitz., Graf, Keil) implies a very late idiom (G.-K. § 138 i, k), and is not probable.

a trap. The Heb. word is found in this sense only here. Cf. Encycl. Bibl., s.v. FOWL, § 10.

<sup>31</sup> at their hands. More exactly according to their hands; i.e. at their guidance: so xxxiii. 13 (cf. the footnote); more often in late Heb., 1 Chron. xxv. 2, 3, 6, 2 Chron. xxiii. 18, Ezra iii. 10. For יָרָו, יָרָו (Grätz, Cornill) give direction or teach, the word used technically of priests (Deut. xxiv. 8, Mic. iii. 11, Ezek. xliv. 23), is a plausible emendation.

VI. <sup>6</sup> her trees. עֲצֵה may stand for עֲצֵה; see G.-K. § 91e.

<sup>8</sup> Let thyself be admonished. The Niphal tolerativum (G.-K. § 51c). See Isa. lxx. 1, with Skinner's note (in the Cambridge Bible): the passage is one in which both AV. and RV. unfortunately miss the sense.

<sup>11</sup> (footnote). I will pour it out: i.e. the inf. abs. (יִשְׁפֹּךְ) for the imperative. See G.-K. § 113*dd*; and cf. 1 Kings xxii. 30.

<sup>26</sup> The exact meaning of הִתְפַּלֵּט (only Jer. vi. 26, xxv. 34, Ez. xxvii. 30, Mic. i. 10) is uncertain. From the context it might mean either sprinkle oneself (ancient Versions generally), besmear oneself, etc.; or (Aq., Rashi, Kimchi, AV. =RV.) roll or wallow oneself. The cognate languages supply no help: פִּלֵּט in Syriac is to dig through (διορύττειν), in New Heb. to break or pierce through. Ges. (in Thes.) defends roll oneself on the basis of two very doubtful assumptions, viz. (1) that פִּלֵּט is cognate with פִּלַם, and (2) that the primary meaning of פִּלַם was to roll.

<sup>27</sup> It has been proposed to retain מִבְצֵר, vocalizing it מִבְצֵר, and giving it the meaning gold-washer, or gold-extractor. It is true, קָצֵר in Job xxii. 24, 25 seems to mean gold ore: so מִבְצֵר might mean one who works with קָצֵר, viz. for the purpose of obtaining the precious metal from it. The verb does not however occur elsewhere in this sense, and the meaning is conjectural. מִבְצֵר can hardly be anything but an incorrect gloss on בְּחִוּן, suggested by i. 18, (and interpreting this word in the sense of בְּחִוּן, Isa. xxxii. 14, examination- or exploration-tower), and בְּחִוּנָיו, Isa. xxiii. 13.

VII. <sup>4</sup> With the plural אֱלֹהִים cf. חֲמָה 2 Ch. viii. 11.

<sup>9</sup> On the graphic 'exclamatory' (Ew. § 328) use of the inf. abs., see G.-K. § 113*ee*. Cf. Hos. iv. 2, Isa. xxi. 5; and with a question, as here, ch. iii. 1 end, Job xl. 2.

<sup>9</sup> קִטְרֶת means sweet smoke (Gk. κλίση), and הִקְטִיר means to make sweet smoke, or turn into sweet smoke, used constantly in connexion with sacrifices, Lev. i. 9, 13, 15, etc. (AV., RV. burn; but the Heb. word is quite different from the one which means to ‘burn’ so as to destroy, Lev. iv. 21, viii. 17, etc.). קִטְרֶת, means usually ‘incense’ (as something producing a kind of ‘sweet smoke’), Ex. xxv. 6, etc., but sometimes also the ‘sweet smoke’ of animal sacrifices (Ps. lxxvi. 15); הִקְטִיר is used often, as in the passages quoted, of animal sacrifices, but also of incense (Ex. xxx. 7, 8 al.); and there are some passages, such as the present, in which it is uncertain which kind of ‘sweet smoke’ the word denotes.

I also. The גם ‘correlativum’ (Lex. 169b, 4), expressing correspondence, especially in the matter of retribution; cf. iv. 12 now will I also (in correspondence with their deeds) reason the case with them! Hos. iv. 6; Ps. lii. 4, 5 thou lovest all devouring words, O thou deceitful tongue: God also (on His part) will tear thee down for ever, etc.; Prov. i. 26, I also will laugh in (the day of) your calamity; Mic. vi. 13.

<sup>18, 19</sup> in order to. The consequence of the action being represented, forcibly and ironically, as the design. Cf. xxvii. 10, 15, Hos. viii. 4, Isa. xxx. 1, xliv. 9 (Lex. p. 775b).

<sup>18, 19</sup> ver. The idea of כַּעַם, and of the verb הִכְעִים, is not anger (‘provoke to anger’), but vexation or chagrin at unmerited treatment: when applied to Yahweh, usually on account of His being ungratefully abandoned by Israel for the sake of other gods. See the writer’s notes on Deut. iv. 25, xxxii. 16, 19, 27. The verb is particularly frequent in Deuteronomic writers: in Deut. itself (besides the Song) iv. 25, ix. 18, xxxi. 29; in the parts of Kings which are due to the compiler, as 1 Kings xiv. 9, xv. 30, xvi. 2, 7, 13, 26, 33, etc. [in all, 17 times]; and in Jer., viz. vii. 18, 19, viii. 19, xi. 17, xxv. 6, 7, xxxii. 29, 30, 32, xliv. 3, 8. See also (of Peninnah's treatment of Hannah) 1 Sam. i. 6, 7. For the subst., see 1 Sam. i. 16, Ps. vi. 7, x. 14, xxxi. 9, lxxxv. 4, Prov. xii. 16, xxvii. 3, Job v. 2, vi. 2, x. 17, xvii. 7 (in all, not 'grief,' 'anger,' 'wrath,' 'indignation,' or 'spite,' but vexation).

<sup>21</sup>, <sup>22</sup> f. The general sense of these verses is well paraphrased by David Kimchi (A.D. 1160–1235), as quoted by König, Expositor, Aug. 1902, p. 138, and Nov. 1902, p. 367. See also Prof. Andrew Harper, ibid. April 1894, p. 231 f.

VIII. <sup>1</sup> his princes. The pron. refers to any one of the individual 'kings' just mentioned. Cf. xxii. 4 ('he'), xliv. 9 (where in the Heb. 'their wives' is 'his wives'); and see also the note on xvi. 7.

<sup>5</sup> מְדוּעַ שׁוֹבְבָה הָעָם הַזֹּאת יְרוּשָׁלַם. The gender of שׁוֹבְבָה (as the text stands) is impossible, and the apposition הָעָם הַזֹּאת יְרוּשָׁלַם is very harsh. The obvious alternatives are מְדוּעַ שׁוֹבְבָה יְרוּשָׁלַם and מְדוּעַ שׁוֹבְבָה הָעָם הַזֹּאת. The Sept. supports the latter. The ה at the end of שׁוֹבְבָה is simply dittographed from the following הָעָם.

swift in Arabia. This meaning suits both Isa. xxxviii. 14 (the only other passage in which the word occurs) and here; for the swift has a harsh, constantly repeated cry, and is also a migrant returning with great regularity and suddenness every spring. עֲנַר ('swallow') is uncertain. It also occurs besides in Isa. xxxviii. 14 כָּמוֹס עֲנַר כִּן אֲצַפְצִיף 'like a swift . . . so did I chatter,' where it might be either an adjective to כָּמוֹס, or the name of another bird attached ἀσυνδέτως. The renderings of the ancient Versions are inconsistent, and not always clear; but Targ. and Pesh have swallow here; and that is also the meaning given to עֲנַר by Abul-Walid, Rashi, and Kimchi. Though not certain, it may reasonably be acquiesced in: the swallow is a migrant, and the garrula hirundo, whose note was proverbial with the Greeks of a barbarous tongue (Aesch. Agam. 1050), would quite suit the simile in Isa. xxxviii. 14. The etymology is, however, obscure, there being no root עֲנַר known in Heb., or (in a sense available here) in the cognate Semitic languages.<sup>a</sup> The view of Ges., that it denotes the twitterer, rests upon the very doubtful hypothesis that עֲנַר is cognate (by transposition) with the Eth. ge'era, to cry or call (not, specifically, to twitter); this word, however, seems to appear in Heb. in נָעַר, to rebuke (sq. ב); properly, it seems, to call out at.

Crane (RV.) for עֲנַר goes back to Saadiah (10th cent.) in Isaiah, and is defended by Bochart; but it is open to the serious objection (Ges. Thes.) that, though the crane is a migrant, its note is a 'very powerful, clear trumpeting,' <sup>a</sup> In Arabic (Lane, 1958 f.) 'ajara is to bend (of the neck), extend the tail, go briskly, etc., and ajira is to be bulky or lied, from any of which meanings the name of a bird might be derived; but they are too vague and varied to afford any clue as to what bird is denoted by the Heb. 'āgūr.

not a 'chattering' (Tristram, l.c. p. 239; see also Post, l.c.).<sup>a</sup>

<sup>8</sup> See further, on the idea of 'law' in the O.T., the writer's note in Joel and Amos (in the Cambridge Bible), p. 230 f., or, more fully, LAW (in O.T.) in Hastings' D.B. The Heb. word for 'law' means properly 'pointing out,' 'direction'; the Pentateuch contains a number of particular 'directions' on different subjects; and by later writers the whole corpus of these regulations was called 'the direction,' or 'the law' (Heb. tôrāh).

<sup>13</sup> אָסַף אִתָּם. If correct, this must mean 'with a gathering (inf. abs. of אָסַף) will I bring them to an end' (Hif. of אָסַף to come to an end): cf. Zeph. i. 2 אָסַף אִתָּם 'with a gathering will I bring to an end'; but such a combination of two different verbs is against analogy; and probably we should read here אָסַף אִתָּם, and in Zeph. i. 2 אָסַף אִתָּם (with אָסַף for אָסַף twice in v. 3), 'with a gathering will I gather them,' i.e. gather them away, destroy them (אָסַף as 1 Sam. xv. 6, Ez. xxxiv. 29, Ps. xxvi. 9). Comp. G.-K. § 72aa.

<sup>16</sup> steeds. Lit. strong ones, poet. of horses, as xlvii. 3, l. 11, Judg. v. 22; of bulls, Ps. xxii. 12, l. 13, lxviii. 30, Isa. xxxiv. 7.

<sup>a</sup> What kind of sound was expressed by the Heb. אֲפַעַנִי may be inferred from its being used of young birds chirping in their nest (Isa. x. 14); see also Isa. xxix. 4 (RVm. chirp: AV. 'peep' is simply Old English for 'chirp').

There is no reason for supposing a fabulous creature (AV. cockatrice; <sup>a</sup> RV. basilisk<sup>b</sup>) to be intended. Furrer (in Riehm's H.W.B. s.v. SCHLANGEN) suggests the cat-snake ('Ailurophis vivax'), an agile species, with large glaring eyes, and quick to bite, which, though not actually venomous, is in Palestine popularly believed to be so.

<sup>19</sup> On the word rendered brighten, derived from a root (בלל), the meaning of which was lost to the Jews, and wrongly supposed by them to be to be strong, till it was recovered, when Arabic began to be studied, by Schultens, in the 18th cent., see the writer's note on Amos v. 9; and cf. RVm. on Job ix. 27, x. 20, Ps. xxxix. 13.

fresh flesh (סַרְיִיָּה). See Fleischer's note ap. Delitzsch on Isa. lviii. 8, according to whom arika in Arabic means the fresh flesh lengthening itself, i.e. gradually forming over a wound. The word occurs six times in Heb., viz. Jer. viii. 22, xxx. 17, xxxiii. 6, Isa. lviii. 8; and fig., of the repairing of a wall or building, Neh. iv. 7 [Heb. 1] (lit. 'fresh flesh came up upon the walls), 2 Ch. xxiv. 13 (lit. 'fresh flesh came up upon the work'). See also Field, Journ. of Phil. xiii. 114–116, who points out that the ancient Versions often render the word by terms expressive of cicatrization (as Jer. xxxiii. 6 Sept. συνούλωσις; Isa. lviii. 8 Theod. συνούλωσις, Aq. κατούλωσις; Jer. viii. 22 Aq. and Symm. probably συν- or κατούλωσις). For עָלָה,

<sup>a</sup> From cocatrix, i.e. calcatrix, a translation of ιχνεύμων, corrupted by confusion with cock, because it was supposed to spring from a cock's egg!

<sup>b</sup> The basilisk, or 'little king'—so called, according to Pliny, from its being supposed to have on its head a spot like a crown—was the subject of many fables; it was especially noted for its alleged power of killing by its look. Cf. Henry V., v. 2. 15–17; 2 Henry VI., iii. 2. 52 f.; Rich. III., i. 2. 151.

or הֵעִלָּה, to come or bring up, often used with the word, cf. Ezek. xxxvii. 6, 8.

IX. <sup>4</sup> overreach. So Gen. xxvii. 36. The idea in עָקַב appears to be not to trip up by the heel, i.e. to supplant, but to follow insidiously at the heel, i.e. to circumvent craftily or overreach. Cf. the derivatives, Jer. xvii. 9 ‘deceitful,’ and 2 Kings x. 19 ‘subtilty.’

<sup>10</sup> a dirge. Heb. kīnāh, which means not a spontaneous effusion of natural emotion, but a composition constructed with some art in a definite rhythmical form. The Heb. kīnāh, or elegy, as Professor Budde has shown, had a definite rhythmical form, which appears throughout chs. i.–iv. of the Lamentations (or ‘Dirges’), as well as in various passages of the prophets (see here vv. 21, 22). See the writer’s note on Amos v. 2. 16 (in the Cambridge Bible), and ibid. pp. 232–4. נִהַ (‘lamentation’) was probably a more general term than kīnāh.

X. <sup>5</sup> אֹתָם. For אִתָּם (i.e. with them, in their power), as often in Jer.; see on iv. 12.

<sup>6</sup>, <sup>8</sup> It is impossible to explain, or justify logically, מִיֵּשׁׁ, see my note in Hebraica, ii. 34–37. With a change of points we can read מִיֵּשׁׁ, whence? (Gen. xxix. 4, and frequently); with its use here (if this is the true reading) comp. xxx. 7 ‘whence is its like?’ (RV. ‘so that none is like it,’ implying the punctuation מִיֵּשׁׁ). It is, however, quite possible that the ם is in both cases dittographed from the preceding ם (so König, Lehrgeb. iii. § 352x); we then get the ordinary אִין קְמוּךְ there is none like thee (2 Sam. vii. 22).

<sup>8</sup> senseless. A survey of the passages in which קָעַר and קָעַר occur shew that the idea expressed by them is want of understanding: notice how frequently the parallel is כסיל 'fool,' and the addition of words implying the absence of knowledge in v. 14, Ps. lxxiii. 22, xcii. 6 [Heb. 7], xciv. 8, Prov. xxx. 2.

<sup>11</sup> The Aramaic is that of a particular dialect: see the writer's Introduction, p. 240 (ed. 6 or 7, p. 255). ארמא and ארמא occur side by side in some Aramaic inscriptions, of the 5th cent. B.C., discovered recently in Egypt: see Sayce and Cowley, Aramaic Papyri (1906), B 15, 16, and elsewhere.

<sup>12</sup> As soon as this verse is translated correctly (notice the participles עִיֵּה and מִיֵּי), it is apparent that it can connect only with v. 10, so that the proper place for v. 11 cannot really be between v. 10 and v. 12.

<sup>13</sup> The primary idea of הַמִּוּן is a confused noise or hum, as of a multitude of peoples, Isa. xvii. 12, or of a city, xxxii. 14; then it comes to denote a humming throng or multitude, as Jud. iv. 7, and frequently. The cognate verb הִמָּה includes such sounds as we denote by growl (Ps. lix. 7, of dogs), groan (Isa. lix. 11, of bears), moan (Ez. vii. 16, of doves), roar (of the sea, Jer. v. 22, Ps. xlvi. 3, or of a distant multitude, Jer. vi. 23, Ps. xlvi. 6 [RV. 'raged']). Here, and in the parallel li. 16, as also in 1 Kings xviii. 41 (AV., RV., weakly, 'abundance'), the subst. is applied to the roaring noise of rain driven by the wind in a heavy storm. The construction of the verse is, however, much improved by reading with Giesebrecht (Jeremias Metrik) יהִמִּוּן [or הִמָּה] for הַמִּוּן.

<sup>17</sup> bundle (בְּנִצָּה). So RVm., following Ges. and moderns generally, the root being taken to be the Arab kana'a, to be contracted, folded in; properly, therefore, something done up tightly. AV., RV., wares. This connects the word with כְּנַעַן, 'Canaan,' 'Canaanite,' in the sense of merchant (the Canaanites, or Phœnicians, being the chief merchants known to the Hebrews): see in the Heb. Isa. xxiii. 8, Ez. xvii. 4, Job xl. 30 [AV. xli. 6]; and RVm. of Hos. xii. 7, Zeph. i. 11, Zech. xiv. 21, Ez. xvi. 29 (where the text of RV. gives a false sense), Prov. xxxi. 24. But this is not a likely explanation of כנעה; besides, if it were correct, we should expect a ך after the ע. It must be admitted, however, that the isolation of כנעה in Heb. (for the root itself in Heb. means to be humbled), and the remoteness of the Arab. kana'a, make even the first derivation somewhat doubtful; but we have nothing better to put in its place.

<sup>19</sup> We speak only of a person as being sick; Heb. speaks also of a wound as being 'sick.' So xiv. 17, xxx. 12, Nah. iii. 19; cf. Mic. vi. 13 (lit. 'I have made sick to smite thee' = I have smitten thee sorely).

<sup>23</sup> Read with Giesebrecht הָלַךְ וְהָיִין (inf. abs.) for הָלַךְ וְהָיִין: cf. Vulg. nec viri est ut ambulet et dirigat gressus suos.

XI.<sup>15</sup> I.e. רַעַתְךָ מֵעַלְיָךְ יַעֲבִרוּ קִרְיֹת וּבִשְׂרֵר קִרְיֹת וּבִשְׂרֵר קִרְיֹת וּבִשְׂרֵר קִרְיֹת. Or, following Sept. (ἢ ἐν τοῦτοις διαφεύξῃ); for the last four words (in the English): אִם בְּאַלְהָהּ תִּהְלָצִי: this yields a better sense than the Mass. text אִז תַּעֲלֹזִי; but the deviation from the Heb. is rather considerable. At the beginning of the words quoted עֲשֵׂתָהּ מִזִּמָּת comes in abruptly, and a causal particle, such as כִּי or אִשֶׁר, is desiderated before it. The restoration of the following words, Can vows . . . from off thee? which are the most important part of the sentence, is however quite satisfactory. כִּי־זִמָּה does not mean lewdness; it is זִמָּה, not מִזִּמָּה which has this meaning (xiii. 27, Jud. xx. 6 al.). The Aram. form of the pron. suffix in רַעַתְכִּי is not probable in Jeremiah: it occurs otherwise only in late Psalms (ciii. 3-5, cxvi. 7, 19, cxxxv. 9), and, apparently dialectically, in 2 Kings iv. 2, 3, 7, also Cant. ii. 13 (G.-K. § 91e, l). RV. (-AV.) is no real translation of the existing Hebrew text.

<sup>16</sup> spreading. A spreading or luxuriant tree is no doubt commonly a 'green' one; but גענן is not a term expressive of colour. The Sept. represents it by words such as leafy, thick. See Delitzsch's note on Ps. xxxvii. 35; and cf. mine on Deut. xii. 2.

<sup>17</sup> have loved to do. See, for the idiom (the reflexive ל, throwing back the action upon the subject), Lex. p. 515b h.

XII. <sup>3</sup> וּבְחַנְתָּ. The perf. with waw consee., according to G.-K. § 112m; so Ez. xxix. 7 (where presents would be better than past tenses in the English).

<sup>5</sup> the pride of Jordan. AV. 'the swelling of Jordan' (cf. Josh. iii. 15); for יַסְיָ in connexion with water, see Job xxxviii. 11, and cf. יַסְיָ Ps. xlvi. 4, יַסְיָ Ps. lxxxix. 10, and יַסְיָ (the verb) in Ez. xlvii. 5 (properly to rise up, Job viii. 11): elsewhere in Heb. both the verb and the derivatives are used nearly always in the fig. senses of majesty, or pride. Ewald, both here and Jer. xlix. 19 — l. 44, Zech. xi. 3, took it as AV.; but the terms in which it is mentioned in these three passages (as 'spoiled,' and to all appearance, also, as the abode of lions) seem to make this sense hardly possible. It is a pity that it has been adopted in the recently published RV. with marg. references (both here and on Josh. iii. 15). The view adopted in the note on the passage is that of modern commentators generally.

XIII. <sup>1</sup> waist-cloth. See W. R. Smith's art. in the Jewish Quarterly Review, 1892, p. 289 ff.; more briefly, GIRDLE in Enc. Bibl., § 1, or Lex. s.v. אָוֶר. Like Jer. here, Isaiah (xx. 2) has only a waist-cloth wound round the loins (so Elijah, 2 Kings i. 8); and in Job xii. 18b the king who is humiliated is represented as wearing one. The close and constant attachment of the waist-cloth to the body gives the point of the comparison in Isa. xi. 5 (twice). The other places in which the 'ēzōr, or waist-cloth, is mentioned are Isa. v. 27, Ez. xxiii. 15. The references here to Ex. xxviii. 39, Lev. xvi. 4, in the RV. with marginal references, gloss the word incorrectly : both the word and the thing (טַנְתָּן, a long, richly embroidered sash, wound twice round the body, with the ends reaching to the ankles, and thrown round the left shoulder, when the priest was officiating : Enc. Bibl. l.c. § 5) are there completely different.

<sup>4-6</sup> If the Euphrates is intended (which, it is true, would be appropriate, as suggestive of the people's future place of exile), the prophet's symbolical act was perhaps enacted in a vision, as must have been the case with the one narrated in xxv. 17 ff. The suggestion to read Parah was made by Schick, Marti, ZDPV, 1880, p. 11, and Birch, PEFQSt. 1880, p. 236 ; and adopted by Cheyne (Jeremiah, his Life and Times, 161 ; and Enc. Bibl. ii. 1429, iii. 3583) : cf. also already Ewald, Propheten <sup>2</sup> (1868), ii. 158. iii. 496 It should however be observed that in Josh. xviii. 23 the form is חֲרָבָה with the art. (Sept., however, Φαρα). If the Euphrates is referred to, the part meant cannot be anywhere near Babylon, where there are no 'rocks,'—or rather 'crags' (טֵלֵם),—but in the upper part of its course, above Carchemish, or even above Samosata, where it still flows between rocky sides.

bury. The word does mean properly to hide ; but it is often used specially of hiding in the earth, where we should say idiomatically bury (cf. Gen. xxxv. 4, Ex. ii. 12, Josh. vii. 21, etc.). That the waist-cloth was 'buried' here is implied also by the use of the word digged in v. 7.

<sup>19</sup> שְׁלוֹמִים, though explicable syntactically (G.-K. § 118q), is very strange, as שְׁלוֹם occurs nowhere else in the sense of full number. It is far better to read with Buhl (Lex.<sup>12</sup>; cf. Siegfried-Stade), and Duhm, following the Sept. (ἀποικίαν τελείαν), גְּלוֹת יְשֻׁלְמָה, exactly as in Amos i. 6, 9 (συνετέλεσαν is merely a misreading of בְּקָה, as though this were בְּלִי).

XIV. <sup>1</sup> The construction in the Heb. is very peculiar and unusual, recurring otherwise only in the titles xlv. 1, xlvii. 1, xlix. 34; Ez. xii. 25 is, however, partly similar.

<sup>4</sup> בעבר האדמה התה for ועבר האדמה התה, a clever and convincing emendation of Duhm's, based upon the Sept., which at one stroke improves the parallelism of the verse, and removes an awkward expression in the Heb. (the 'ground' being 'dismayed'). Sept. has τὰ ἔργα for עֲבָרִי; i.e. the translators pronounced עֲבָרִי, understanding the word—as they not unfrequently do with other words in the O.T.—in its Aramaic sense (see Eccl. ix. 1).

<sup>9</sup> surprised. The meaning of רָהַם (only here) is clear from the Arabic (Lane, to come upon one suddenly, or surprise one). So already, substantially, Abul-Walid in his Lex., and Jos. Kimchi, as cited by his son, David Kimchi, in his Book of Roots, s.v. David Kimchi himself explains it as meaning one who is helpless in time of trouble, in Spanish, asperduto (i.e. perditus). No doubt 'astonied' (i.e. attonitus, thunderstruck) once meant this; but the word is not now generally understood; and 'astonished' does not quite give the nuance required. Sept. ἰπνῶν however, seems to point to נִרְדָּם, in a deep sleep, which may be right: cf. Ps. lxxviii. 65.

properly a present offered to secure the good will of a superior (e.g. Gen. xxxii. 20, xliii. 11) ; then applied to an offering made to God, sometimes generally (including animals), as Gen. iv. 3, 4, 1 Sam. ii. 17, 29, iii. 14, xxvi. 19, sometimes, especially in the Levitical Laws, specifically of the meal- (or cereal) offering (Lev. ii., etc.). See further D.B. s.v. OFFER, OFFERING, § 4.

XV. <sup>4</sup> a consternation. Heb. פָּוֶן, Isa. xxviii. 19, and in the K'tib of Jer. xv. 4, xxiv. 9, xxix. 18, 2 Chr. xxix. 8 ; the form פָּוֶן is found in Deut. xxviii. 25, Ez. xxiii. 46, and in the Qrê of Jer. xv. 4, xxiv. 9, xxix. 18, 2 Chr. xxix. 8 (the pronounciation in these passages being assimilated by the Massorettes to Deut. xxviii. 25). As the root is פָּוֶן, the form פָּוֶן is the correct one. As to the meaning of the word, פָּוֶן is to shake (Eccl. xii. 3), move in fear or tremble (Esth. v. 9) ; it is much more common in Aram. than in Heb. ; so in Syr. פָּוֶן is a shaking, trembling, terror, etc. In Isa. xxviii. 19 פָּוֶן means evidently terror, or—to use a word which would have the advantage of being more distinctive—consternation ; and the same sense will suit all the other passages quoted—Deut. xxviii. 25 and the other two occurrences in Jer. being in the same phrase as here, and Ez. xxiii. 46, 2 Chr. xxix. 8 being similar (except that 'to all the kingdoms of the earth' is omitted)—'consternation' having naturally the sense of 'the object of consternation,' or 'what arouses consternation,' just as פָּוֶן, properly dismay, means evidently an object of dismay in Jer. xlviii. 39. So Rashi : 'whosoever hears of the misfortune that has come upon them will tremble (פָּוֶן).' RV. 'to be tossed to and fro among' is a paraphrase of Ges.'s diveratio (cf. Ewald's 'play-ball') ; but it is only the intensive, reduplicated form of the root (פָּוֶן), which means to shake to and fro (Hab. ii. 7 Heb. [see RVm.]; and in Syr., e.g. for δίεσεισε in the Hexaplar Syriac of Job iv. 14, συνέσεισε Hex. Ps. lix. 4, έσάλευσε Hex. 4 Reg. xvii. 20, xxi. 8 [see Payne Smith, col. 1107; and note the Ethpalp. ibid.]; so that הַפְּזִי, derived from the Qal conjug., meant more probably nothing more than the shaking of fear.

<sup>5</sup> Commiseration is used by Shakespeare; and commiserate appears as early as 1606 (Murray): so the word is no modernism. There is no reason for supposing that נִוּ meant specifically to 'bemoan.'

winnowing-fork. Heb. mizreh (from zārāh, to scatter or winnow), also Isa. xxx. 24. The corresponding Arab. word midhrā (with dh = ḏ, for the Heb. ḏ) is in use in modern Syria, and denotes a wooden fork almost six feet in length, with five or six prongs, bound together by fresh hide, which, on shrinking, forms a tight band (Enc. Bibl., i. 84, from Wetzstein). There is an illustration of a midhrā in Hastings' D.B. i. 51. The wooden 'shovel' of Isa. xxx. 24 was used with it. The mixture of corn, chaff, and broken straw, produced by threshing, was shaken about with these two implements, usually in some exposed spot, when a wind was blowing (generally in the afternoon or evening, Ruth iii. 2), and the wind carried away the chaff and the straw (Ps. i. 4). If however the wind was too violent, it would blow away the corn as well: hence the point of Jer. iv. 11.

<sup>8</sup> agitation. Heb. עִיר, a most uncertain word. צִירִים in Heb. denotes the pains of childbirth, 1 Sam. iv. 19, Isa. xxi. 3, fig. of mental distress or terror, Isa. xiii. 8, xxi. 3, Dan. x. 16: hence (1) it has been supposed that עִיר is Aram. for עִיר; an Aram. ע however corresponds to a Heb. ע only when the corresponding Arabic word has ض (my Tenses, § 178), which does not here appear to be the case; moreover, עִירִים occurs only in the plur., never in the sing.; and thirdly, where the reference is to a woman, the word might be so easily misunderstood in a literal sense that it is hardly likely to have been used by the prophet: accordingly this view must be rejected. (2) The view that עִיר is a scribal error for עִיר falls through for the two last-mentioned reasons. (3) Ges. had recourse to the Arab. غار to be very hot (e.g. of noon-day); thinking עִיר might be applied, like the Lat. aestus, to the glow or ardour of an emotion, and denote here the aestus doloris, as in Hos. xi. 9 (where also עִיר occurs, but where this meaning is unsuitable) the aestus irae. But it must be evident that the meaning thus obtained rests upon a very precarious and uncertain basis. (4) In default of anything better, עִיר may perhaps be connected with עִיר, to be stirred up, and denote (Lex. 735b) the excitement or agitation of alarm: this explanation, if not positively probable, may at least be said to labour under fewer objections than those mentioned above. (In Hos. xi. 9 בעיר is probably corrupt.)

<sup>10</sup> For מַקְלָלוֹנִי מַקְלָלוֹנִי, with the monstrum מַקְלָלוֹנִי, read בְּלָהֶם קְלָלוֹנִי

<sup>11</sup> The Kt. is שְׁרוּתִיךָ; from שָׁרַר, a common Aram. root meaning to be strong, or, in the causative conjugations, to strengthen, confirm (e.g. Jer. x. 4 Pesh. for שְׁרוּתִיךָ); but in Heb. found otherwise only in derivatives. The Qal is however intransitive in Aram.; so it seems we must, at least if this sense is accepted, read either the Piel שְׁרַרְתִּיךָ, or the Hiphil הִשְׁרַרְתִּיךָ. The Qrè is שְׁרִיתִיךָ, from a root found otherwise only once in Heb., viz. Job xxxvii. 3

(RV. sendeth it forth), but common in Aram., and meaning there to loosen, release (e.g. in Jer. xl. 4 Targ. and Pesh., the same form as here, for פִּתְּחֵהֶם; and in Isa. lviii. 6 Pesh. for פִּתְּחֵם). Whichever reading, therefore, is adopted, the word is an Aramaism. Of the two, the first seems to yield the more appropriate sense.

<sup>19</sup> common. RV. (from AV.) vile, a most misleading rendering to a modern reader: for what is meant is 'vile' in the old sense of the word (=Lat. vilis), common, looked down upon, not 'vile' as used in modern English. 'Vile' has the same sense in Lam. i. 11 (AV., RV.), for the same Hebrew as here, and in Job xl. 4 AV. (altered in RV. to 'am of small account'). Cf. the unfortunate use of the same now misunderstood word in the Authorized Version of a more important passage, Phil. iii. 21 (for ταπεινωσις).

XVI. <sup>7</sup> There are so many instances in Heb. in which where a class of persons is spoken of, there is a transition from the plur. to the sing.<sup>a</sup> and (sometimes) vice versá, that it must be recognized as a peculiarity of Hebrew thought to pass in such cases more readily than we do from the class generally to the individual member of it (or conversely); and there is no occasion to correct the text except in extreme cases.<sup>b</sup> The variations of number in this verse are thus defensible; still in clause a וְלֹא יִפְרֹסוּ לָהֶם עַל אֲבֵל ('will not divide bread to a mourner') is a very plausible correction, especially as עַל in the sense of in <sup>a</sup> E.g. Lev. xxi. 7, xxv. 31, Deut. vii. 3, Isa. xxx. 22 end, Jer. ix. 7, x. 4, xvi. 6b, xxxi. 15 (cf. Job xxiv. 24), Am. vi. 9 f., Mic. ii. 9, Zech. xiv. 12, Job xviii. 5, xxi. 10 (after vv. 7-9), 19-21, 30, xxiv. 5b, 16-24, Ps. vii. 3, xvii. 11 f., xxxv. 7 f., lxxxiv. 8; see also above, on viii. 1. Comp. G.-K. § 145 m; König, § 348 u, v.

<sup>b</sup> As Josh. ii. 4, Deut. vii. 10, Hos. iv. 8 (read נִפְשָׁם), x. 5 (עַל), Zech. xiv. 12 end (בְּפִיהוּ), Ps. v. 10 (בְּפִימוּ), lxii. 5; cf.

XVII. <sup>10</sup> and give. See my Tenses, § 206 ; G.-K. § 114p. Not 'even.' So xix. 12, xlv. 19.

<sup>11</sup> (footnote). The word here rendered gathereth (גָּרַר) occurs otherwise in the O.T. only in Isa. xxxiv. 15a, where, as the text stands, it clearly refers to the young. To judge, however, from its use in Mandaic (Payne Smith, Thes. Syr., col. 823), and the Targ. of Job xxxix. 14 (of eggs), and from the subst. גָּרָרָא a heap in the Targums (e.g. Ex. viii. 10), it will have meant to heap together, and be more applicable to the eggs than to the young ; so that there is much to be said for the view of Cheyne and Marti that in Isa. xxxiv. 15 'hatch' and 'gather' have accidentally changed places.

XX. <sup>17</sup> in. For the corruption of ב into בּ see on iii. 20 ; and cf. Ez. xlvi. 29 (where obviously בּנְהַלֵּה must be read for the impossible מְנַהֵּלָה ; cf. xlvii. 22).

that so, etc. Lit., of course, and so my mother became, etc. ; but in English, in such cases, we are obliged to change the construction. The case is the same with וַיִּכְלֹו in v. 8. Cf. Gen. xxxi. 27, and see my Tenses, § 74.

XXI. <sup>1</sup> It is strange that, in spite of their different parentage, the Revised Version with marginal notes should identify the two Pashhurs of xx. 1 and xxi. 1.

also lxiii. 11, lxiv. 9, Isa. v. 23 (Sept. צָרִיק ; cf. Eccl. x. 15, Sept. אֶל־הַכִּסֵּי), lvii. 2, Neh. iii. 17b.

* If לָהֶם be kept, לָהֶם must be inserted after it.

XXII. <sup>14</sup> cieled (AV., RV.). ‘Cieled’ formerly meant panelled; and is to be so understood wherever it occurs in AV., RV., viz. Ez. xli. 16, Hag. i. 4, 2 Chron. iii. 5 (Aldis Wright, Bible Word-book, s.v.). Unfortunately, however, no one now, except a specially educated minority, is aware of this meaning: so that, if the ordinary Bible reader is to understand any of these passages correctly, the word must be avoided.

<sup>26</sup> אֶרֶץ אֲחֵרָה, even though justifiable in the abstract (Gen. xliii. 14, 2 Chron. xxxii. 5; Davidson, § 32, Rem. 2 (1), König, iii. § 334 w), can scarcely be right here: we must read either אֶרֶץ אֲחֵרָה (Deut. xxix. 27), the art. having come in by a scribal error from v. 27 (Graf, Gie. Du.), or אֶרֶץ, ‘the land,’ alone (Sept. Hitz.; cf. v. 28*b*, xvi. 13).

XXIII. <sup>5</sup> צִמָּח cannot mean ‘branch’<sup>a</sup>: as its other occurrences shew, it is a general term for what sprouts or shoots from the ground. See Gen. xix. 25 ‘the growth of the ground’ (where ‘branch’ would obviously be unsuitable); Ps. lxxv. 10 (Heb. 11), ‘Thou blessest the springing (i.e. the young growth) thereof’; Isa. iv. 2 (where the ‘growth’ or ‘shooting’ of Yahweh means generally the produce of the soil, quickened and blessed by Yahweh in the blissful future which the prophet here looks forward to); lxi. 11 (AV., RV., ‘bud’; Cheyne, sprouting). The term, which in Isa. iv. 2 is general, is, however, here limited by the context so as to be a fig. designation of the Messiah, represented as a sprout or shoot; and in Zech. iii. 8, vi. 12 (see RVm.) it is used actually as a title of the Messiah. Comp. the parallel passage, xxxiii. 15, ‘In those days will I cause to shoot forth unto David a shoot of righteousness, and he shall execute judgement and justice (righteousness) in the land ' ; and the fig. use of the same verb in Ezek. xxix. 21 ; Ps. cxxxii. 17. See also Skinner's note on Isa. iv. 2 (in the Cambridge Bible) ; and notice RVm.

<sup>16</sup> Lit. make you vain : but neither this nor AV., RV., teach you vanity, suggests a correct idea of what is really meant.

<sup>17</sup> and unto, etc. Of course, the grammatical construction is, and every one that walketh (= whoso walketh), etc., they say (sc. to him), etc. : the ptep. absolute (G.-K. § 116 w).

<sup>26</sup> Lit. How long ? Is there in the heart of the prophets . . . ? but the word ' is ' is without a subject ; for the insertion of ' this ' is quite unauthorized. The aposiopesis after How long ? is possible (Ps. vi. 4, xc. 13) ; but in the following clause there must be some fault in the text, though we cannot be sure what it is. Gie. would read ער מתי הִיֵּיט בְּלֵב for ער מתי לא יִשָּׁב לֵב.

XXV. <sup>15</sup> (of) this fury. For the construction (apposition), see G.-K. § 131 c, k ; and cf. Ps. lx. 5, 1 Kings xxii. 27.

XXVIII. <sup>1</sup> On the Kt. בִּשְׁנֵי (so xxxii. 1 Kt. ; xlvi. 2, li. 59), see G.-K. § 134 k.

<sup>16</sup> Defection is no modernism: it is already used, of religious disloyalty, by writers of the 16th cent.

XXX. <sup>17</sup> לֵה goes with יִשׂ, and is not accus. to רָשׁ (RV.): the order as v. 13*b*, xlix. 1, cf. Lex. p. 512*a*.

XXXI. <sup>2</sup> I will go, etc. See G.-K. §§ 113*dd*, 131*m*. 'When I went' is not a legitimate rendering of the Heb.

<sup>18</sup> In the rend. of AV., RV. 'turn thou me, and I shall be turned' (cf. Lam. v. 21), 'be turned' is to be understood, not as a passive, but in the neuter sense, which it often had in Old English, and which is unquestionably found in AV.: see especially Jer. xxxiv. 15, where AV. has 'were turned' for exactly the same Heb. (וַיִּשְׁבוּ) which in v. 16 is rendered 'turned'; and Rev. i. 12, where ἐπέστρεψα is rendered 'I turned,' and ἐπιστρέψας, just afterwards, in the same verse, 'being turned' (comp. Acts xv. 19, by the side of xi. 21, the Greek in both passages being the same) Cf. my Parallel Psalter, p. 483.

<sup>22</sup> Ewald for הַסּוֹבֵב reads הִסּוֹבֵב; Duhm and Cornill for הַסּוֹבֵב נָפֵר read הַסּוֹבֵב פָּנָפֵר, comparing for the construction Zech. xiv. 10. The word rendered 'compass' may mean either to come about or surround (Deut. xxxii. 10, Ps. vii. 7, xxxii. 10), or to go round about (Ps. xxvi. 6, lv. 10, lix. 6, 14, Cant. iii. 2). Rashi and Kimchi explain go about in the sense of go about after, i.e. seek in marriage—Kimchi, for instance, saying, 'It is the way of mankind for the man to go about after the woman; but then the woman will go about after her husband, as though to say that the children of Israel will return to their God and He will redeem them: cf. Hos. iii. 5.' Dean Plumptre explains similarly, 'In the normal order of man's life, the bridegroom woos the bride; in the spiritual relationship which the prophet has in view, this shall be inverted, and Israel, the erring but repentant wife, shall woo her divine husband.' This yields an excellent sense ; but it is not clear that ' to go about ' (not ' to go about after ') would by itself mean definitely ' to woo.' The explanation given in the note on the passage, is not, however, substantially different. The Heb. word for ' woman ' is the one commonly rendered ' female.'

<sup>24</sup> For ' as husbandmen ' cf. Job xxiv. 5 (G.-K. § 118r) : for ' and they that,' etc., cf. Ps. xxii. 29 [Heb. 30] (as in RV., but with ' and ' for ' even '), Mal. ii. 16 (G.-K. § 155n) : this construction is, however, somewhat forced here, and it is simpler to read the participle וְנִסְעֵי for וְנִסְעוּ (G.-K. § 130a), the sense remaining the same.

XXXII. <sup>2</sup> RV. the court of the guard suggests a court in which a body of men, called the ' guard,' were stationed. The Heb., however, means either the court of keeping or guarding (see the cognate verb in Cant. i. 6), or the court of the guard-place (the court in which the place of guarding was). מִצְרֵה, in this sense, occurs only in this expression (Neh. iii. 25, as well as in Jer.), and in the name, ' guard-gate,' Neh. xii. 39. It is quite different from the word rendered ' guard ' (of a body of men) either in Jer. xxxix. 9, 10, etc., or in 2 Kings x. 25, xi. 4, etc.

XXXVIII. <sup>9</sup> done evil in, etc. Of course, a paraphrase, the Heb. being have made evil all that they have done : comp. Gen. xliv. 5, and הִטִּיב, Deut. v. 25, xviii. 17.

XLIV. <sup>28</sup> mine or theirs. A paraphrase : the Heb. is lit. ' the word of which of me and of them.' The idiom has parallels in Arabic (Lex. p. 581a) ; so that there seems no occasion to question it, as is done in Kittel's Biblia Hebr.

XLVI. <sup>3</sup> Set in line. This, of course, is the meaning of AV., RV., ' order,' which in Old English means to ' set in order,' ' arrange ' (cf. in the Communion Service, ' when the priest hath so ordered the bread and wine,' etc.). But this sense of the verb is now obsolete ; and it is to be feared that the majority of Englishmen, when they read (or hear) ' he shall order the lamps upon the pure candlestick (Lev. xxiv. 4), ' build an altar in the ordered place ' (Jud. vi. 26 AV.), ' Who shall order the battle ? ' (1 Kings xx. 14 AV.), ' Order my steps in thy word ' (Ps. cxix. 133), or here ' Order ye the buckler and shield,' suppose that the meaning in each case is ' command,' ' give directions for,' whereas it is, in fact, ' set in order,' ' arrange,' or (Ps. cxix.) ' dispose.' The same sense also occurs often in the Prayer Book. Cf. Hastings, D.B., s.v. ORDER.

<sup>16</sup> The emendation is Giesebrecht's, and it has been accepted by Duhm. The rendering of Sept. presupposes it partly (καὶ τὸ πλῆθος σου = וְרַבְּךָ).

<sup>20</sup> Graceful. Heb. יפה־פיה, divided incorrectly into two words (cf. Isa. ii. 20, lxi. 1) : read יִפְּיָיָה—of course, upon the assumption that there is no deeper corruption (possibly we should read יָפָה ' fair,' alone). The precise force of the reduplication (if correct) is uncertain (see Ewald, § 157c ; Stade, p. 159 ; G.-K. § 84 (b) n, cf. 55e) ; but it seems, on the whole, more probable that it has a diminutive, caritative force (' pretty,' ' graceful ') than that it is a mere intensive (' very fair ').

XLVIII. <sup>6</sup> For a fem. pl. (תהיינה), referring to a singular noun, to be understood collectively (נפשכם), cf. Isa. xxvii. 11, and with pronouns Gen. xxx. 37 (בהן referring to מַקְלָה), Jud. xix. 12, Jer. iv. 29, and with צֵאן regularly (e.g. Gen. xxx. 38) : cf. G.-K. § 145. 2.

<sup>9</sup> wings . . . fly away. The meaning of both words can hardly be said to be certain: ׀׀׀ is not found elsewhere with the meaning ‘wings,’ and ׀׀׀ occurs only (in the form ׀׀׀) in a passage where the reading is open to question (Lam. iv. 15): but the sense is good, and nothing better has hitherto been proposed. The combination ׀׀׀ ׀׀׀, ‘go forth with a flying,’ is, however, so contrary to Heb. usage (cf. G.-K. § 113*w*, note) that there can be little hesitation in pointing ׀׀׀ ׀׀׀, ‘fly away.’

<sup>30</sup> For ׀׀׀, ‘not right,’ cf. xxiii. 10, 2 Kings vii. 9, Prov. xv. 7; and of words or speaking, as here, Jer. viii. 6, 2 Kings xvii. 9.

<sup>38</sup> every one. Or, more exactly, the whole of it, the suffix being neuter: see the same idiom in Isa. i. 23, xv. 3, Ps. xxix. 9, etc. (Lex. p. 481 d b). ‘Wailing’ is (in the Heb.) a subst.: see G.-K. § 145 c, d; and cf. Ps. cix. 4, cx. 3.

XLIX. <sup>4</sup> For ׀׀׀׀׀ Grätz conjectured cleverly ׀׀׀׀׀; but ‘the multitude of thy vales,’ though excellent in itself, is somewhat tautologous after ‘the vales.’ It is quite possible, however, that the existing Hebrew text ׀׀׀׀׀ is the corrupted result of a dittography (the Sept. expresses only ׀׀׀׀׀ ‘in the vales’); and that we should read simply either in the multitude of thy vales, or in thy vale.

<sup>23b</sup> The text, as it stands, cannot be correct; but the change adopted above seems the least that will yield a satisfactory sense (כִּים מְרַאגָּה for בִּים וְרַאגָּה, cf. Symm. ὑπερρίμνης, Vulg. prae sollicitudine; and יוּכְלוּ for יוּכַל, cf. the plural δύνωνται in the Sept.). The Sept. does not express ‘like the sea,’ but has simply two verbs, presupposing apparently, they are full of care (רַאגָּה for רַאגָּה), they cannot rest.

<sup>24</sup> To render the existing Heb. text trembling hath seized on her, on the strength of the Massoretic peculiarity noticed in G.-K. § 91e, is artificial and precarious.

L. <sup>17</sup> ‘First’ and ‘at the last’ are free renderings. Syntactically, either הַרְאֲשִׁין and הַסֹּהַרִּין will be accusatives, ‘as a first one, the king of A. devoured him,’ etc. (cf. Job xix. 25; and see G.-K. § 118n; and for זֶה cf. Lex. ה' 4 i); or we might construe, ‘The first one (who) devoured him was the king of A.; and this, the last one (who) gnawed his bones, was,’ etc.

<sup>21</sup> ‘Mērāthaim,’ though it may suggest the idea of either ‘Double Bitterness’ or ‘Double Defiance,’ cannot mean either of these things: the former would be Mōrāthaim, the latter (supposing a fem. of מְרִי? were in use) Miryāthaim.

LI. <sup>11</sup> Or, suits of armour. See W. E. Barnes, Expos. Times, x. (1898-9), 43-45; and cf. ibid. p. 188.

LII. <sup>19</sup> The lit. rend., ‘that which was gold, (as) gold, and that which was silver, (as) silver,’ does not sufficiently express the meaning. The writer means to say, without particularizing details, that whatever among the articles mentioned was of gold and silver, respectively, was taken away by Nebuzaradan.

VI. <sup>18</sup> (footnote). וְרַעַי רַעָה (Gie.), lit. know with knowledge (or with knowing); cf. for the construction 1 Sam. i. 6, Isa. xxi. 7, xxii. 17, 18, xxiv. 16.

GLOSSARY OF ARCHAISMS IN THE REVISED VERSION OF JEREMIAH <sup>a</sup>

- again (back, esp. in to 'bring again'), xii. 15, xv. 19, xvi. 15, xxviii. 3, 4, xxx. 3, 18, xxxvii. 8, xlvi. 47, etc. 'Again' now so regularly means a second time that its retention in R.V. in the obsolete sense of back not unfrequently obscures the meaning.
- alarm (Ital. All' arme ! To arms !), iv. 19, xx. 16 marg., xlix. 2. See the note, p. 343.
- astonied (amazed : Lat. attonitus), xiv. 9.
- attire (head-band), ii. 32. See p. 339.
- brass (bronze or copper), vi. 28, xv. 12 al. So always in AV., RV. Aldis Wright cites from Holland's Pliny the expression 'mines of brass.'
- brazen (made of bronze or copper), i. 18, xv. 20, lii. 20.
- buckler (a small shield with a knob ; Fr. bouclier, a shield with a knob or boucle), xlvi. 3.
- cankerworm (a caterpillar that eats away buds and leaves), li. 14, 27.

<sup>a</sup> For further particulars respecting the following words, see Aldis Wright's Bible Word-Book (ed. 2, 1884), Hastings' Dict. of the Bible, s.vv., and Murray's English Dictionary. Some of them, if they did not seem likely to mislead, or could be explained by a footnote, have been retained in the present volume.

372 ARCHAISMS IN THE REVISED

chapter (the capital of a column), lii. 22.

cieled (panelled), xxii. 14. Cf. the note, p. 364.

convenient (suitable [Heb. right] : not, as now, adapted to one's comfort, easily managed), xl. 4, 5. Cf. in AV. Rom. i. 28, Eph. v. 4, Philem. 8 (RV. in all 'be-fitting').

cunning (skilful ; properly pres. partic. of A.S. cunnan, to know), ix. 17, x. 9. So often in AV., RV., of technical skill, e.g. Gen. xxv. 27, Ex. xxvi. 1, xxxi. 4 (= skilfully made), 1 Sam. xvi. 16.

dote, to (to be foolish), l. 36. Cf. 1 Tim. vi. 4 AV. With 'dote upon' we are more familiar : cf. Ez. xxiii. 5, 7, 9, etc. ; and above, iv. 30.

estate (order or rank in a community), x. 7.

fan, to (to winnow), iv. 11, xv. 7, li. 2.

fan (winnowing-fan), xv. 7. Cf. Matt. iii. 12.

fenced (i.e. defenced : fortified), v. 17, xv. 20.

grief (bodily ailment), x. 19 (Heb. sickness ; in vi. 7 'grief' of AV. is changed to 'sickness'). 'Grief' is from

Lat. gravis; and was not formerly, as now, restricted to mental distress, but denoted both bodily ailments and physical pain. Thus Shakespeare speaks of 'the grief of a wound' (1 Henry IV., v. 1. 134); another old writer (1544) mentions 'the grief which the patient feeleth in his back'; and a third (1640) describes a certain oil as 'very comfortable in all cold griefes of the joyntes.' Cf. 'grief' for the Heb. 'לָנָה 'sickness' in Isa. liii. 3, 4, and 'put to grief' for the cognate verb, 'made sick,' in v. 10.

grieved (pained, hurt), v. 3. Cf. Woodall (1612), cited by Murray, 'use wine and honey to foment the grieved part.' The verb 'grieved' in Gen. xlix. 23 has the same sense.

grievous (of persons, burdensome, troublesome), vi. 28 (cf. 2 Cor. xii. 14 AV.[RV. 'be a burden to']; Udall (1548), 'ye shall be grievous to no man with begging'; and Hakluyt (1600), 'I do intreat you all to forgive me in whatsoever I have been grievous unto you'); (of things, severe, painful), x. 19, xiv. 17, xxx. 12 (Heb., in all, made sick); xvi. 4 ('grievous deaths,' Heb. 'deaths of sicknesses').<sup>a</sup>

lye (alkalized water, used for washing), ii. 22.

mount (siege-mound), xxxii. 24, xxxiii. 4.

mourn, to (to moan, not to 'sorrow'), xlvi. 31. So Isa. xxxviii. 14, lix. 11, Ez. vii. 16, Nah. ii. 7.

plead, to (to argue or contend, as in a law-suit or controversy ; not, as now, to entreat), ii. 9, 29, xii. 1, xxv. 31, xxx. 13, l. 34, li. 36. So always in AV., RV. : see the note, p. 336 f.

pleasant (a stronger word formerly than now, 'pleasing' rather than 'pleasant' <sup>a</sup> : often for Heb. words meaning 'desirable'), iii. 19 (Heb. 'desirable'), xii. 10 (do.), xxv. 34 (do. ; so Hos. xiii. 15), xxxi. 20 (Heb. 'delightful' ; cf. Isa. v. 7 for the same Heb.). See also Isa. liv. 12, Nah. ii. 9.

refrain, to (to hold back. restrain ; now used only intransitively), xiv. 10, xxxi. 16. So Prov. i. 15, Ps. cxix. 101, 1 Pet. iii. 10 al.

reins (kidneys ; Lat. renes), xi. 20 (see the note), xii. 2, xvii. 10, xx. 12.

repent me (the verb construed reflexively), viii. 6, xxvi. 3, 13, xlii. 10. So Judg. xxi. 15 al.

<sup>a</sup> I am indebted to Dr. Hastings for the following quotations supporting this statement : Erasmus, Expositio of the Commune Credo (1533), p. 108b, 'to offer to God a more pleasaunte sacrifice and oblation' ; Expositions (Parker Soc.), p. 194, 'because we keep his commandments and do the things which are pleasant in his sight.'

replenish, to (to fill, not, as now, to fill again; Fr. remplir), xxxi. 25. The Heb. is the ordinary word for to 'fill.' So Gen. i. 28, ix. 1; cf. in the Prayer-Book, 'and so replenish him with the grace of thy Holy Spirit,' etc., and 'replenish them with the truth of thy doctrine.'<sup>a</sup> serve oneself of, to (to employ as servant, use the services of), xxv. 14 (see note), xxvii. 7, xxx. 8, xxxiv. 9, 10.

shew, to (to declare to, tell, not, as now, to cause to see) xvi. 10, xxxiii. 3, xlii. 3, li. 31. An old sense of 'shew,' often found in both AV. and RV. where the Heb. (or Greek) is an ordinary word for 'tell' or 'declare': e.g. Gen. xli. 25 AV. (RV., 'declared unto'), Ex. xiii. 8 AV. (RV. 'tell'), 1 Sam. viii. 9 AV., RV., xi. 9 AV. (RV. 'told'), xxii. 21 AV. (RV. 'told'), Job xi. 6 AV., RV., Ps. cxi. 6 AV., RV., etc.; Matt. xi. 4 AV., John xvi. 13 AV., etc. It also occurs frequently in the PB. Version of the Psalms: see the writer's Parallel Psalter, p. 481.

sore (severe; A.S. sár, painful: as adv. severely, Germ. sehr, in the more general sense of 'greatly,' 'very'): as adj. lii. 7; as adv. xiii. 17, xxii. 10, l. 12. So often in AV., Shakespeare, etc.

straiten, to, straitness (to narrow, narrowness; Lat. strictus), xix. 9 (fig. closeness, to hold close, in a siege). Cf. 2 Kings vi. 1; Matt. vii. 13 AV.

-trange (foreign; Lat. extraneus), ii. 21, v. 19, viii. 19. This is often (but not always) the sense of 'strange' and 'stranger' in both AV. and RV.; e.g. in the expressions 'strange god,' Gen. xxxv. 2, 4, 1 Sam. vii. 3, <sup>a</sup> Aldis Wright quotes from North's Plutarch the statement that Alexander, when he founded Alexandria, determined to 'replenish' it with Greek settlers.

Ps. lxxx. 9*b*, and 'strange women or wives,' 1 Kings xi. 1, Ezr. x. 2 al. See D.B. s.v. ; or the writer's note on Mal. ii. 11 in the Century Bible. The retention of these words in such cases is often unfortunate; as it has the effect of concealing from a modern reader that what is referred to is not Israelitish, but foreign.<sup>a</sup>

tell, to (to count), xxxiii. 13. Cf. Gen. xv. 5, 1 Kings viii. 5, Ps. xxii. 17, etc.

turned, to be (not in a passive, but in a neuter sense, to turn), xxxi. 18, xxxiv. 15 (see the note, p. 366).

usury (interest generally; not, as now, excessive interest), xv. 10.

vain (empty, in a fig. sense: Heb. lit. a breath), ii. 5, xxiii. 16, vanity (emptiness, in a fig. sense), ii. 5, viii. 19, x. 3, 8, 15 (=li. 18), xvi. 19 (Heb., in all, lit. a breath); xviii. 15 - (Heb. lit. unreality); li. 58 (Heb. lit. emptiness).

vile (common: see the note, p. 362), xv. 19.

to wit (*to know, videlicet; infin. of 'I wot': see Hastings, D.B. iv. 931*b), xxv. 18, xxxiv. 9. So 1 Kings ii. 32 al.

Woe is me! (i.e. to me, 'me' being a dative), iv. 31, xlv. 3.

<sup>a</sup> In other passages, however, as Jer. ii. 25, iii. 13, v. 19 ('strangers'), xxx. 8, li. 51, Num. xviii. 4, 7, Deut. xxxii. 16, Ps. xlv. 20, lxxx. 9*a*, 'strange' (or 'stranger'), in the sense of unauthorized to be in the place or position referred to, outsider or outsider (but not definitely 'foreign'), is the correct rendering of the Hebrew.

THE HIGHER CRITICISM : THREE PAPERS.

By S. R. DRIVER, D.D., and A. F. KIRKPATRICK D.D.

Paper Covers, 1s. Net.

“ These are courageous and timely words of warning. In a third paper on the permanent value of the Old Testament Dr. Driver writes that the Old Testament Scriptures ‘ depict under majestic and vivid anthropomorphic imagery the spiritual character and attributes of God. They contain a wonderful manifestation of His grace and love, and of the working of His Spirit upon the soul of man. They form a great and indispensable preparation for the coming of Christ.’ We commend these words to those Christians who imagine that criticism must be irreligious.”—Guardian.

“ The issue of the essays in this convenient shape should do much to remove widespread misconceptions as to what the Higher Criticism really is and enforce its claims as a legitimate and enlightening exercise of judgment upon problems, not of religion, but of literary history.”—Scotsman.

“ As the names of the authors would lead one to expect, the papers present a lucid and sober statement of the case that ought to influence the most prejudiced reader.”—Christian World.

“ They are able, clear, and reverent presentations of the case on behalf of a sound criticism, and they should be exceedingly helpful to minds which have been disturbed by controversial misstatements or exaggerations. There is an excellent preface by Professor Driver, in which he makes the meaning of the phrase ‘ Higher Criticism ’ so clear, and distinguishes it so carefully from textual criticism on the one hand and historical criticism on the other, that one would hope he has done something to deliver the public from the tiresome verbal puerilities on this topic which still frequently appear in print.”—Glasgow Herald.
